THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, April 4th, 1863.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

THE CONCERT OF THE QUINCY BRASS BAND, at the Town Hall, on Fast Day evening—was a matter of course—drew a large audience. Every thing was in good taste. The Band, in their new uniform, made a fine appearance, and discoursed soul stirring music, which fell most melodiously on the ear. The programme embraced some of the finest pieces, which were all admirably executed. The vocalists, too, were in fine voice, and added another feature of attraction to the evening's entertainment. The next scene, was the PRESENTATION OF A SWORD.

Wynnan Abercrombie, Esq. here came forward, in behalf of the friends of Lieutenant Horace A. Perry, and after introducing the subject with the following neat and appropriate speech, presented him with a splendid sword, sash and belt, as a testimony of their respect for the man and the soldier.

My Young Friend:—It gives me great pleasure to meet you this evening on this happy occasion.

Allow me to be a little personal, and say that your friends saw with pride while you were serving as a private in Camp, at Readville—that you had enlisted in the service of your Country with the determination to do your duty, in whatever position you might be placed. Permit me briefly to review the checkered scenes through which you have passed, and see if your friends here are not as well satisfied as I am, that the gift we propose this evening, is not well deserved.

Before leaving the State you was promoted to the position of a Corporal, and soon after arriving at Poolesville you was promoted to a Sergeant. Soon, we find you engaged in battle at Ball's Bluff, where our forces were repulsed; you were taken prisoner, marched to Manassas, thence taken by cars to Richmond, where you lay four long months in prison. Then the joyful news came that you was to be exchanged; and soon I had the pleasure of taking you by the hand and welcoming you home, and among your friends again.

You remained with us but a short time, for as soon as you regained your health, you joined your Regiment and in time to commence what is termed the Peninsula Campaign. There you were engaged in the battle at Fair Oaks, and in the Seven Days Battle; after which we find you at Harrison Landing.

In a short time you was ordered to the vicinity of Washington, and again we find you engaged in what is called the second battle of Bull Run. We next find you passing through Poolesville, and in a few days we find you engaged in that desperate battle of Antietam. We now find that you passed through Harper's Ferry, and down through Virginia to Falmouth; with a small number of your Regiment you crossed the Rappahannock in boats before the bridges were built, under a brisk fire from the sharpshooters of the enemy; and in Frederickburg you received the wound that came very near proving fatal. You was carried back to Falmouth, where you laid six days in the hospital; then you were taken to Washington where you so far recovered as to be able to return to your home.

And we now find you with a Lieutenant's commission in your pocket, not obtained by wealth, or through the influence of friends, but conferred for meritorious conduct.

Your friends learning that you was soon again to return to your Regiment, felt that they could not let the opportunity pass without testifying in some manner their high appreciation of your services; with their means this sword, sash and belt have been purchased. I now have the pleasure of presenting them to you. Please accept them, sir. Your friends feeling satisfied that you will wear them as honorably as you have carried the musket.

TO WHICH THE LIEUTENANT RESPONDED.
Sir: I accept this generous gift in the spirit in which it is given; language fails me when I undertake to express my feelings. I thank you and my friends for their many acts of kindness, but particularly for this. All I can say is, that should I again be called into action, I shall try the quality of this steel. Again thanking you all, I must say, that my actions must speak for me in place of words.

At the conclusion of this ceremony, the Ball was put in motion, which was kept up by the devotees of this graceful accomplishment, until chancelier proclaimed the birth of another day. The Band took all hearts captive on this occasion, and gathered fresh laurels as a musical corps.

DIVIDENDS. Mount Wollaston and Quincy Stone Docks, of this town, have declared dividends of three per cent, payable on and after Monday next, April 6th.

ANOTHER CHANCE OFFERED. The friends of Capt. Spear's Company (D, 33rd Mass.) will undoubtedly be pleased to learn that a box will leave the store of Messrs. Abercrombie & Bent on Thursday next. Those wishing to send packages to their friends should send them to the store previous to that time.

One of our friends found a valuable prize, on Quincy Avenue, near Mr. Pantons, on April Fool's morning—the contents was rich, and was quickly stowed away in his choice box.

LUNCH. There will be a free lunch at the Mariposa Saloon this evening.

Lieutenant Obed F. Allen.

The following letter, and accompanying resolutions, were received by the parents of this young soldier, (residents of this town) who died at New Orleans, March 21, 1863, aged nineteen years, eleven months and twenty-one days.

CAMP FARR, BAYOU GENTILLY, NEW ORLEANS, (LA.) MAR. 21, 1863.
Mr. and Mrs. Obed Allen: To communicate joyful news of friends to their friends is ever a pleasing task; but this we are not always permitted to do; would that I could so write that my letter might receive such a welcome; but full well I know it must bear only a message of sorrow.

Your son Obed, of Company G, 42d Regiment, Massachusetts Volunteers, entered the hospital, February 28th, and departed this life, March 21st. He suffered much from his disease, which he bore with manly fortitude—though much of the time he was delirious—but occasionally had lucid moments. He seemed to have such a strong constitution, that we could but hope for his recovery; but God ordered otherwise, and he has passed from the army of time to that of eternity. His last earthly march is o'er, and he has entered that land, where the "weary are at rest and the wicked cease from troubling."

During his sickness, he had every comfort that could be given in a camp hospital—constant care and good nursing. All was done to stay the work of death that mortals could do—but all in vain—his days were numbered, and the lamp of mortal life ceased to burn. I think I can truly say that a noble young man has passed from us. I have noticed him as he marched in days of health and strength with his soldierly bearing among his comrades, little thought disease was so soon to lay him low. I have noticed him as he gave good heed to the word of preached truth—and shall never forget the smile with which he welcomed me to his sick couch; and in every place I found him a true man. It must be terrible to parents to have their children die away from home, where they cannot minister to their last want, nor listen to their dying words; and I ever feel that they should have the sympathy of mortals. You have my sympathy—the sympathy of the Company and Regiment, to which your son belonged; we all feel to weep with you in this, your day of trouble. May God bless you, and sanctify to you this dispensation of his providence.

He has died in a noble work; his life has not been thrown away; but was given to as glorious a cause as mortals are permitted to engage in; already he is numbered with that army of martyrs whose call to all the living of our beloved land is to carry forward the banner of our country to victory. Every father and mother has a right to feel proud of a son that joins in this work; and if they fall by the devastating hand of disease or battle, to feel that they have made a sacrifice that God and humanity will remember.

The Company to which your son belonged are making arrangements to have his body sent home, and are in hopes to have it go by the Steamer McCallin, which leaves this afternoon. Receive the casket that your treasure once animated; lay it down in a soldier's grave; lean on Jesus' arm, and he will give you rest, and enable you in your affliction, to work an exceeding, even an eternal weight of glory. Very truly yours,
GEORGE J. SANGER,
Chaplain 42d Reg. Mass. Volunteers.

PREMABLE AND RESOLUTIONS.
Camp Farr, March 21st, 1863.

At a call of Company G, 42d Mass. Vol. Militia, March 21st, 1863, the following Preamble and Resolutions were read by the Committee and unanimously adopted:

Whereas, It has pleased our Heavenly Father, to call to Himself from our midst our much esteemed friend and fellow soldier, Obed F. Allen, therefore

Resolved, That while we can but regret in his loss to us, we have the high assurance that he has but left a troubled world and found a happy home, far from care and sorrow, where all is peace.

Resolved, That we, his fellow soldiers, deeply sympathize with you, his parents, sister and brothers in your bereavement. During his life with us, by his many acts of kindness, and his ever happy smile, he endeared all to him; and as friends, we can, with you, lift together our voices to Him who has claimed him, and ask for a final home with him above.

HENRY O. STUDELEY,
THOMAS FIELD,
GEORGE W. GRIGGS, } Committee.
GILBERT F. BLAISDELL,
JOHN C. BISHOP.

"The McClellan did not receive the remains as intimated above; they were placed on board the New Brunswick, Captain Winchester, bound for New York—who, after he had cleared the mainland, was, by the urgent request of a large number of his passengers, reluctantly compelled to consign them to the deep."

RECIPROCITY. As the American ship George Griswold, loaded with food contributed in this country for the starving Lancashire operatives, was going into the port of Liverpool the English steamer Dolphin was leaving with a cargo of arms and ammunition for the rebels, via Nassau.

AMUSEMENT. Prof. Andrus, the renowned exhibitor, gives two of his Popular Entertainments at the Town Hall, this afternoon and evening, commencing at 3 and 7 1/2 o'clock. Go and see him and you will get your money's worth. See advertisement in another column.

Free Bridges.

To the Patrons of the Neponset and Braintree Bridges.

The Trustees respectfully represent, that the Act reported upon the petition has passed the Legislature, requiring the sum of Fifteen Thousand dollars to be raised from tolls or otherwise, in aid of the towns, for the future support of the bridges.

The franchises of the Corporations were extinguished more than four years since, by purchase. As the Neponset Bridge Corporation was then receiving an annual six per cent. income on $35,000 over and above all repairs and expenses, the accumulation from tolls, since the purchase, has been rapid.

These tolls have sufficed to reimburse the original purchase money, so far as it was required to be refunded, to rebuild the Braintree Bridge, put the Neponset Bridge in an excellent state of repair, and also accumulate a fund for future repairs and maintenance, already amounting to $7,875 53—(March 31, 1863).

The Trustees ask your co-operation in an effort to raise the balance required, $7,124 47 by subscription.

They adopt this course, because they think the time has arrived for making these important avenues free from tolls, and they are reluctant to resume again the taking of tolls on the Braintree Turnpike. The tax payers to whose liberality this appeal is made, should be reminded that the object has been, to aid the towns, in relieving them from burdens, which under other circumstances, might have fallen upon the citizens by taxation.

The Commissioners in aid of this subscription offer to contribute the toll house estate, at Neponset, valued at $1500, in case, the whole amount required is contributed by subscription before June 1st next—

Amount now to be raised $7,124 47
Toll House Estate, 1500 00

Amount thus required will be $5624 47

(From the Boston Journal)
Letter from the Mass. 39th.

POOLESVILLE, Md., Mar. 19, 1863.

We are still encamped at Poolesville, Md., about five miles from the Potomac. The health of the regiment is good. We are doing picket and provost duty, and, when suitable weather, perfecting ourselves in discipline and drill. One of those little things which help to break the monotony of a camp life transpired this morning. The line officers presented Major Geo. Monk, of Quincy, with a German silver bugle. Lieut. Charles L. Porter, also of Quincy, made the presentation, in a very neat speech. Our Colonel is looking after the welfare of the men. We are now digging wells in the rear of our camp, to give us a better supply of water, which we are now obliged to carry a long distance. Nothing of interest has occurred in this vicinity, except the arrest of parties who are detected in aiding and assisting soldiers connected with the rebel army and their cause.

ANOTHER FAST DAY. The President, in compliance with the request of the Senate, has designated Thursday, the 30th of April, as a day of national humiliation, fasting and prayer, and concludes his proclamation as follows:

"Let us, then, rest humbly in the hope authorized by the Divine teachings, that the united cry of the nation will be heard on high, and answered with blessings no less than the pardon of our national sins, and the restoration of our now divided and suffering country to its former happy condition of unity and peace."

We would call attention to the card of Messrs. S. M. Ward & Co., 208 Broadway, N. Y., in another column. They offer great inducements; their stock is very large and varied; they warrant all goods to be as represented, or the money will be refunded. They have the reputation of being honorable business men, and from personal dealings with them we can verify the fact; and we would, therefore, recommend such of our readers who may want anything in the Jewelry or Gold Pen and Pencil line, or would like to secure an Agency from them, to apply at once.—Their arrangements are such that you can transact business with them through the mail as well as if you gave them a personal call.—

It is now asserted that there are no counterfeits on the postal currency, but the initials on the corner of a part of them which have made them suspicious, are only the private mark of a printing house that was employed to strike off a part of them.

The amount of northern property destroyed at sea by the rebel cruisers and privateers Alabama, Florida, Retribution, Sumter, Jeff. Davis, &c., is estimated at from ten to fifteen millions of dollars.

The ice cutters at Grindewald in Switzerland, recently came upon an opening in the ice which led to a magnificent natural grotto one hundred and sixty feet long, eighty feet wide and sixty-five high. The grotto has since been lit up with torches and illuminated with Bengal fire, and the light reflected from the crystal walls produced a dazzling effect.

A schooner 33 years old, has just been repaired and made serviceable at Plymouth, Mass., where the vessel was built in the spring of the year 1830, of green pitch pine timber, which was cut in the winter, only a few weeks before.

Large numbers of refugees and contrabands are still coming in, in great numbers, within the Federal lines at Murfreesboro', Tenn.

The California flood of January, 1862, was the highest known in the State for centuries. This is proved by the fact that Indian mounds of great depth, bearing unmistakable evidence of great antiquity in the large oaks growing upon them, were almost entirely carried away, trees and all.

London papers complain of the great increase of bankruptcy in England. Nine thousand this year against about two thousand in former years. The increase is attributed to the American War.

The daily expenditures of the government from the present time till the close of the financial year, in June, will, it is computed, average more than two millions.

Madame Harriet A. McLaughlin, aged eleven years, married in Chicago about a month since, petitions for a divorce from her husband. Who says this is not a wonderfully progressive age!

RARE AND RICH ENTERTAINMENT.

The Art Exhibition and Lecture advertised to come off in the Town Hall on Tuesday, April 14th, will doubtless afford our citizens one of the richest and rarest entertainments. The paintings are said to be exquisitely beautiful and brilliant, and the lecture in the evening will abound with graphic descriptions of adventures among the loftiest mountains and volcanoes in South America.

Rev. Mr. Twing preaches to-morrow morning on Sabbath Schools a blessing to mankind. In the afternoon the Thirty first anniversary of the Sabbath School will take place. Reports, brief addresses, singing by the children and other interesting exercises. The public are invited.

Purify, purify, purify the blood with AYER'S SASSAPARILLA, and the humors, derangements and distempers which pervade the system at this season will disappear. We have tried it and speak with knowledge.

Poetry.

For the Patriot
The Dead

They are gone away from their earthly homes,
To the angel realms of bliss,
The immortal now in the spirit world,
While the mortal rests in this.

Their souls now roam in their heavenly home,
Secure from all earthly pain,
And I humbly pray in his own good time,
That we may meet them again.

Slowly yet surely each one passed away,
Passed o'er dread Lethe's dark shore,
Passed o'er to unending life and joy,
To sorrow and sin no more.

They have left a void, which we cannot fill
With solace of mortal kind;
But the spirit of Christ, their master, can Relieve each sorrowing mind.

Then let us each one in this earthly vale,
This vale both of woe and tears;
Live by bright religion's light,
Through our passing few short years.

Then shall we pass to those heavenly shores,
From all pain and sorrow free,
To pass the future in God's presence
Throughout long Eternity.

Then can we say with spirit calm,
"O Death where is thy sting?"
And "Grave," thou entrance to our God,
"What victory canst thou bring?" SLADE.

Parting of the Widow's Son.

Yon slender boy his bark hath launched
On life's deceitful tide;
His balmy years of childhood o'er,
He goes without a guide.
Amid the stir and strife of men
His devious course to run,
The tempter and the snare to hide—
God bless the widow's son.

He turned from the pleasant door,
And from the garden fair,
Where with his little spide he wrought
Beneath a mother's care;
He beats his head like manhood high,
Yet tears his course will run,
When on his stranger bed he rests—
God bless the widow's son.

Ye say he goeth forth alone,
To dare the eventful field—
No, no! a spell is round him thrown—
More firm than diamond shield—
A mournful mother's fervent prayer!
So, till his life is done,
Till time, and toil, and change are o'er—
God bless the widow's son.

Waiting in Faith.

She must be weary waiting thus,
While the years of her life-time come and go;
And keeping back from her lips the cry
She has learned to hush in the depths below.

And sick of wearing that placid smile,
While her soul in shadow is left to grope,
Where the only ray that cheers it seems Like the light of an almost hopeless hope.

It must be hard, when her heart would beat,
To keep it patient, and still, and dumb;
But she lives and waits in the perfect faith,
That she shall be loved when her time has come.

That another soul is alone like hers,
In the world below, or the world above,
And that in a day, afar or near,
They shall know each other, and they shall love.

So she buries deep in her soul its hope,
Knowing the seed in the furrow cast
Will germinate in the dark the strength
That sets it free from the dark at last.

And while the waves of her being flow
Calmly and evenly on above,
The upward current that sweeps below,
Sets in the ward the open sea of love.

And she goes with a smiling lip and cheek,
And a heart that is patient, and still, and dumb;
For she lives and waits in the perfect faith,
That she shall be loved when her time has come.

Anecdotes.

Once upon a time, on a Sunday afternoon,
A lad was so lazy in his motions that he did not get to the church door till the congregation
was coming out, and he said to the first man
he met,

"What is it all done?"
"No," said the man, "it's all said, but I'm thinking it will be a long time before it is all done."

Pat was hungry, and got out of the cars for refreshments. The cars very thoughtlessly went on. Ye spalpeen! he cried, starting on a run and shaking his fist as he flew after them.
Stop there, ye old stame wagen, ye mur-ther stame engine—ye've got a passenger aboard that's left behind!

A musician, whose nose had become distinctly colored with the red wine he was wont to imbibe, said one day to his little son at table:
"You must eat bread, boy; bread makes your cheeks red. The little fellow replied:
"Father, what lots of bread you must have snuffed up!"

The ALL SUFFICIENT THREE.

The Great "American Remedies,"
Known as "Helmhold's"

GENUINE PREPARATIONS, VIZ.:
HELMHOLD'S EXTRACT "BUCHU,"
SARSAPARILLA,
IMPROVED ROSE WASH.

HELMHOLD'S

GENUINE PREPARATION,

"HIGHLY CONCENTRATED"
COMPOUND
Fluid Extract Buchu,

A Positive and Specific Remedy
For Diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel and Dropsical Swellings.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion,
and excites the ABSORBENTS into healthful action, by which the VATERY OR CAL-CULUS deposits, and all UNDESIRABLE ENLARGEMENTS are reduced, as well as
pain and inflammation, and is good for MEN, WOMEN, OR CHILDREN.

HELMHOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU
FOR WEAKNESSES
Arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation,
Early Indiscretion, or Abuse.

ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS:
Indisposition to Exer- Loss of Power,
cise, Difficulty of Breathing,
Dizziness of the Head,
Weak Nerves, Trembling of the Skin,
Horror of Disease, Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision, Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Body,
The Muscular System, Eruption of the Face,
Hot Hands, Pallid Countenance.

These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which
this medicine invariably removes soon follow:
IMPOTENCY, FERTILITY, EPILEPTIC
FITS.

In one of these the patient may expire. Who can say that they are not frequently followed by
those "direful diseases,"

Insanity and Consumption.

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering,
but none will confess. The records of the insane Asylum and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion. The constitution, once affected with Organic Weakness, requires the aid of medicine
to strengthen and invigorate the system, and HELMHOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably
does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females, Females, Females,
Old or young, single, married, or contemplating
Marriage—in many affections peculiar to Females the Extract Buchu is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of the
customary Evacuations, Ulcerated or Scirrhous
state of the Uterus, Leucorrhoea, or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex,
whether arising from Indiscretion, Habits of Dissipation, or to the Decline or Change of Life.

No family should be without it.
Take no Balsam, Mercury, or Unpleasant Medicine for Pleasants and Dangerous Diseases.

CURES SECRET DISEASES

In all their stages; at little expense; little or
no change of diet; no inconvenience, and no ex-posure. It cures frequent discharges, and gives strength to Urinate, thereby removing obstructions, preventing and curing Strictures of the Urethra, allaying pain and inflammation, so frequent in this class of diseases, and expelling
POISONS, DISEASED, AND WORN-OUT MATTER.

Thousands upon Thousands who have been the victim of Quacks, and who have paid Heavy Fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the Poison has, by the use of Powerful Astringents, been dried up in the system, to break out in aggravated form, and
perhaps after marriage.

Use Helmhold's Extract Buchu
For all Affections and Diseases of
THE URINARY ORGANS.

Whether existing in Male or Female, from whatever cause originating, and no matter of how long standing.

BLOOD! BLOOD! BLOOD!
Helmhold's Highly Concentrated Compound

Fluid Extract Sarsaparilla Syphilis

This is an affection of the Blood, and attacks
the Sexual Organs, Linings of the Nose, Ears, Throat, Windpipe, and other Mucous Surfaces,
making its appearance in the form of Ulcers, Helmhold's Extract Sarsaparilla purifies the Blood, and removes all Scaly Eruptions of the Skin, giving to the Complexion a Clear and Healthy color. It is prepared expressly for this class of complaints, its Blood-Purifying Properties are preserved in a greater extent than any other preparation of Sarsaparilla.

Nature, and as an injection in Diseases of the Urinary Organs, arising from habits of dissipation, and in connection with the Extracts Buchu
and Sarsaparilla, in such diseases as recommended.

TOWN MEETING. At the meeting held in this town on Monday last, for the purpose of voting on the Amendment to the Constitution, the vote stood—Yes 33; No 31.

SPRING ARRANGEMENT of the Quincy Horse Railroad; this takes place on Monday next; see advertisement in another column. The Company have been highly favored this winter; there have been but few storms to impede their progress; what snow has fell they have readily cut through, and come up in good time. This road has been open for public travel about one year, and has been eminently successful. The opening season promises even better than the last. The public begin to appreciate its benefits; its excellent management—attentive and gentlemanly Conductors, and numerous accommodations, has made it a favorite medium of conveyance with many of our citizens, in their journeys to and from Boston.

A VISIT. Joseph T. French, of this town, a member of Captain Spear's Company, and of the 33rd Regiment, paid us a flying visit during the week; his furlough was only for a few days; consequently, his call was brief, and words chosen. He looked remarkably well, and was in excellent health. He has seen some service, and tried the soil of Virginia. The former he likes, but thinks the roads dreadful hard to travel.

A GOOD OPPORTUNITY. We are pleased to be able to inform our citizens that they can send packages or parcels to their friends in the hospitals or camps at New Orleans, free of expense, by sending the same to Barque Nonantum, Tabor's wharf, Charlestown, on Monday next, April 13th, in care of Mrs. Guy M. Edwards, who will be accountable for their correct delivery. We are also at liberty to say that any small parcels left at the residence of Dr. Edwards, in this town, on Monday, will be delivered.

THE DORCHESTER POISONING CASE. The examination of Benj. Hamblen of Dorchester, on the charge of poisoning his wife, was commenced at Milton Lower Mills, Wednesday, before Trial Justice C. M. S. Churchill. The main facts developed thus far are embraced in the following summary. We quote from the Journal's report: Mrs. Elizabeth Park, who was the mother of the deceased wife of the accused, in her testimony, said that she was present at Hamblen's house on the day his wife died; that Hamblen gave her some pills, instructing her to give them to his wife; the deceased took the pills, and commenced vomiting when she had taken the last one; afterward the deceased said to her mother that she had taken four more of the pills and that Benjamin (her husband) had given them to her; subsequently she complained of being unwell, went into spasms, and died in a few hours. The witness also alluded to times when the deceased and her husband had not lived happily together, and that at one time they were separated from each other.

Dr. Miller of Dorchester, who attended the deceased, described her symptoms prior to her death, and was of the opinion that she died from the effect of poison; and Mr. Woods who keeps a drug store at 351 Federal street, Boston, thought the accused resembled a person who bought some strychnine at his place, for the alleged purpose of killing a dog in South Boston, and gave the name of J. P. Drew. Another important witness in the case was Dr. Hayer, State Assayer, who had examined the contents of the stomach of deceased and discovered the presence of strychnine in such a quantity as to cause death, in his opinion; the pills that seemed to contain this poison, Dr. Hayer thought were prepared by a person without experience in the business.

The English papers state that the royal plate on the Prince of Wales' marriage breakfast table was of the value of ten millions of dollars.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, APRIL 9, 1863.

General Hooker's army on the Rappahannock remains quiet. Jacksonville, Florida, the Eden of that State, has been evacuated and burnt by our troops; the matter needs investigating. No decisive news yet from the Mississippi. The capture of the Federal gunboat, Diana, by the rebels above New Orleans, is reported. Surely our navy on the Mississippi is unfortunate. We have lost by hook or crook, the Harriet Lane, Kinsman, Indianola and Mississippi; many of them first class steamers. On the 30th ultimo, a rebel attack was made upon Little Washington, North Carolina; and the latest accounts, represent General Foster, with a force of two thousand men, surrounded by large rebel forces—his communication cut off, and his gallant army in a critical situation. These most unwelcome tidings produce much anxiety here this evening.

English neutrality proves a humbug. England never yet treated any nation with fairness. She is a deadly foe to the loyal States, and is bent upon the destruction of our Union. In fact, she is a party to our civil war between the South—their covert friend, and our open enemy. Without any opposition by the British Government, piratical cruisers are fitted out to prey upon our commerce. The Alabama is already supposed to have destroyed a hundred million of dollars; and the pirate Florida is likely to do more mischief than Captain Semmes. Unless these things are stopped, we shall have to abandon all commerce upon the high seas, or take the offensive with Britain; a war seems inevitable, and the next intelligence may be the dismissal of Lord Lyons at Washington and a demand of Mr. Adams for his passports at London. A correspondent from England, thus writes:

"The infamy of this people makes my blood boil. You are lost unless you convert the machinations and hostilities of John Bull."

How shall we do it unless we declare war with that treacherous nation? The destruction of our commerce is but the beginning of English hostility. Mr. Adams, our minister, has from time to time protested against the departure of piratical cruisers from British ports, and the Ministry coolly tells him that the evidence did not warrant their detention. This is a casus belli and our shrewd merchants here and in New York look upon war with England as inevitable, and are preparing for it. To allow her to continue her villainous depredations upon our commerce without retaliation cannot be endured much longer.

Neponset and Braintree Bridges.

The whole amount required to be raised before June 1st, in order to make these bridges free, and comply with the conditions set forth in the statement of the Trustees, as published in last week's paper, is $5624.47.

The Trustees respectfully acknowledge a subscription from the HON. JOSIAH QUINCY, of $300.00 in aid of this project.

His name was borne upon the petition for the charter dated January 21st, 1860 and he was one of the incorporators named in the act. Sixty-three years have passed away, and the name of this venerable man, the sole survivor on the roll of associates in the original enterprise, stands first upon the list to day, ready, now as ever, with liberal and generous subscription, to aid the endowments to public uses.

THE ST. PATRICK'S SUNDAY SCHOOL EXHIBITION, at the Town Hall, on Thursday evening, was every thing which the fondest anticipations of its friends could desire. As a literary soiree, it was equal to the best of such exhibitions. The scholars were perfect in their parts, and seemed inspired with the spirit of the authors. There was no rhetorical blunders, but a smooth and chaste declamation ran through the whole performance. The affair reflects much credit upon both actors and managers. The attraction drew a full house, and the repeated applause, which was elicited, showed the interest the audience took in the performances.

The exercises were not closed until near eleven o'clock, when the company separated, well pleased with the evening's entertainment.

PAINTINGS. We would call the attention of our readers to the large collection of Oil Paintings of South America, to be exhibited in the Town Hall, on Tuesday next. This is a rare opportunity and our citizens should not fail to improve the chance.

CORRESPONDENCE. We would inform friend "Adela" that we published some weeks since, articles from one of his company, giving in full the particulars of his voyage, capture &c., and for this reason think it unwise to re-publish them. Please to accept our thanks for your kind remembrance, and we hope to hear from you again.

LUNCH. There will be a free lunch at the Mariposa Saloon this evening.

NEAR FALMOUTH, VIRGINIA, }
MARCH 28th, 1863. }

Mrs. William F. Whitney—Dear Madam: I take the first leisure time since my return to notify you of the safe arrival of the boxes of estates and clothing presented to Company K by the Ladies' Soldiers' Aid Society, of which you are the President.

In behalf of the members of Company K, allow me to return our sincere thanks, not only for the very excellent dinner and bountiful supply of clothing, but more than all, for the kind remembrance which prompted the gift.

You can assure the ladies of Quincy, that this will not be forgotten; for of untold value to the soldier is the thought, that while he is suffering the hardships incident to active service in the field, kind friends at home are endeavoring to make his situation as comfortable as possible.

Hoping that this new token of your regard, will incite to deeds of valor under that noble flag we have followed with varying success for nearly two years,

I remain yours, very truly,
R. F. MESERVEY.

Definition of Copperhead.

The following definition of the word copperhead was received by one of our citizens, who has handed it to us with a request that it should be published.

Mr. — Dear Sir:—As you wished to know my idea of a copperhead, I will endeavor to give it in as few words as possible. The word copperhead was originally used to designate a venomous reptile. You will recollect the fable of the man who found the snake in a perishing condition, and having compassion on him took him to his bosom till he revived; when the ungrateful vermin stung his benefactor to death. That snake was undoubtedly a copperhead. A copperhead of the present time is one who in general outline has very much the resemblance of a man. He is one who is very willing to receive all the benefits of the government, and make all the money he can from it, and at the same time is doing all that he can to put it down. He will talk earnestly against the accused abolitionists, but has not a word to say against Jeff. Davis and his infernal crew of conspirators. When you hear of Federal defeats, you will hear him talk loud and long. But when there is a Federal victory he will not let you know that he has a tongue in his head. When gold goes up to one hundred and seventy he is as wide awake as you please, and will tell you that the credit of the government is no better than that of the Southern Confederacy; but when it falls twenty-five or thirty per cent, he is as silent as the grave. In fact he is at all times striving to do indirectly, what the rebels at the South are doing directly.

THE RANDOLPH TRANSCRIPT comes to us this week enlarged, and otherwise much improved. Our neighbor, in his last issue apprised us of this change; the increase of business, and the demand on his columns, he says, made this step necessary. We are glad to hear this; the prosperity of our friends is always a source of congratulation to us. Randolph it would seem is taking the right view of the subject, and finds it for her interest to patronize her own paper. Sooner or later this conviction will crowd itself upon every community. Reciprocity in trade is a truism generally admitted in the business world; but in the case of the village newspaper, it has a higher and nobler claim on the support of those for whose benefit it was established. We wish it success.

REMEDY FOR DIPHTHERIA. The following remedy for that terrible and prevalent disease, diphtheria, is said to be infallible in most cases: "Make two small bags that will reach from ear to ear, and fill them with ashes and salt; dip them in hot water, and wring them out so they will not drip, and apply them to the throat; cover up the whole with a flannel cloth, and change them as often as they become cool, until the throat becomes irritated, near blistering. For children, it is necessary to put flannel cloths between the ashes and the throat to prevent blistering. When the ashes have been on a sufficient time, take a wet flannel cloth and rub it with castile soap, until it is covered with a thick lather; dip it in hot water and apply it to the throat, and change as they cool; at the same time use a gargle made of one teaspoonful of cayenne pepper, one of salt, one of molasses, in a tumbler of hot water, and when cool, add one-fourth as much cider-vinegar, and gargle every fifteen minutes until the patient requires sleep. A gargle made of castile soap is good to be used part of the time."

NAVAL AFFAIRS. Overtures to raise the Monitor lately sunk off Cape Hatteras, have been made to the Government to parties in Washington. For the sum of seventy-five thousand dollars the contractors promise to float the ship, provided the Government ascertain its whereabouts and furnishes tugs for the purpose.

ATLANTIC TELEGRAPH. The subscription to the capital stock of the Atlantic Telegraph Company now exceeds £500,000 sterling, among the bankers and leading merchants of New York city, and additional subscriptions are being received daily. The amount already subscribed in that city and in London makes the success of the great enterprise next year beyond all reasonable doubt.

Gen. Howard stated in a public meeting in Washington, that the chaplaincy in the army had proved a failure.

STEAMSHIP NEW BRUNSWICK, AT SEA, }
MARCH 29, 1863. }

Dear Sir: It is with much regret I perform the duty of acquainting you with the following particulars:

Just as the New Brunswick was about to leave New Orleans, March 23d, Lieutenant A. E. Proctor, from a steamer along side, placed the accompanying documents in my hands, with a request that I should hand them over to Adams' Express Company on reaching New York. At the same time, the body of your son was placed on board the New Brunswick.

On Wednesday, the 25th ultimo, however, while running between the Tortugas and Key West, the weather being intensely hot, the progress of decomposition was so palpable, as to be perceptible throughout the vessel, to the serious inconvenience of the passengers and crew. As it would be impossible to reach New York with anything like a clean bill of health, under the circumstances, the passengers drew up a requisition to the Captain, asking him to make such disposition of the remains as would effectually remove the danger; whereupon, Captain Winchester, with great reluctance, yielded to the pressing necessity, and committed the body to the deep with all decency. Respectfully yours,

S. B. SLACK,
Correspondent of the New York Herald.

GODEY FOR APRIL opens rich; the story by Marion Harland, progresses, and increases in interest with each number. The contributions of other writers are excellent. The fashions have a spring look, and are presented in a manner peculiar to Mr. Godey—Spring—a beautiful line engraving—anticipates scenes which may be realized at some future day; spring-swallows have not yet made their appearance with us, and we shall not look for them, until Nature puts on more of her summer dress. Rain Imps is a happy conception of the artist—such agencies, employed by the clerk of the weather, accounts for the alternate smiles and tears with which we are visited at this season of the year.

Poetry.

For the Patriot.
Chevaliers.

BY F. M. ADLINGTON—WEYMOUTH.

The Southrons boast their origin,
And haughtily they claim
To be of chevaliers the kin,
And glory in the name,

Who were these doughty chevaliers,
Of whom they seem so proud;
First let me whisper in their ears,
Best keep it from the crowd.

Of hist'ry let us turn the page
Where truth the record reads,
And trace them to King Charles's age,
What were they—tyrant's fools

A despot's ever willing aid,
To crush their country down;
And in his bosom plant their blades,
To shield a traitor's crown.

Detested by their countrymen,
Outlawed and forced to fly,
Their sons are now what they were then,
Thus chief for chivalry.

Their chieftain met a traitor's death—
And Jeff on every tree
Conceals a halter—holds his breath,
And sighs perhaps for me.

Or worse if worse can be contrived,
If halter be denied,
To live as hated Arnold lived,
And die as Arnold died,

Rice Pudding Iced.

Into one pint of purest drink
Let one tea-cup of clear rice sink,
And boil till all the water's gone—
No matter where—stir with a spoon,
And deftly add of milk one quart,
Boil till it thickens as it ought,
Stirring it with the aforesaid spoon,
Till it is smooth, and white, and done.
Then add three eggs-yolks, beaten light,
One lemon's rind all grated right,
And of white sugar, well refined,
Eight spoons, by stirring, well combined,
And pour the mixture in a dish.
Of any size the cook may wish,
And let it stand, while with a fork
You beat the whites as light as cork—
The whites of these three eggs I mean—
And when they're beaten stiff and clean,
Add eight spoons full of sugar white,
In short a frolic to make it light;
In short a frolic you must make
Like that you put on wedding cake,
And on your pudding like a cover
Pour the sweet icing gently over.
In a cool oven do it brown,*
We think the pudding will go down.

*About as brown as is anetto,
Or as a very bright mulatto.

"Sweet is the sunshine after showers,"—
Tis somewhat odd the strain,
And sounds like rickety, too, to flowers
That do not bloom again.
For some, when once the hail-storm keen Comes pelting on the bed,
Though kindly nursed, are never seen
To raise their better'd head,
And some proportion to the hail Methinks the sun must keep,
Or smiles, at last, begin to fall,
In eyes that always weep.
Sunshine and showers are sweet in youth,
At least, so poets say;
But jaded souls, care-cold, in sooth,
Affect a steeper day.
For, ah! the warren of soul that dries
The sadder showers that fall,
And brightens up the tear, dim'd eyes,
Has vanish'd past recall.
And yet, in spite of all we learn
In life's soul grinding schools,
(God help us!—man is somewhat stern,)
We still are April fools.
For still we hope, mid morning's showers
A pleasant afternoon,
And dream, mid frosts, of May's warm flowers
And evening walks in June.

Anecdotes.

At a court martial, a young Irish officer,
when questioned whether he had not given the lie to a certain person, replied, No;
I only said that either he or the colonel had told a lie, and that I was sure it wasn't the colonel.

I think, wife, that you have a great many ways of calling me a fool.
I think, husband, that you have a great many ways of being one.

Children and fools, says the old adage, always tell the truth. Mother sent me, said a little girl to a neighbor, to ask you to come and take tea with her this evening.
Did she say at what time, my dear?
No, ma'am; she only said she would ask you, and then the thing would be off her mind; that was all she said!

Katy, have you laid the table cloth and plates, yet? An sure I have, meem—every thing but the eggs; an isn't that Biddy's work surely?

The peculiar taint or infection which we call SCROFULA lurks in the
constitutions of multitudes of men. It
either produces or is produced by an en-
feebled, vitiated state
of the blood, wherein
the system is incompetent to sustain the vital forces in their vigorous action, and
leaves the system to
fall into disorder and
decay. The scrofulous
contamination is variously caused by mercurial
disease, low living, disordered digestion from unhealthy food, impure air, filth and filthy
habits, the depressing vices, and, above all, by
the venereal infection. Whatever be its origin,
it is hereditary in the constitution, descending
from parents to children until the third and
fourth generation; indeed, it seems to be the
rod of him who says, "I will visit the iniquities
of the fathers upon their children." The disease which it originates takes various names
according to the organs it attacks. In the lungs, Scrofula produces tubercles, and finally Consumption; in the glands, swellings which suppurate and become enormous sores; in the stomach and bowels, derangements which produce indigestion, dyspepsia, and liver complaints; on the skin, eruptive and cutaneous
affections. These all having the same origin, requiring the same remedy, viz., purification and invigoration of the blood. Purify the blood,
and these dangerous distempers leave you.
With feeble food, or corrupted blood, you cannot have health; with that life the flesh is healthy, you cannot have scrofulous disease.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

is compounded from the most effectual antidotes that medical science has discovered for
this afflicting distemper, and for the cure of the disorders it entails. That it is far superior to any other remedy yet devised, is known by all
who have given it a trial. That it does combine virtues truly extraordinary in their effect
upon this class of complaints, is indisputably
proven by the great multitude of publicly known and remarkable cures it has made of the following diseases: King's Evil or Glandular Swellings, Tumors, Erys-sipelas, Pimples, Blotches and Sores, Erysipelas, Rose or St. Anthony's Fire, Salt
Rheum, Scald Head, Coughs from tu-
berculous deposit; in the lungs, White Swellings, Debility, Dropsy, Neuralgia,
Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Syphilis and Syphilitic Infections, Mercurial Diseases,
Female Weaknesses, and, indeed, the whole
series of complaints that arise from impurity
of the blood. Minute reports of individual
cures may be found in AYER'S AMERICAN
ALMANAC, which is furnished to the druggists
for gratuitous distribution, wherein may be learned the directions for its use, and some of
the remarkable cures which it has made when
all other remedies have failed to afford relief.
These cases are purposely taken from all sections of the country, in order that every reader
may have access to some one who can speak to
him of its benefits from personal experience.
Scrofula depresses the vital energies, and thus
leaves its victims far more subject to disease
and its fatal results than are healthy constitutions. Hence it tends to shorten, and does greatly shorten, the average duration of human
life. The vast importance of these considerations has led us to spend years in perfecting a remedy which is adequate to its cure. This we now offer to the public under the name of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which, if used as directed, will give vigor to the system, and thus possess of ingredients, some of which exceed the best of Sarsaparilla in alterative power. By
its aid you may protect yourself from the suffering and danger of these disorders. Purge out
the foul corruptions that rot and fester in the blood; purge out the causes of disease, and vigorous health will follow. By its peculiar
virtues this remedy stimulates the vital functions, and thus expels the distempers which
lurk within the system or burst out on any
part of it.

We know the public have been deceived by
many compounds of Sarsaparilla, that promised
much and did nothing; but they will neither be deceived nor disappointed in this. Its virtues
have been proven by abundant trial, and there
remains no question of its surpassing excellence
for the cure of the afflicting diseases it is intended to reach. Although under the same name, it is a very different medicine from any
other which has been before the people, and is far more effectual than any other which has ever been available to them.

AYER'S

CHERRY PECTORAL,

The World's Great Remedy for Coughs, Colds, Incipient Consumption, and for the relief
of Consumptive patients
in advanced stages
of the disease.

This has been so long used and so universally known, that we need do no more than
assure the public that its quality is kept up to the best it ever has been, and that it may be relied on to do all it has ever done.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excites the ABSORBENTS into heat-
ful action, by which the WATERY OR CAL-CULI deposits, and all UNNATURAL ENLARGEMENTS are reduced, as well as
pain and inflammation, and is good for MEN, WOMEN, OR CHILDREN.

HELMHOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU
FOR WEAKNESSES
Arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation,
Early Indiscretion, or Abuse.

ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS
Indisposition to Exer- Loss of Power,
tion, Difficulty of Breathing,
Loss of Memory, Dryness of the Skin,
Weak Nerves, Trembling,
Horror of Diseases, Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision, Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of Flushing of the Body,

IMPOTENCY, FATUITY, EPILEPTIC
FITS,
In one of which the patient may expire. Who can say that they are not frequently followed by
those "direful diseases,"

Insanity and Consumption.
Many are aware of the cause of their suffering,
but none without. The records of the insane Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion. The constitution, once affected with Organic Weakness, requires the aid of medicine
to strengthen and invigorate the system, which HELMHOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU restores to its former state. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females, Females, Females,
Old or young, single, married, or contemplating
Marriage—in many affections peculiar to Females the Extract Buchu is unequalled by any
other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Ir-
regularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of the menstrual flow, or in the various forms of customary Excesses, or in the various forms of
state of the Uterus, Leucorrhoea, or Whites, Ster-
ility, and for all complaints incident to the sex,

cine for Unpleasant and Dangerous Diseases.

HELMHOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU

no change of diet; no inconvenience, and no Ex-posure. It causes frequent desire, and gives
strength to Urinate, thereby removing obstructions, preventing and curing Strictures of the Urethra, allaying pain and inflammation, and restoring to this class of diseases, and expelling POISONOUS, DISEASED, AND WORN OUT MATTER.

Thousands upon thousands who have been
the victims of Quacks, and who have paid Heavy Pens to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the Poison has, by the
use of Powerful Astringents, been dried up in the
system, to break out in aggravated form, and
perhaps after marriage.

Use Helmhold's Extract Buchu
For all Affections and Diseases of
THE URINARY ORGANS,
Whether existing in Male or Female, from whatever cause originating, and no matter of how long
standing.

Blood, and removes all Sea Eruptions of the Skin, giving to the Complexion a Clear and Healthy color. It being prepared expressly for properties are unequalled by a greater extent than any other preparation of Sarsaparilla.

WM. GRAY, Esq., Dear Sir:—Two months ago, my head was almost bald, and the little hair I had was all grey, and falling out very fast, until I feared I should lose all. I commenced using your Hair Restorative, and it immediately stopped the hair falling off, and soon restored the hair, and after using two bottles my head is completely covered with a healthy growth of hair, and of the same color it was in early manhood. I take great pleasure in recommending your excellent Hair Restorative, and you also may refer any doubtful person to me.

For the Patriot

Abou George Francis.

Abou George Francis, may his tribe decrease,—

Went home one night from lecturing on "Peace,"

And saw within the shadow of his room,

Making it darker spite the gathered gloom,

A spirit writing in a book of gold,

Exceeding brass had made George Francis bold,

And to the presence said he: "what writest

thou?"

The spirit turned and said with face of evil

"The names of those who do the bidding of the d—!"

"And is mine one?" "Not so," replied the spirit,

"Well then," said George "as I'm a democrat

You'll not have, cause again to tell me that."

The spirit vanished; the next night it came again

And showed unto George Francis Train,

The names of those whose love of treason cursed,

And lo! of all, his own name was the first.

Joy.

Joy dwells not in external things,

It hath an inner birth;

The sweetest bird in darkness sings,

And faintest flowers oft nurture stings—

The heart can o'er the darkest woe

A stream of sunlight softly throw,

Or purest bliss destroy.

WHITE PACE CAKE. The whites of three

Miscellaneous.

What's the Use of It?

Deacon Tilden had the squarest, neatest white house that ever showed its keen angles from the dusky clumps of old lilac bushes. In front of it stood, on each side of the doorway, two thrifty cherry trees, which bore a bushel each, every season. Excepting the aforementioned lilac trees there was not a flower or shrub round the place. Rose bushes the Deacon thought rotted the house, and the honey suckle, which his wife tried to train over the porch, was torn down when the painters came, and on the whole, the Deacon said, what was the use of putting it up so long as it did not bear anything?

By the side of the house was a thrifty, well-kept garden, with plenty of currant bushes and quince trees—and the beets and carrots and the onions were the pride of the Deacon's heart; but, as he often proudly said—"every thing for use"—there was nothing fancy about it. His wife put in time, one season for a flower border—Mrs. Jenkyns had given her a petunia, and Mrs. Simpkins had brought her a package of flower seeds from New York—and so a bed was laid out. But the thrifty Deacon soon found that weeding of it took time that Mrs. Tilden might have given to her dairy, or to making shirts and knitting stockings, and so it really troubled his conscience. The next spring he turned it into his cornfield; and, when his wife mildly intimated her disappointment, said placidly, after all, 'twas a thing of no use, and took time; and Mrs. Tilden, being a meek woman, and one of the kind of saints who always suppose themselves miserable sinners, especially confessed her sin of being in wardly vexed about the incident in her prayers that night, and prayed that her eyes might be turned off from beholding vanity, and that she might be quickened in the way of mind-ing her work.

The front parlor of the Deacon's house was the most frigid asylum of neatness that ever discouraged the eyes and heart of a visitor. The four blank walls were gilded with an engraving or painting, or of any adornment but an ordinary walled paper and a framed copy of the Declaration of Independence. On each of the three sides stood four chairs—under the looking-glass was a shining mahogany table with a large Bible and an almanac on it—and a pair of cold, glistening brass andirons illustrated the fire-place. The mantle shelf above had a pair of bright brass candlesticks with a pair of snuffers between—and that was all. The Deacon liked it—it was plain and simple—no nonsense about it—every thing for use and nothing for show—it suited him. His wife sometimes sighed and looked round it, when she was sewing, as if she wanted something, and then sung in the good old psalm:

From vanity turn off my eyes;
Let no corrupt design
Or covetous desire arise
Within this heart of mine."

The corrupt design to which this estimable matron had been tempted had been the purchase of a pair of Parian flower vases, the thought of which had struck her heart when she went with her butter and eggs to the neighboring city—but recollecting herself in time, she resolutely shut her eyes to the allurements, and spent the money usefully in buying loaf sugar.

For it is to be remarked that the Deacon was fond of good eating, and prided himself on the bounties of his wife's table. Few women knew better how to set one—and the snowy bread, golden butter, clear preserves and jellies, were themes of admiration at all the tea tables in the land. The Deacon didn't mind a few cents in a pound more for a nicer ham, and would now and then bring home a treat of oysters from the city when they were the dearest. These were comforts, he said—one must stretch a point for the comforts of life.

The Deacon must not be mistaken for a tyrannical man or a bad husband. When he quietly put his wife's flower patch into his corn-field, he thought he had done her a service by curing her of an absurd notion for things that took time and made trouble, and were of no use; and she, dear soul, never breathed a dissent to any course of his, loud enough to let him know she had one. He laughed in his sleeve often when he saw her so tranquilly knitting or shirt making at those times she had been wont to give to her poor contraband pleasures. As for the flower vases, they were repented of—and Mrs. Tilden put a handful of spring anemones into a broken pitcher and set it on her kitchen table, till the Deacon tossed them out of the window—he couldn't bear to see weeds growing around.

The poor little woman had a kind of chronic heart sickness, like the pining of a teething child, but she never knew what she wanted. If she was ever sick, no man could ever be kinder than the Deacon. He had been known to harness in all haste and rush to the neighboring town at four o'clock in the morning, that he might bring her some delicacy she had a fancy for; for that he could see the use of; but could not sympathize in her craving desire to see Power's Greek Slave, which was exhibiting in a neighboring town. What did Christian people want of stun images? he would like to know. He thought the Scripture put that thing down; eyes have they, but they see not—ears have they, but they hear not—neither speak they through their throat. They that make them are like unto them; so is every one that trusteth in them. These were the Deacon's opinion of the arts; and Mrs. Deacon only sighed, and wished she could see it, that was all.

But it came to pass that the Deacon's eldest son went to live in New York, and from that time strange changes began to appear in the family, which the Deacon didn't like; but as Jethro was a smart, driving lad, and making money at a great pace, he at first said nothing. But on his mother's birthday, down he came and brought a box for his mother, which, being unpacked, contained a Parian statuette of Paul and Virginia—a lovely, simple little group as ever told its story in clay.

Everybody was soon standing around it in open-mouthed admiration, and poor Mrs. Tilden wiped her eyes more than once as she looked on it. It seemed a vision of beauty in the desolate neatness of the best room.

Very pretty, I s'pose, said the Deacon, doubtfully; for like most fathers of spirited twenty-three year olders, he began to feel a little in awe of his son; but, dear me, what a sight of money to give for a thing that, after all, is of no use.

I think, said Jethro, looking at his mother's suffused eyes, it is one of the most useful things that has been brought into the house this many a day.

I don't see how you're going to make that out, said the Deacon, looking apprehensively at the young wisdom that had risen in his household.

What will you wager me, father, that I will prove out of your own mouth that this statuette is as useful as your cart and oxen?

I know you've got a great way of coming round folks, and twitting them up before they fairly know where they are; but I will stand you on this question, any way.

And the Deacon put his yellow silk bandanna over his bald head, and took up his position in the window seat.

Well, now, father, what is the use of your cart and oxen?

Why, I could not work the farm without them, and you'd all have nothing to eat, drink, or wear.

Well, what is the use of our eating, drinking, and wearing?

Use? Why, we could not keep alive without it.

And what is the use of our keeping alive?

The use of our keeping alive?

Yes, to be sure, why do we try and strive, and twist and turn to keep alive, and what's the use of living?

Living! why, we want to live; we enjoy living—all creatures do—dogs and cats and every kind of beast. Life is sweet.

The use of living, then, is that we enjoy it?

Yes.

Well, we all enjoy this statuette, so that there is the same value to that, that there is in living; and if your oxen and carts, and food and clothes, and all that you call necessary things, have no value except to keep in life, and life has no value except enjoyment, then this statuette is a short cut to the great thing for which your farm and every thing else is designed. You do not enjoy your cart for what it is, but because of its use to get food and clothes; and food and clothes we value for the enjoyment they give. But a statuette or picture, or any beautiful thing, gives enjoyment at once. We enjoy it the moment we see it—for itself, and not for any use we mean to make of it. So that strikes the great end of life quicker than anything else, don't it? Hey, father; haven't I got my case?

I believe the pigs are getting into the garden, said the Deacon, rushing out of the front door.

But to his wife he said, before going to bed: Isn't it amazing the way Jethro can talk? I couldn't do it myself, but I had it in me though, if I'd had his advantages. Jethro is a chip of the old block.

Consoling Views of Death.

Again, the feeling of entire and life-long separation from our departed friends is one of the most bitter ingredients in our cup of sorrow. We could bear, with much cheerfulness of hope, their absence, their long absence, from us. Oceans or years may intervene between them and our embrace, and still there is no settled sadness on their account; for our love bridges over time and space—they are living—they are happy—the months of separation will pass rapidly away.

A Spiritual Medium.

All doubts as to the reality of rappings must now be at an end, as a correspondent advises us of the following:

A few nights since, a young male friend of ours, who, from a sneering sceptic, had become a devout believer, retired to rest, after having his nervous system severely shocked by the information, through the spirit of his grandfather, that he would shortly become a powerful medium. He was in his first comfortable snooze, when a clicking noise in the direction of the door awoke him. He listened intently for a moment—the noise was still going on—very like the raps of the spirits upon the table, indeed.

Who's there?

There was no answer, and the queer noise stopped.

Anybody there?

No answer.

It must have been a spirit, he said to himself. I must be a medium. I will try.

(Aloud.) If there is a spirit in the room, it will signify the same by saying aye; no, that's not what I mean. If there is a spirit in the room, it will please rap three times.

Three very distinct raps were heard in the direction of the bureau.

Is it the spirit of my sister?

No answer.

Is it the spirit of my mother?

Three raps.

Are you happy?

Nine raps.

Do you want anything?

A succession of very loud raps.

Will you give me any communication if I get up?

No answer.

Shall I hear from you to-morrow?

Very loud raps in the direction of the door.

Shall I ever see you?

The raps then came from the outside of the door. He waited long for an answer to his last question, but none came. The spirit had gone; and after thinking about the extraordinary visit, he turned over and fell asleep.

On getting up in the morning, he found the spirit of his mother had carried off his watch and purse, his pants, and his great coat down stairs in the hall.

The Internal Revenue.

On Wednesday last an honest countryman came to the city and made quite a number of purchases, including hardware, dry goods, a hat, a pair of ready-made pantaloons, and some groceries. He got the things all conveniently packed in his wagon, and as he was about leaving for home he was accosted by a fellow who represented himself as a Government official, and who told the countryman that he must have an internal revenue stamp upon every article he had purchased. The countryman readily believed what was told him with such an air of sincerity, and in company with the self-constituted officer he repaired to a business house and purchased check stamps to the number of a dozen, and got up in his wagon and went about stamping every article he had in the wagon, to the infinite amusement of the crowd which the wag had summoned to witness the operation. Having thus complied with the law, which the countryman had obeyed without a murmur, he drove off towards the rural districts, thanking the wag for what he conceived to have been a kindly and well-meant suggestion. A bystander came near carrying the joke too far, by suggesting the propriety of putting a stamp upon a coon skin which the countryman had not succeeded in selling, and which he was carrying back to his home.—

The Two Portraits.

You have heard the story of the Italian artist, who, meeting with a child of exquisite beauty, wished to preserve its features for fear he should never see such loveliness again. So he painted the charming face upon canvas, and hung it upon the walls of his studio. In his somberest hours that sweet, gentle countenance was like an angel of light to him. Its presence filled his soul with the purest aspirations. If ever I find, he said, a perfect contrast with this beautiful face, I will paint that also, and hang them side by side, an ideal of heaven and hell. Years passed. At length, in a distant land, he saw, in a prison he visited, the most hideous object he ever gazed upon—a fierce, haggard fiend, with glaring eyes and cheeks deeply furrowed with lust and crime. The artist remembered his vow, and immediately painted a picture of this loathsome form, to hang beside the lovely boy. The contrast was perfect. His dream was realized. What was the surprise of this artist, on inquiring into the history of this horrid wretch, to find that he was once that lovely little boy! Both of these pictures, the angel and the demon of the same soul, now hang side by side in the Tuscan gallery.—Home Monthly.

"Near Enough."

We have, by far too often, heard this phrase applied to the dimensions of machinery in course of construction, or in process of erection, and it strikes us as being unmechanical and unmeaning. Machinery is always, or should be, made to certain standard sizes, and to say that this crank pin fits "near enough" to that "brass" is to be guilty of carelessness in execution, and recklessness in speech. Such fits as "near enough" express are generally made over with a file and chisel, at the expense of time and labor which ought to have been avoided. We have frequently been witness to hours of hard work expended in filing out a brass box to suit a shaft, which should have been bored out correctly at first, and never re-touched afterward. "Near enough" is a careless fellow, and delays more than he helps. Away with him!

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT. Mr. JAMES EDWARDS, a highly esteemed citizen of this place, came to his death on Monday last, in a most tragic manner. He was on a business visit to the stone yard of E. S. Chapin, on the Commons, and while in conversation with the workmen, who were raising a heavy stone at the time, the Derrick gave way, and in its fall, a broken fragment struck him on the head, prostrating him upon the rock on which he stood, and the main shaft fell across his legs. Death was instantaneous. When his lifeless remains were taken up, they presented a most shocking spectacle. A frightful wound had been made in the head—deep, even to the brain; the right arm was broken, and the bones of both legs were literally ground to powder, and only held to the body by the fleshy ligaments. So sad a bereavement has naturally cast a gloom over the neighborhood in which he resided, where he was universally respected.

Mr. Edwards, at the time of his decease, was sixty-five years of age; a shoemaker by trade; he was an affectionate husband, a kind father, and a warm and devoted friend. In all the duties of life, it can be truly said of him, that he was "the noblest work of God—an honest man."

He leaves a wife and children to mourn his loss.

SABBATH SCHOOL CELEBRATION. The exercises of the thirty-first anniversary of the Orthodox Sunday School in this town, drew together a large audience last Sabbath, and elicited expressions of satisfaction on every hand. The present number of members is two hundred and twenty-two. Several from the Sunday School have united with the Church during the past winter. The school is well represented in the army of our country. A very interesting historical review of the early formation and subsequent growth of the school was made by Mr. William Pratt. The children were addressed by the Pastor and by Mr. George Beal of Cohasset. Mr. Putnam, Principal of the High School, in a few eloquent remarks, illustrated the benign influence of Sunday School culture, both on the intellect and heart—on the individual and on the community at large. Then, in the name of the school, he presented Mr. Elbridge Clapp with a chaste but elegant Photographic Album, as a testimonial of their esteem for him as a faithful Superintendent. The singing was performed by a well trained choir of children, and added in no little degree to the pleasure of the occasion.

THE SEASON. The business of the farmer has commenced. The earth is being prepared for the reception of seed. Many kinds of early vegetables have already been planted. Notwithstanding the predictions of the short-sighted, there is no cause to despond. Things now look promising.

JURORS. Drawn by the Selectmen, April 11th, 1863, John A. Wood, Grand Juror, Thomas H. Plummer and Chester Mitchell, Petit Jurors, Superior Court, Dedham—April Term.

LADIES! We would call your attention to the large stock of Bonnets, Ribbons, Flowers, Hats, &c., of the most fashionable styles, now selling at reduced prices at Cushman & Brooks' stores, 72 and 74 Tremont street, Boston. The late fire in their stores is causing them to dispose of their entire stock at once; and to do so they now offer their rich goods at great sacrifice; giving the ladies bargains seldom found in the city of Boston.

SPECULATION FORBIDDEN. By an order just issued by General Banks, all officers and soldiers, and all followers of the army, of whatever character, in his department, are forbidden to engage, in any manner whatever, directly or indirectly, in the purchase or sale of the products of the country, or to use the troops, transportation or material of the army for the purpose of speculation, or to assist those who are so engaged, under penalty of dishonorable dismissal and severe punishment. Pillage and depredations will be suppressed.

JUST RECEIVED. An invoice of Ladies' serge Congress heel boots, extra quality, which will be sold at the low price of $1.30 per pair, at Cummings'. Also, a large variety of the most desirable kinds of boots and shoes at the lowest market price.

AN HONORABLE ACT. The Barnstable Patriot of the 14th says that Henry H. Crocker of New York—late of the firm of Crocker & Sturgis of Boston, which failed in 1857, at the time owing the Barnstable Savings Institution the sum of $900—last week sent the treasurer of that Institution $1100, being the full amount of the debt with interest.

Rev. Mr. Heath, by request will examine the Parable of the rich man and Lazarus, to-morrow forenoon and afternoon. See Luke 16: 19-31.

Boston Correspondence.

HON. EDWARD EVERETT.

We have carefully read the Address of this gentleman before the Union Club of Boston, delivered in the Tremont Temple, on Thursday last. Rapidly approaching to the septuagenary period of life, the Address was said to have been put forth with matchless vigor, eloquence, and the patriotic fervor of early manhood. He discusses the matter of our National difficulties clearly and ably. We believe him a patriot, and honor him, that in these dark days of our country's troubles—a gigantic civil war waging in our midst, the trembling of the hearts of millions for the integrity of the Nation—when foreign nations look upon us with mistrust, and England, one of the mightiest of States, a particeps criminis with the rebellious States in warfare against the Constitution and Laws of civilization and freedom—of man and God. That one of the most gifted men of our land, in literature, science and statesmanship, has spoken as it were by the tongue of inspiration, such golden words of counsel and hope to every loyal man, woman and child. The war must be carried on to the bitter end until the rebellion is crushed. The Government of the United States should be cordially sustained in every effort to maintain the national unity, both in principle and territorial boundary. Let us do all in our might, irrespective of party names, to sustain at all hazards, the power, glory and integrity of the Nation. We recommend the perusal of Mr. Everett's Address to every person. It is a sweet fountain for the classic scholar, the politician and man of business.

WAR COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

This long expected Congressional Document is at length published, and has been read with great interest. It is particularly severe on General McClellan, and would seem to consign all that is mortal of him to the tomb of the Capulets. If half of what is said of him is true, he should be court-martialed and cashiered from the army. He was unable to accomplish anything, not from want of means, but of talent. From the Report of the Committee on the "Conduct of the War," he lacked the characteristics of a commander—moral courage. The defeat at Bull's Bluff is laid to his charge; the misfortunes of the Peninsular campaign are attributed to his bad generalship, including the loss of Richmond; in fact, the Report completely demolishes the fame and glory of McClellan, whether right or wrong. The Committee bear hard upon President Lincoln, as lacking in energy in reference to General McClellan's non-removal from the chief command of the army, when he had long known his unfitness and inefficiency for that station. The popular favor of little Mac, being too strong for the President to act sooner than he did in change of commanders. We should infer that the President's course against General Burnside was unfortunate, causing the failure of that General's plans. In commenting on this Report, the Boston Traveller says in conclusion:

"History may be defied to furnish any parallel to the combination of follies and crimes that have characterized our service in the first eight months of the year of our disgrace, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-two."

A severe charge.

THE SITUATION.

The present week is likely to close with much despondency in the public feeling. The attack on Charleston, of which we have graphic accounts, is considered by many as a failure.

The position of General Foster in North Carolina is bad, and there are strong fears that the rebels may gobble him up and his army.

The canal system for the capture of Vicksburg is failing.

General Banks is intrenching New Orleans, fearing an attack on the Crescent City. The noble armies under Hooker and Rosecrans remain in statu quo, for reasons not known to us all.

With these war squalls up jumps the price of gold, and confidence receives a shock in the successful results of this nefarious rebellion. In reality, there is no reason for the "downward tendency" of feeling; we know the issue now, and must abide by it: the rebels will whip us or we them; we choose the latter alternative—and earnestly hope in God's name that every heart of the loyal States, will have but one purpose, one hope, one aim, the salvation of the country. Stand by the Flag.

BURIAL OF SOLDIERS. General Saxton, commanding at Beaufort, (N. C.) having learned that it had become a common practice to bury soldiers without performing any kind of burial service, issued an order on the 8th of March, declaring that "the remains of a soldier who loses his life while in the service of his country—no matter what the life may have been—should have a Christian burial. If no chaplain, or friend, can be found to read the burial service at the grave of a soldier, the General commanding will perform that sad duty himself."

DEATH OF CHARLES SPEAR. Rev. Charles Spear died in Washington on Monday, at the age of fifty-eight years. He was born in Boston, was a printer by trade, but studied for the ministry, and for a number of years preached as a clergyman of the Universalist denomination. He was active in the work of prison reform, edited a publication entitled the Prisoner's Friend, and labored for the abolition of the death penalty. For some time past he has occupied the post of Hospital Chaplain at Washington.

A CHANGE. We learn that there will be a change in the running time on the Old Colony Railroad, on Monday; but we have not received the particulars.

There will be a change in the time of receiving and closing the mail. For particulars see advertisement.

Rev. Mr. Barrows, of Neponset, is expected to preach at the Orthodox church to-morrow.

EXHIBITION OF PAINTINGS. It is a matter of regret that the storm of Thursday prevented many from examining the collection of Peruvian paintings, especially as the opportunity was a rare one. We noticed in this collection a great diversity of skill and finish. "The Brigand and Daughter," or "December and May," at once arrest and charm the eye while others like Don Juan appear to be the work of a mere tyro. There is however in all of them a peculiar exuberance of style and coloring, well suited to their fervid, inter-tropical tastes.

CARPETS. A great trade is carried on through these times of high prices, by the New England Carpet Company, of Boston. See their advertisement in to-day's paper.

EXPENSE OF TRANSPORTATION. It has cost the Government no small amount for the transportation of troops, since the rebellion commenced. The Secretary of War has informed Congress that the amount paid to Railroads between Washington and New York is $10,922,000. Railroads all over the North have made money out of this war. There never was so much travelling before.

AN ACT WORTHY OF RECORD. The town of Richmond, Indiana, was visited by one of the noblest bodies of invaders ever seen, on the 21 ultimo. There were one hundred and twenty-five wagons, loaded with one hundred cords of wood and three thousand pounds of flour and corn meal, all of which were distributed to the families of soldiers. National flags were flying, bands of music playing, and, better than all, the hearts of soldiers' wives and children were beating gladly.

THE ENGLISH IRON-CLAD FRIGATES. Four of those vessels have returned from their experimental voyage to Portugal, and the naval reporter of the London Times, says, the plates are loose, and that the vessels are not in condition to go out to sea now. The impression of the writer seems to be that the fastening of iron plates to the wooden hull will not answer the purpose desired. It appears as though our little fleet of monitors were the most formidable iron clad fleet afloat.

A NEW APPLICATION OF CHLOROFORM. A lady was recently rendered insensible in a Railroad car on opening an illustrated paper proffered her by a well-dressed man. When she recovered her consciousness, her money, jewelry and railroad ticket were gone, as was the very civil person who loaned her the paper. It was saturated with chloroform.

Obituary.

Died in the Camp Hospital, at Gentilly Station, New Orleans, March 21st, 1863, OBER F. ALLEN, son of Obed and Eliza Allen, of Quincy, aged nineteen years, eleven months and twenty days. He was a private in Company G, of the Forty-Second Regiment, joining with them in the fight at Galveston—the subsequent capture and imprisonment at Houston, and the long and fatiguing march to New Orleans—where they remained as prisoners of war, on parole, until an exchange could be effected.

At this time, he penned the last letter he ever wrote his parents, in which he says, "Though weary and worn, mother, you had better believe I am happy to be so near home."

He knew not that his heavenly home would so soon perfect and eternalize that happiness. Never murmuring at his hardships; ever ready to give a helping hand, a cheering word, and a smile of love, he endeavored himself to his companion prisoners. When at length, a burning fever seized upon his wasted form, every heart and hand responded to procure the aid and comfort required. Tenderly nursed the weary body, until, (beyond the hope of human assistance) "tired nature" sank to rest—and the God-gave spirit returned unto its Giver. Then the little band, who had passed through hardships and dangers untold, shed tears of sympathy over the inanimate form of their comrade. Aylazurus. There was no thought of the missing place in their ranks, but of the dear ones far away to whom the sad tidings must be conveyed.

Some one whispered, "Let us send him to his mother!" Instinctively, and as with one accord, every heart seemed to reply. A beautiful casket was procured, and the body prepared for its last earthly journey. Lieutenant Proctor, in person, superintended the arrangements, and saw the body placed on board the steamer—with a letter from the Chaplain, also a copy of the Resolutions formed accompanying it, the steamer sailed from port.

Also! our fondest anticipations are often doomed to decay; since, ere four days had sped, it was found necessary for the preservation of the health of the living, that the corpse should be committed to the sea. In an appropriate manner, the loved remains were consigned to their last resting place.

Thus passed from earth, a dutiful son, an affectionate brother, and as patriotic a soldier as ever fell in his country's service.

Soldier! enter into rest!
Such as mortals eyes may see
Vest thou too, have joined the blest—
God hath set the prisoner free!

Wearied and worn with the fight,
Life's march has ended with thee;
We know—we feel it is right—
God hath set the prisoner free!

Weep, comrades—weep, if ye must,
Sorrow endeared him to thee;
Send to his mother the dust!
God hath set the prisoner free!

Oh! casket of precious dust,
Down in the depths of the sea;
Need of your sacred trust,
God hath set the prisoner free!

Loving hearts, though wrung with pain,
Weep for the dust in the sea;
The soul, ye shall meet again—
God hath set the prisoner free!

Life on a Locomotive.

A book of more exciting interest we have seldom met with than "Trips in the life of a Locomotive Engineer." Though the author says no claim to literary merit, and even does not let us know his real name, we think we see marks of superior talent, specially in his powers of description, and in his delineation of feelings. Each chapter is short and complete in itself. The narratives are most thrilling and possess far more of interest than a work of fiction, in as much as names, dates and localities are often given. Notwithstanding his occasional infelicities of style, even grammatical blunders—the writer certainly wields a vigorous pen, albeit, too severe at times, perhaps. His robust, unpolished, impatient travellers, penurious stockholders and selfish land holders are justly deserved. Most of the chapters are tragedies, terrible ones too, but two or three are comedies written in a most agreeable style, showing a rare versatility of mind. The typographical appearance of the volume is pleasing to the eye which is no small recommendation to any book. If you only wish the reading of it, looking on Washington Street will doubtless find a copy on the shelves of his Circulating Library, where we have hired reading—two cents per volume each day—since the "Book famine" began.

Poetry.

For the Patriot.

The Dark River.

BY WILLIE F. GILCHRIST.

Sinner, pause in your onward march
For earthly wealth and shining dress,
Know you not there's a river dark
O'er whose breast you and I must cross?
Art thou prepared in all thy pride,
As dark and sad its waves roll o'er,
To plunge thee in the river's tide?
And boldly seek the other shore?

Thy path may lead thee far away,
Unceasing toil may heap thy wealth;
Though Fortune smile her sweetest ray,
And grant thee years of joy and health;
And though from grief's dark shade you shrink,
Thy path will surely lead at last Unto this darksome river's brink
O'er whose dark tide thy soul must pass.

Stay miser! crouch not o'er thy gold,
For thou must leave it on the shore,
'Twill not avail when darkly rolls
This swelling tide thine eyes before;
The bark is light that skims its wave,
Thy form alone 'twill bear thee 'til find,
Then wherefore seek thy gold to save,
Since thou must leave it all behind.

Oh, Youth, who follows Pleasure's reign,
Though sweet, though pleasant it may be,
When it hath fled it leaves but pain,
And grief and bitter misery;
Her paths may seem serene and bright,
They lead unto this river's flood,
What wilt thou do when, dark as night,
This river rolls 'twixt thee and God?

When we shall reach the other side,
And back the waves shall darkly roll,
Beyond the river's swelling tide
Two homes await the weary soul;
The one a home of pure delight
Where saints immortal ever reign,
The other filled with darkest night,
Where fiends and demons howl in pain.

Which wilt thou choose? The banner's spread
Which leads unto that home of light,
And 'Christ' on its broad field is read,
Our path and watchword through the night.
This be thy sign when waters dark Shall roll before, and only that,
Then spread thy sails, the tiny bark
Will bear thee to those realms of bliss.

The Blue-Birds.

Birds of the Spring! we have heard your song,
And know that summer is nigh;
Your glad return we have waited long,
Welcome, ye joyous happy throng,
And charm our vernal sky

Your coming tells of budding trees,
Of fields in smiling green,
Of humming birds, and humming bees,
Of lambskin skipping o'er the leas,
And hues at evening seen.

The swallow sings in orange groves
Of some fair Southern clime,
But ye haste North to sing your loves,
And cheer the plow-boy, as he roves
The fields in plowing-time.

In this old tree, come build a nest,
Where your parents built before,
We'll praise your song, when you stop to rest,
And the sun goes down the golden west,
Till the summer months are o'er.

Then haste your flight, ere the winter king
Begins his cheerless reign,
His breath will freeze your downy wing—
But think of us another Spring,
And cheer our fields again.

Anecdotes.

An Irishman on board a man of war,
was desired by his messmate to go below and draw a can of beer. Teague knowing that preparations were making to sail, absolutely refused.
Arrah! by my soul, says he, and so while I am gone into the cellar to fetch beer, the ship will sail and leave me behind.

I know I am a perfect bear in my manners,
said a fine young farmer to his sweetheart.
No, indeed, you are not, John; you have never hugged me yet. You are more sheep than bear.

A young Irishman who had married when about nineteen years of age, complaining of
the difficulties to which his early marriage subjected him, said he would never marry so young again if he lived to be as old as Methuslalem.

I ain't going to be called a printer's devil
any longer—no more, I ain't, exclaimed our filibuster the other day in a terrible pucker.
Well, what shall we call you, hey?
Why, call me a typographical spirit of evil,
if you please, that's all.

A large school girl, not distinguished for scholarship, having speck the word cuticle,
was asked what it meant.

Don't know, sir, she said.
What is this all over my face and hands?
asked the teacher.

Freckles, sir.

A witness in an Irish court of justice stated that he was suddenly roused from his slumbers by a blow on his head.

And how did you find yourself? asked
the counsel.

Fast asleep, replied the witness.

SCROFULA AND SCROFULOUS DISEASES.
From Emory's Essay, a well-known merchant of Quincy, Mass., writes: "I have used large quantities of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, but never yet one bottle which failed of its effect. I have used it in many cases, and in all of them it has acted as a powerful purgative, and has cured many cases of Scrofula, which were otherwise incurable."

Ulcers, Scars, and all Diseases of the Skin,
From Rec. Int. Station, Bristol, England.

add my testimony to that of the many others who have testified to the efficacy of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. My daughter, aged ten, had an affecting humor in her ears, and her hair fell out, which was cured by the use of your AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. She has been well for some months."

WM. GRAY, Esq., DEAR SIR:—Two months ago, my head was almost bald, and the little hair
I had was all grey, and falling out very fast, until I feared I should lose all. I commenced using your Hair Restorative, and it immediately stopped
the hair falling out, and soon restored the color, and under the use of two bottles my hair is completely covered with a healthy growth of hair, and of the same color it was in early manhood. I take great pleasure in recommending your excellent Hair Restorative, and you also may refer any doubt-

MAY FESTIVAL. Under this caption, the friends of the SOLDIERS have again thrown their banner to the breeze, and invite the co-operation of our citizens in their behalf, at an entertainment, which is advertised to come off at the Town Hall, on Friday evening next, May first. Their card, which appears in another part of our paper to-day, presents a rich bill of fare; consisting of Tableaux, Charades, or Parlor Theatricals, Instrumental music, etc., and tables well furnished with delicacies and other refreshments.

The Ladies' Soldiers' Aid Association, whose mission of charity has been crowned with such signal success, are frequently in the receipt of communications from superintendents of hospitals, consecrated with the prayers and blessings of our sick and wounded soldiers, for the timely aid received through their instrumentality, urging them on to still further efforts in their labors of love. As this is probably the last call of the kind this season, let none have it to say that they were not there.

A Loss. Messrs. C. P. Tirrell & Sons, on Hancock street, lost a valuable horse on Monday last. He was on the way from the stable to the farrier's, when he escaped from the person who had him in charge, and in an unrestrained freedom, made a false step in his gambols, and broke his leg. The injury was such, as to forfeit his life; and he was accordingly handed over to the executioner, to be disposed of in a summary manner, and his remains to be dealt with after the fashion of all horse flesh. He was an old horse, but highly prized by his owners.

LIEUTENANT CHARLES H. PORTER. This gentlemanly officer, who is First Lieutenant of one of the Companies, in the 39th Mass. Regiment, called at our office on Wednesday last. He looked quite healthy, and appears to enjoy life much. He is at home on a short furlough, and will return next week.

LIEUTENANT RUDDERHAM, of Gen. Banks' army arrived in town about ten days since. He is well, and reports the army as well as can be expected under the circumstances. He was at the siege of Port Hudson, and done gallant service. Lieutenant Rudderham is a fine officer, of whom the army may well feel proud.

AMMONIATED PACIFIC GUANO. We would call the attention of Farmers and Gardeners to this article, which, from the many testimonials we have read, we should judge to be one of the most valuable manures ever put into the market, and withal, one of the cheapest. It is much improved from the common guano by a chemical process, and has the warmest approbation from Drs. Jackson and Hayes, State Assessors. It is advertised in our columns to-day and is for sale by George Davenport & Co., 145 Milk street Boston. Every tiller of the soil should obtain a descriptive pamphlet from Mr. Davenport.

THE NORWAY SPRUCE. John Wilson, Esq., of Cohasset, has some fine specimens of this noble tree, of suitable size for transplanting. This is the best tree known in this climate for a sheltering hedge, as it can be trimmed to any desirable shape. Mr. Wilson has raised an assortment of these trees for sale, and would be happy to see his customers flocking in, or to show them to any who may be in want.

TO OUR ABSENT FRIEND. Our Correspondent C. J. Mc... whose beautiful poetical effusion appears on our first page, which speaks the innermost feelings of a wounded heart, has our commiseration and sympathy for her late trials, and we shall always esteem it a high privilege, either through our weekly issue, or in any other way, to enjoy an uninterrupted communication with her. In a postscript she says, "I have from time to time, sent you a number of pieces, but have never seen any of them in the paper." We can assure our friend that their non-appearance was no fault of ours—they were never received by us, otherwise we should have been too happy to have published them.

AN ANTIDOTE. The London Mechanics' Magazine states that a remedy for the poison of strychnine and mushrooms has been discovered, and consists in making a poisoned person eat large quantities of refined sugar, and in desperate cases opening a vein and injecting water in which sugar has been dissolved.

A NEW LUXURY FOR EPICURES. A Berlin Journal states that there are now in the Prussian capital seven butchers' shops for the sale of horse flesh, and that seven hundred and fifty horses have been killed in the present year for their supply. No animal can be slaughtered for those establishments without a certificate from the veterinary surgeon of the police.

It is stated that 700,000 gallons of wine were made in California in 1862—that there are ten and a half millions of vines now planted in the State, which, when in full bearing condition, will produce three and a half million gallons of wine.

For the Patriot.
Visit to Bridgewater.

On Wednesday morning of last week, about twenty of the teachers of the public schools of Quincy took the cars for Bridgewater, to attend a State Teachers' Institute, then in session at that place. It was a beautiful morning and the spirits of the company were in keeping with the mild splendor of the day.

A ride of little more than an hour, and we found ourselves at the Bridgewater Station, and an easy walk of five minutes took us to the Town Hall, where the Institute was progressing.

Almost the first thing which claimed our attention was a military drill executed by the Brookline Rifles, a company of school boys, organized in the town of Brookline, from the High and Grammar Schools of that place.

All admired the soldierly bearing of these youths, as well as the promptitude and exactness with which they performed every evolution, showing that school boys can learn to march and counter-march, and wheel and shoulder, as well as men.

This company has drilled before a committee of the Legislature who have had the subject of military education under consideration.

But to return to the Institute. Professor Russell taught us elocution. Rev. B. G. Northup, agent of the Board of Education, talked about object teaching. Dr. Lowell Mason held forth on his specialty—singing.

Mr. Boyden, Principal of the State Normal School, at Bridgewater, instructed us in Arithmetic, particularly in the matter of Interest. He seemed to think that his method of computing interest, would interest the children more than any other, and that it was for our interest to adopt it—which was of course very interesting.

Professor Sharp of Dorchester performed some very interesting experiments in Chemistry, the object of which was to show the absolute necessity of good ventilation.

Professor Tenney explained the theory of the winds, and talked of other things connected with Physical Geography.

On Wednesday evening Dr. Holland, (Timothy Titcomb) gave a very fine lecture on "Fashions." It was received with rapt attention, and was much admired by all present.

On Thursday evening Rev. James Freeman Clarke was expected to speak; but the rain falling in torrents all day, gently reminded several of us that "There is no place like home"

on a dark and stormy night, and so we came home very well pleased with our two days at the State Teachers' Institute at Bridgewater.

Another Fast Day.

PROCLAMATION BY THE GOVERNOR.

WHEREAS, The President of the United States of America, by his Proclamation, dated at Washington on the 30th day of March last, "designate and set apart THURSDAY, the thirtieth day of April, 1863, as a day of National Humiliation, Fasting and Prayer;" requesting the solemn and religious observance of that day on the part of all the people of the United States, by abstaining from secular pursuits and by acts of devotion and of public worship:

I do, therefore, direct and request that this Proclamation of the Chief Executive Magistrate of the Nation be published and promulgated to the people of Massachusetts in the same manner in which the Proclamation of the Governor of Massachusetts is accustomed to be promulgated, ordaining the annual Fast observed in this Commonwealth. And I especially invoke the attention of all ministers of the Gospel, as well as of all the good people of Massachusetts, in order that the day thus devoted as a National Sabbath to the special services and duties of penitence, prayer and the worship of God, may be duly observed throughout our Commonwealth.

AMENDMENT OF THE CONSTITUTION. Gov. Andrew has issued a proclamation announcing the repeal of the twenty-third article of the articles of amendment of the Constitution, by the concurrent action of the Legislature and a majority of the voters of the Commonwealth voting thereon.

THE LAST OF THE "GUMRACKS."—The counting of the soiled Postage Stamps, which were two or three months ago deposited at the New York Post Office for redemption, has been completed, and most of them redeemed. The aggregate amount was over two hundred and sixty thousand dollars. Only about five per cent. were rejected as worthless. The assorting and counting occupied three months' time. Some idea of the extent of the labor involved may be formed, says the Evening Post, from the fact that the counting would have occupied one man for the space of two years and a half; and it is believed that that man, in consequence of the perplexing nature of the work, would, at or before the end of the time, have become insane.

CARPETS. Those wanting to furnish or redecorate their dwellings with Carpets, should read the advertisement in our paper, of the New England Carpet Co.

For the Patriot.
"Stand by the Flag."

The above were the last words from the pen of your "Boston Correspondent" last week.

We have regarded his articles with some attention for several weeks past, and we sometimes feared that he was inclined to give the old Flag a conditional support—but we now rejoice to find him "all right."

Yes—"Stand by the Flag," though traitors scoff and copperheads frown. Grumble if you will, creak if you must, but "Stand by the Flag." Don't say that the draft is unjust, that it will be resisted, "Stand by the Flag." "Our country, right or wrong." That's the sentiment.

Are you a loyal and true man? "Stand by the Flag." Are you sick of the war? "Stand by the Flag." Support the constituted authorities and help them put an end to it.

Do you think there is horrid mismanagement and needless expense? Every war shows such a record. "Stand by the Flag." Fight it through now with vigor and thus take away all excuse for such extravagance.

Do you dare to think the rebellion can never be put down? Don't you believe it. Come, and bring every croaker and grumbler with you and "Rally round the Flag, boys," and some fine morning you will wake to see the rebellion crushed and our united nation more prosperous than ever before.

Coe's Super Phosphate of Lime.

Under this name is sold a compound fertilizer, which, in past years, has been frequently analyzed by myself, and its composition stated with suggestions respecting its value in general applications. More recently I have made many analyses of the recent products and materials, and since the larger amount of capital, skill and improved machinery have been engaged in the manufacture by Wm. L. Bradley, the processes have been improved and an article of superior value, and more general importance has been produced.

The materials used, have all been submitted to analyses; each step of the manufacture has been observed, and no extraneous substances are allowed to enter the works.

This fertilizer has a basis of phosphates of lime, magnesia, ammonia, soda, potash, and protoxide of iron, so prepared as to be wholly soluble,—one-tenth part dissolving readily in warm water, and the remainder slowly,—equal to forty five or fifty per cent. of its weight. Associated with this, is its equivalent, and no more, of sulphate of lime; also in its soluble state, which holds the lime abstracted from the Phosphate of Lime. The actual quantity of both these lime salts, after calcination, is from fifty-five to sixty per cent.

The strictly organic part of this fertilizer is made up of animal matter, which, excepting a few per cents. of animal coal, is all either soluble or fermentable, producing heat and ammoniacal compounds. This fact assimilates this fertilizer to guano, in composition and characters, and much of the value of it as a manure, is dependent on the kind and quality of material used. In my trials the fermenting power of this fertilizer has proved quite as great as that of the best Peruvian Guano, and its action on humic matters in the soil is fully equal; it colors the aqueous solutions; contains fatty bodies and products, as well as salts of ammonia. This part forms from twenty-five to twenty-eight per cent. of the compound.

The usual amount of ammonia formed and that which results from fermentation, is four per cent., estimated as N 113, or anhydrous ammonia, as determined on weekly analyses for some time.

Not only has the precaution of having analyses of the materials and weekly products been taken, but the same care has been extended to the marketable article, and each lot of fifty tons is represented by an average sample, which is accompanied by a certificate of its composition, carefully determined.

The reputation this compound has obtained as a manure and fertilizer, renders the manufacture an important one, and the present management should receive, as it deserves, the confidence of the agricultural interests of the country.

Respectfully,
A. A. HAYES, M.D., State Assayer.
16 Boylston Street, Boston, Mar. 2, 1863.

MOST SENSIBLE. The movement in Boston to change May Day festival to the first of June is a most sensible thing. In our climate, the latter day is altogether preferable, both on the score of pleasure and health. We hope School Committees will every where notice the suggestion.

CONFERENCE OF CHURCHES. The Pilgrim Conference, representing fourteen Orthodox Churches in the neighborhood of Plymouth, met at North Carver, on Tuesday and Wednesday last. Besides the usual business and devotional exercises, interesting discussions were participated in by clerical and lay delegates. Rev. E. P. Thwing preached before the Conference on Tuesday evening, and the Lord's Supper was celebrated on Wednesday, preceded by a discourse by Rev. Mr. Woodworth of Plymouth.

LUNCH. There will be a free lunch at the Mariposa Saloon this evening.

PACIFIC MILLS. The Pacific Mills, of Lawrence, (Mass.) are the most extensive in the world, giving employment to over two thousand five hundred operatives, and furnishing exclusive support for nearly ten thousand people. The mill was built in 1854, two years after its incorporation, and with a capital of $2,430,000. The kind of goods manufactured are delaines, cashmeres, challis, calicoes and print laws. The power is obtained from five turbine water-wheels. In the manufacturing department, which is eight hundred feet in length, there are sixty-two thousand spindles in operation, one thousand six hundred looms, operated by nine hundred and fifty women, and the average amount of cotton consumed per week is about four thousand two hundred pounds; and of wool twenty thousand pounds, all of which when manufactured, makes three hundred and sixty thousand yards of goods. The printing department comprises sixteen machines, and twenty-five million yards of goods are printed yearly.

PARISIAN AMUSEMENTS. The theatres of Paris must be well attended. It has been calculated how much they brought in the last year, and the figures amount to about $2,500,000! This is a pretty big sum to pay for amusements in one city, to say nothing of the accompaniments.

A RELIC OF OTHER TIMES. The ship in which Sir Francis Drake navigated the world, was of but one hundred tons. It was commanded, by Queen Elizabeth, that she should be forever preserved, but all that is left of her is one chair, made from her timbers, and preserved at Oxford.

THE FIRST CANNON. The first cannon is said to have been cast in Sussex, England, in 1535. Bonds were taken in after years from owners of charcoal furnaces to the amount of five thousand dollars, that no cannon should be sold without a license. It was feared that the French would obtain them.

PACIFIC GUANO!

Agency for the
AMMONIATED PACIFIC GUANO.

WE are receiving a constant supply of this superior Guano, which will be found one of the cheapest and best Fertilizers in the market. It is powerful and efficacious, capable of carrying the crops through the season, maturing the same, before the early frost, and leaving the soil enriched by the addition of Phosphate of Lime and Ammoniacal Salts—not impoverishing it as does the Peruvian. It is adapted to all soils, and all the various crops.—Grass, Grain, Corn, Potatoes, Root Crops, Tobacco, &c., &c., as well as seen by the numerous letters and testimonials received the last season. Every Farmer and Gardener should give it a trial. The present and prospective high prices for the products of the country are enough to stimulate every agriculturist to extra exertions in producing more than a usual crop the coming season. A Pamphlet, containing testimonials, &c., will be furnished on application.

GEO. W. PRESCOTT, PRINTER.

Shall We Know Each Other There.

When we hear the music ringing
Through the bright celestial dome,
With sweet angel voices singing,
Gladly bid us welcome home

To the land of ancient story,
Where the spirit knows no care;
In that land of light and glory,
"Shall we know each other there?"

When the holy angels meet us,
As we go to join their band,
Shall we know the friends that greet us,
In the glorious spirit land?

Shall we see their dark eyes shining
On us as in days of yore?
Shall we feel their fond arms twining
Gently round us as before?

Yes, my earth-worn soul rejoices,
And my weary heart gives light,
For the thrilling angel voices
And the angel faces bright.

That shall welcome us in Heaven,—
They the loved of long ago,
And to them 'tis kindly given
Thus their mortal friends to know.

O! ye weary ones and lost ones,
Drop not, faint not by the way;
Ye shall join the loved and lost ones
In that land of perfect day.

Harp strings, touched by angel fingers,
Murmur in my raptur'd ear;
Evermore their sweet tone lingers,
We shall know each other there.

Ground Rice Pudding. Add to one pint of milk four eggs well beaten and one and a half tablespoonful of ground rice; boil these together, stirring them. Pour the mixture while hot over two ounces of butter, sugar to the taste, and add the grated rind with the juice of a middle sized lemon. Line the dish with puff paste before putting in the mixture, and bake.

SCALDED PUDDING FOR A SICK PERSON.
Pour half a pint of boiling milk on two tablespoonfuls of flour; let it stand an hour;
strain it through a colander; add two eggs and a little nutmeg. Boil or bake for half an hour.

GRIDDLE CAKES. A soapstone griddle is the best thing to cook flapjacks on, especially for dyspeptics, as they will not stick to this if no grease is used. If an iron griddle is used a piece of raw salt pork is the best "greaser,"
as it leaves just fat enough on the griddle.

A writer thinks that much might be gained
if speakers in prayer and conference meetings would observe the miller's creed—"Always shut the gate when the grist is out."

In order to make us content with our present condition, many of the ancient philosophers tell us, that our discontent only hurts ourselves, without being able to make any alteration in our circumstances.

Our voracity is reckoned by what flows from the mouth, and our voracity by the amount we put into it.

Who is the first woman mentioned in the Bible? Jenny Sis.

Prosperity hath this property: It puffs up narrow souls, makes them imagine themselves high and mighty, and look down upon the world with contempt; but a truly noble
and resolute spirit appears greatest in distress, and then becomes more bright and conspicuous.

Why is a man who beats his wife like a thorough-bred animal?—Because he is a perfect brute.

The sunset clouds are the visible song of the day that is dead.

Drunkenness which is called the besetting
sin of the age, is more peculiarly the beset-ting one.

THE DEATH OF CHILDREN.—I have seen persons gather for the parlor their choicest flowers, just as they begin to open into full bloom and fragrance, lest some passer-by should tear them from the bush and destroy them. Does not God sometimes gather into heaven young and innocent children for the same reason, lest some rude hand may despoil them of their beauty?

DOMESTIC COMFORT.—A pleasant wife,
good-natured children, and warm puddings.

Miscellaneous.

Just Like an Old Fairy Tale.

Oh, uncle Rolfe! dear, dear, uncle Rolfe!
How glad I am to see you! Sit down here by me and let me look at you. Not altered
a bit all this long three years. Oh! how glad I am that you have come home! and Rosa Carter finished her warm welcome by a loving embrace.

Rolfe Henderson took the slight, graceful little figure very close to his breast, as he pressed a warm kiss on the upraised face,
and there was a dimness in the full brown
eye that rested on his niece.

Why, Rosa, my darling, I can't echo your words, he said, after a few moments of most eloquent silence, you have altered. You are quite a young lady now.

Eighteen next spring.
Yes, yes, Poor Lucy! how proud she would have been of you!

Am I like my mother, uncle Rolfe?
Very! The same brown hair and eyes;
the same clear complexion and slender figure,
and the same delicate, regular features; you
are my darling sister restored to me again,
Rosa. And now tell me about this marriage.

Your letter was not very satisfactory, but as I was coming home so soon, I did not think it necessary to write for further particulars.

I wrote all that I knew. I was still at boarding-school last August, when my father wrote to me to come in October to meet my step-mother. He was to marry in Paris, and return by the steamer in September; and he wrote to aunt Rachel to open the house, and have every thing ready for himself, my stepmother, and her two daughters. When I came home they were here.

Well?
That is all. Father wished me to be introduced into society this winter, but my step-mother thinks I am too young.

You do not call her mother?
I! uncle Rolfe! I call her mother!
Hush! Why, Rosa, I did not think you could speak so passionately; his face darkened. Is she unkind to you, little one.

No, not actively unkind; only entirely indifferent. I am as much alone here as if there were not a relative of mine in the house.— Father, having been for eight years in Europe, has pretty much forgotten me, and I cannot find him alone much now. He is very proud of Josephine and Marian. They are like their mother, tall, handsome brunettes,
one thirty, the other twenty-seven years old—
very highly accomplished, and very demonstrative in their affection. I cannot fight the battle with them, so I have given way, hoping for brighter days. And they will come now, for you are here. You love me, Uncle.

The heavy frown that had come on Rolfe Henderson's face, broke up like a cloud before sunlight, as Rosa whispered her last sentence, and he turned to her a face full of loving light.

Patience, he said. If trouble comes I will be here. I will not go away again.

Not go away! cried Rosa, in a joyful tone.
No, I am a rich man now, and will give up travelling and settle down here. My old land-lady will be glad enough to have me for a permanent boarder, so I can always be near you.

They are coming. I hear the carriage.
A moment later, three ladies came into the drawing-room, and Rosa advanced to meet them, and introduce her Uncle.

My Uncle, Mr. Henderson, she said, as he arose and bowed, Mrs. Carter, Miss Lewison, and Miss Marian Lewison. The ladies ac-knowledgeed the introduction, and then a tender of small talk took the place of the former confidential conversation. The weather, the new exhibition of pictures, the opera, and
the last new novel, all came under discussion;
and Mr. Henderson's fine, graceful figure, his handsome face and animated manner, were quite sufficient to make the young ladies exert their choicest powers of pleasing.

We have been ordering dresses for the Opera House Ball, said Josephine. You will be there Mr. Henderson?

I have but just arrived from Chicago, and have not heard of the latest gaities Miss Lewison. When and where is it?

Three weeks from to-day at the opera house. I met one of the Misses Grays at Stewart's in the depths of despair, because all the hair dressers are engaged; we fortunately can trust to Lisette, Mamma's French maid, who has exquisite taste. By the way, Rosa, how is she?

Better, this morning. Dr. Williams thinks
she may sit up to-morrow.

She must be well by the seventeenth, said
Josephine, positively.

What are you going to wear to the ball?
said Mr. Henderson, turning to his niece.

Rosa is too young to go to balls, said Mrs.
Carter, rather sharply. But you have probably a thousand things to say, to discuss after your long separation, she added, more sweetly,
so we will interrupt you no longer, and with her two daughters following her, the lady sailed away.

So you are not to go? said Mr. Henderson.
Not until the Misses Lewison are married,
I believe. Oh! I should like to go! I never went to any thing but a dancing school ball
in my life.

Then why don't you speak to your father?
It would be useless, if I did. Besides, I am like Flora McPhinsey, with nothing to wear.

Oh!
You see I have not come out, and I have not an evening dress in the world, except one white muslin.

What was Miss Lewison asking about her maid, Rosa?

Oh! poor Lisette! she has been very ill.
She was taken sick in my room, so I would not let them move her, and for nearly a fortnight she has had the chills and fever; I put up a little cot for myself and took care of her.
She promised yesterday, in a violent attack of gratitude, to dress my hair fifty times a day when she gets well.

While Mr. Henderson and Rosa passed on to other topics, Mrs. Carter and her daughters went to the former lady's room.

Girls, she said, throwing aside her heavy velvet cloak, that is one of the best matches
in Philadelphia.

Who, Mr. Henderson?
Yes; your step-father told me about him.
He is the brother of the first Mrs. Carter; he is about forty-five, though as you see, he looks ten years younger.

And very handsome, said Josephine.
He has been a civil engineer, and is very wealthy—immensely so, in fact, for his father left him money, in the English fashion—now
he will be coming here constantly to see Rose; and as Mr. Carter can't be expected to take care of you forever, you had better not let him slip through your fingers.

Widower? asked Marian.
Yes; his wife died of the heart disease
four months after they were married, twenty or thirty years ago; so of course all the romance of that is over long ago.

Perhaps if Mrs. Carter could have seen the little gold locket, with its miniature picture and lock of golden hair, which rested
night and day on Rolfe Henderson's heart,
she might have changed her mind.

Well, Josey, you are the eldest, you may make love to Mr. Henderson, said Marian.
For my part, I am determined to keep my heart free until I see this Mr. Lorimer that Mrs. Gray talks of so much.

Mr. Gray's heir, the young millionaire, as Mrs. Gray called him?

Yes; he has been in New Orleans for some years, but is expected here soon and is to stay with Mrs. Gray; she hopes he will come in time for the ball.

The eventful seventeenth had come and passed, until evening; Mr. and Mrs. Carter, with Josephine and Marian, had left the house and Rosa was heroically trying to forget her longings in a book. Lisette, who had been in a state of great excitement all day,
was fussing about the dressing-room,
arranging pins, combs, brushes, and finally spreading out a number of clothes on the bed.

What are you doing, Lisette? said Rosa.
Only clearing away the room. Ah! she cried, as a violent ring came at the door-bell,
at last.

She flew down stairs, and soon returned with a large bandbox and a tiny note, directed.

Miss Rosa Carter, and containing these words:

"MY LITTLE PET: If uncle Rolfe is not too old an escort for such a little fairy, be dressed at ten o'clock, and he will call for you to go to the Opera House Ball."

Dressed! cried Rosa.
Mais! oui! said Lisette, opening the bandbox. Monsieur Henderson did tell Lisette, he wanted measure for dress, for slipper, for glove! Oh! And the voluble little French woman poured forth her admiration in her own tongue, as she lifted from the box a dress of soft white lace made over blue silk,
and exquisitely trimmed with lilies and forget-me-nots. A head-dress of these flowers in its white box came next, and then the satin slippers, gloves, lace handkerchief,
and even the costly fan to complete the dress. Nothing was wanting; even the delicate lace trimming of the gloves, the thousand little finishing touches which every dress receives, were all complete.

Lisette was rapid in her movements, and the long, silky brown hair was braided low on the rosy cheek, and arranged to accommodate the head-dress; the whole dress was put on artistically in a short time, and Rosa stood blushing before the long glass, astonished at her own loveliness, heightened by the becoming dress.

May I come in? cried Mr. Henderson's laughing voice at the door. I've been hiding ever since I sent up the finery.

The door flew open, and Rosa stood making a deep courtesy before him.

Stand still! he said gently, and upon the snowy throat and round the arms he clasped
a set of pearls, and then presented a bouquet.
From the depths of the band-box Lisette
fished out a long merino cloak and hood,
which she threw over the whole.

Ah! Lisette, you are an able conspirator, said Mr. Henderson, laughing. I should never have remembered half these things without your aid.

Lisette gave a merry laugh that showed her pleasure, and then pointed to the clock.
Nearly eleven! cried Mr. Henderson.—
Come, blue-bird.

The gayety was at its height, and Marian Lewison was standing in one of the boxes, presenting Mr. Lorimer to her mother, when Josephine said suddenly:

Who is that just entered with Mr. Henderson? It is Rosa?

Rosa! cried her mother and sister, leaning forward.

Mr. Henderson! exclaimed Mr. Lorimer.
It is he. Excuse me, Miss Lewison, and with a bow was off.

Rolph Henderson, my kind friend!
Wilfred Lorimer, the young pickie!

This was the greeting the gentlemen exchanged.

Rosa, let me introduce Mr. Lorimer, one of my life torments, said Mr. Henderson.
Miss Carter, Will.

Who hopes the unfavorable report will not prevent Miss Carter's honoring him with her hand for the next set.

Bring her to me afterward, I will be in this box, and turning from the floor, Mr.
Henderson left them together.

I feel you so well from report, that I cannot tell that we are strangers, said Mr. Lorimer. I was your Uncle's pupil in engineering for five years in his New York office, and I heard of little Rosa very often.

Not often that she did of you. Every one of uncle Rolfe's letters were full of his friend Will, his torment, his familiar, as he called you.

I did bother him; but we were the best of friends. I shall find out his quarters tomorrow, and board in the next room that he may not forget me.

Such a ball! Rosa never thought she could be so happy. Mr. Henderson was well known, and his friends were not any more backward in claiming his notice, when they saw the lovely girl on his arm. Lorimer was the first, and the most attentive; but others claimed the fair hand for many sets, and the time glided away rapidly. A few words from uncle Rolfe disarmed Mr. Carter's anger, and the ladies of his party were too polite to display ill-temper in a ball room.

Like other earthly pleasures it came to an end at last; and a very sleepy little Rosa kissed her Uncle at the door and ran up stairs to bed.

Wilfred Lorimer could not get the fair face out of his mind. He had read many of her letters to his friend, and had often wished for an affectionate, intelligent sister like Rosa; but now, somehow, his ideas changed,
and he began to wish for a beautiful, witty, graceful wife—but still like Rosa. But for uncle Rolfe, the wooing would have fared ill, for Marian would think it was she whom Mr. Lorimer came to see, and appropriated his bouquets without remorse; but uncle Rolfe watched quietly and affectively. It was amazing how many times, when Rosa and
Mr. Henderson drove out, they met Mr.
Lorimer; and not an evening did they spend together at concert, theatre, or in his own cozy parlor, but Mr. Wilfred's handsome face and tall figure made the couple a trio.

So at last Mr. Carter received a call, and was informed that his consent alone was wanting to make a wedding party, and he gave it.

Rosa, it is just like an old fairy tale, said
uncle Rolfe; there is the step-mother with the two handsome daughters, and the poor Cinderella who can't go to the ball. Suddenly appeared the fairy god-mother, in the form of an old uncle, who, with the wand of a bank-
note, produces dress, jewels and equipage,
and takes the poor child to the ball, where she meets the prince.

Who, interrupted Wilfred, falls desperately in love, and kneels now for the favor of the fair Cinderella.

As he spoke, he bent on one knee before
Rosa, who with a bright blush, placed her little hand in his.

Captured and chained, cried the wooer,
gaily, as he slipped a ring upon her finger.
Uncle Rolfe!

But uncle Rolfe had vanished, and Wilfred was left alone with Rosa.

War.

If war has its chivalry and its pagantry, it has also its hideousness and its demonic woe.
They tear out the eye, and shatter the jaw,
and rend the cheek. Mercy abandons the arena of battle. The frantic war-horse with iron hoof tramples upon the mangled face.

the throbbing and inflamed wounds, the splintered bones, and heads not the shriek of torment. Crushed into the mire by the wheels of heavy artillery, the victim of war thinks of mother, father, sister, home, moans and dies;
his mangled corpse is covered with a few shovelfuls of earth, and left as food for vultures and dogs, and he is forgotten. He who loathes war, and will do everything in his power to avert it, but who will in the last extremity, encounter its perils, from love of country and of home—who is willing to sacrifice himself and all that is dear to him in life,
to promote the well-being of his fellow men,
will ever receive a worthy homage.—Abbot.

Asparagus.

No family in the country, that has a square
rod of land to spare, should do without a bed of asparagus.

1. Because it is wholesome as food.
2. Because it is profitable.

3. Because it is easily and cheaply produced.

A bed once well prepared and tended, will last for many years,—we do not know how many,—perhaps twenty years.

If one has an old bed, it would be advisable to preserve seed and sow it, to start a new
one. If not, it would be cheaper to purchase the roots than to wait for plants from the seed.

The seeds may be sown as soon as the ground will permit in the spring, or just before the frosts set in, in the fall. Cover the ground with muck or litter, and then with branches, to keep it from blowing off. Take off the litter in the spring and the plants will soon appear.

In planting the roots, set the plants 10 or 12 inches apart, in straight lines, and the rows 15 or 20 inches apart. Put the crown of the roots 3 or 4 inches below the surface, then level the bed with the rake.

The bed should be spaded 15 or 20 inches deep, and manure plentifully mingled with the earth. If it were thoroughly trenched, two feet deep, it would pay well.

The plants should not be cut at all the first year, and but sparingly the second. The third will produce a bountiful crop. In cutting, let the knife pass down under the ground nearly to the crown of the root.

Every autumn the bed should be cleaned
of the dead stems and the ground covered with manure an inch or two deep. In the spring, this should be carefully forked in and the bed kept entirely clear of weeds.

How to Cook Asparagus. Boil it in salt and water. When young it will cook sufficiently in 15 or 20 minutes. Toast white bread and dip it into the water the asparagus
was boiled in. Lay the toast into the dish, and the asparagus on top of it, adding a little butter to each as you proceed.

Such a dish, with some trifling accompaniment will make an excellent dinner, three or four times a week.

Bad Habits in Conversation.

Among the many bad habits which may be observed in society, is that of indulging in expressions which are not literally true.
Truth is a jewel of such inestimable value,
that it ought on no account to be sullied or disregarded.

The bad habit of expressing in an inflated manner has a tendency to make us undervalue
the truth, and must, therefore, be injurious.
Thousands fall into this error, through want of thought or attention. The few following expressions,

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, May 2d, 1863.

SHOP AND HOUSE BREAKING. This was carried on quite extensively in this town on Thursday night. The Apothecary's shop of C. C. Johnson, the Ink and Polish Manufactory of Messrs. A. B. & Wm. H. Packard, the Dentistry Rooms and Millinery shop of Dr. French, and the dwelling house of Mr. John Briesler, were each in their turn visited, and the glass in the windows broken, but the occupants have no evidence that an entrance was effected, as nothing appeared to be taken, except the Messrs. Packard, who miss a few postage stamps. At the store of Mr. Johnson there was a prescription at hand to which the rogues might have helped themselves, without trouble—and so at other places—but in no instance were they so inclined, with the exception of the case mentioned above. Who or where they came from, is of course veiled in mystery. If it was a May-Day frolic, of some reckless hairbrains, a reputation may cost them dear; for they may pluck a flower in which they will find a thorn.

THE FIRE. The alarm on Tuesday evening last was caused by the burning of an old house, in the west part of the town, adjoining the estate of the late Elisha T. Crane, and known as the Asa Nightingale place. It was undoubtedly the work of an incendiary as it had been unoccupied for some time. It was owned by Capt. Lewis Bass and Mr. George Nightingale of this town, and insured at the Dedham Office for three hundred dollars. The engines and Hook and Ladder went to the scene of conflagration but it being a mere shell of a building, they did but little service.

FAST DAY. We certainly are in every sense of the word, a fast people. We have all the elements of greatness within ourselves, and do not lack the energy to bring them out—this is to be seen in every department of the industrial life. We have a soil and climate capable of producing every thing which the heart of man can desire—or to be found under the canopy of heaven, and in such abundance, that we are at our wits ends to devise means to rid ourselves of the surplus. Driven on by an irresistible fate, we cannot resist our destiny whether it be for weal or for woe. Our present family feuds—on both sides—cost three million dollars a day—or about ten hundred million a year; and yet, notwithstanding this immense prodigality, there appears to be enough left to keep the pot boiling, with undiminished confidence in a continued supply.

The proclamation of the President, setting apart Thursday to be observed in a religious manner, was generally responded to by the people. If the act be acceptable, we shall look for a series of brilliant victories, soon to perch upon our arms.

NATIONAL FAST. Services appropriate to the occasion were held in the Unitarian house of worship, and conducted by clergyman representing the congregations unitedly present. Rev. Mr. Rogers of the Methodist Church, Rev. Mr. Heath, Universalist, and Rev. Mr. Wells, Unitarian, conducted the opening exercises. The singing was congregational, and united in by a large audience. Rev. Mr. Thwing, pastor of the Orthodox church, delivered a discourse from Isaiah LVIII. 1: "Show my People their Transgression." If we can secure it we will publish an abstract of the sermon next week.

THE HUTCHINSONS. This talented and gifted troupe of choristers will give one of their interesting Concerts at the Town Hall, on Monday evening next, May 4. They have been on a professional tour since their last appearance before a Quincy audience, visiting some of the most prominent places, North, South, East and West—reaping golden opinions and a golden harvest.

The Hutchinson Family have always been great favorites with the lovers of good music, and their chaste and mirth-provoking songs, eliciting universal praise. It is with pleasure, therefore, that we announce their contemplated visit, assured, that their return will be welcomed by a host of admirers. See card in another column.

NEW STORE. We would call the attention of our readers to the New Store opened by Messrs. Wilson and Blake, on Hancock street, formerly occupied by Mr. Howard Vinal. The gentlemen are well known to our citizens, having been before the public for years—one as a provision dealer, the other as a seller of groceries—and need no comments from us. We learn that when they get fairly started they intend keeping not only groceries, but provisions, &c., &c.

ELEGANT CARPETS AT LOW PRICES.—Purchasers should read the advertisement in our paper, of the New England Carpet Co.

THE SEASON IN MARYLAND. Planters in lower Maryland have not yet planted or sowed their lands. The season is a month behind that of last year. From this fact we may infer what is yet the state of the roads in that region.

OUR HORSE RAILROAD has been brushing up of late, and putting every thing in most capital order for the accommodation of the travelling community. For the spring and summer arrangement, between thirty and forty fresh horses have been added to their already strong team; a number of new cars, of exquisite finish, for ease and comfort, have been placed upon the track; extra trains have been started, which now leave regularly every hour, and the Directors have decided to run an omnibus between the Square and Point, so that all our citizens may enjoy equally the benefits of the road.

This may truly be called the "Accommodation Line of the People," in their communication with the city, for no pains have been spared to make it so: experienced and gentlemanly conductors—neat and commodious cars, and teams that will carry us over the road in about eighty minutes, and drop us in the very heart of the city. The increased patronage which this road is daily receiving, show that the public understand these things.

A TERRIBLE DISASTER. The steamship Anglo-Saxon from Liverpool was wrecked about four miles east of Cape Race, on Monday last. A telegraphic dispatch from the mail officer, says, that all mails were lost, and two hundred and thirty-seven lives out of a total of four hundred and forty-five.

A NEW FLAG. The Niagara Engine Company, threw to the breeze from their flag staff, near the Stone Temple, a new and most beautiful flag yesterday, May morning. It was of the largest dimensions, and made an imposing appearance as it floated on the wind from its elevated position.

IRISH EMIGRATION. It is stated in the Cork Examiner that the number of persons who have left Kerry for the United States during the last fortnight of March exceeded all that had emigrated during the two previous years. Almost every morning crowds of persons, principally of the farming class, were seen taking their departure from the railway station, Killarney, on their way to Queenstown for America. "They rush out from the country (says the Examiner) as they would from a contagion, fearing that by remaining in it they may be reduced to pauperism, and then become permanent inmates of the workhouse." It appears that large sums of money have been sent over from America lately by the relatives of persons in that part of the country, and in many cases tickets have been enclosed in the letters for the passage across the Atlantic.

A BIG THING. It is rumored that the Directors of the Old Colony and Fall River Railroad Company have purchased the Bay State line of boats running between Fall River and New York, and have made arrangements for the continuation of the railroad through Fall River upon its present grade to the satisfaction of the people of that city, by purchasing the estates necessary to that end. It is rumored also that the Old Colony Road has purchased the charter of the Dighton and Somerset road, paying a large sum therefor, say $250,000. If these rumors should prove true, and our informant says they are true, then the controversy between the two rival routes proposed to New York is for ever ended.—New Bedford Standard.

JAPAN. Every thing is very cheap in Japan. A first class house can be purchased for thirty dollars. Servants' work for fifty cents a month. For the use of a horse and groom, one dollar and a half. A person can live comfortably in Japan for two cents a day, or fourteen cents a week.

NUTMEG TAKES. Intelligence has been received by the Dutch Government that Dr. Bernstein, while undertaking a scientific expedition for the Colonial Government of the Netherlands, to the Molucca Islands and New Guinea, had made a discovery in the Islands of Batjan, which may lead to important results in the spice trade. In his ascent of the Sabella range, he discovered, at an elevation of from two thousand six hundred to three thousand eight hundred feet above the level of the sea, a very extensive forest of nutmeg trees laden with nuts of an unusual size, and excellent quality.

A NOVEL LETTER CARRIER. A curious project has been set on foot for the speedy conveyance of letters between England and France. It is proposed to erect in both countries, at a distance of about one thousand metres from the coasts of Calais and Dover, a strong edifice of masonry, containing a steam engine of sufficient power, by means of which an immense wheel, twenty-five metres in diameter, is made to turn forty times a minute. By this rotation a series of wires, forming a gigantic strap, extending across the channel, is coiled round the wheel at one end, say at Dover, and uncoiled at the other, Calais, and conversely. To this strap india-rubber leather bags are to be attached, which are then conveyed across the channel at three thousand metres per minute, so that, within the space of twelve minutes the letters and despatches from one country may be landed in the other.

NOTICE. On and after Monday next Bowditch & Co's Express will leave their office, Hancock House, at 8 1-2 o'clock.

Weymouth. The town meeting on Friday of last week, called to rescind the vote passed at the preceding meeting, in relation to abolishing the School Districts, was much better attended than at the annual March meeting, or the one held the 6th inst. The town voted to rescind all the votes passed at the last meeting, by a large majority, say two to one; so the District system will be continued.

How Coal is Bought and Sold in London. In the city of London coal is sent to the consumer in sacks containing one hundred pounds each. These are loaded on large carts drawn by enormous horses, with scales and weights to each cart, and, if desired by the purchaser, the sack is weighed by the driver. When the honesty of the coal merchant and the integrity of the driver are well established, the weighing of the sack is seldom required. In the purchase of a cart-load of sacks, some three or four of them taken promiscuously, are tested by the scales, and if found correct, the weighing of the remainder of the load is dispensed with. This mode of buying and selling coal is the result of many years' experience in the vast city of London.

EARLY HISTORY. The Historical Magazine, states that the first effort at ship-building on this Continent resulted in a vessel known as the Virginia, of Sagadahoc, which made its first voyage in 1608, and conveyed the Popham colony from the mouth of the Kennebec, Maine, to their homes in the Old World they had so lately left. The governor of this unsuccessful colony, George Popham, had died early in the year, and was the first Englishman who found sepulture in New England soil.

One of our government officials just returned from Peru, tells us that among the first and most frequent inquiries made of him there about our public men was, whether he knew or had ever seen the celebrated American Chemist, Dr. J. C. Ayer of Lowell. His remedies are found in every village from the elevated slopes of the Andes down to the coast, and their remarkable cures seem to attract even more attention there than in this country. The sentiment of wonder at their effects, takes a far deeper hold on a half-civilized and superstitious people than it does with us where the rationale of medical problems is so much more generally understood. No other American has made himself so familiarly known to the masses of the people in foreign countries or excited in them so lively an interest in himself as the Doctor has by his skillful application of chemical science to the treatment of disease.

That must be a dull man who does not feel some pride of country when he finds among distant nations that he is already known and welcome there, through the labors of our Statesmen, Merchants and Scholars, whose renown has become national property, and consequently in some measure his own. Whether Dr. Ayer's remedies do actually cure more than others or not, they have secured the reputation of being a God-send to those afflicted with disease, and where great numbers in any community believe that they owe their health and lives to one's skill, they are sure to feel an interest in him which will find expression when they meet his countrymen.—National Era, Washington, D. C.

PER CENT OF DEPRECIATION. The value of a thing may advance one, two, three or four hundred per cent, but so long as anything sells at any price whatever, it has not fallen 100 per cent, for when it depreciates 100 per cent it is utterly valueless, and this is as low as anything can get. Yet we see some newspapers speak of the old Continental money as depreciating 500 per cent; and it is remarked that in some cases one thousand dollars of paper were sold for one of silver. Even this depreciation is not equal to 100 per cent—it is ninety-nine and nine-tenths per cent.

Deaths.

In Braintree, on the 19th ult., Charlotte F., daughter of the late Alexander and Mrs. Elizabeth A. Fogg, aged 1 year and 8 months.

Beautiful and bright as day,
How brief, Charlotte, was thy stay!
Early called to holy rest;
Angels now among the blest.

Freed from all temptations' snares,
Which increase with growing cares,
What to thee does it bide—
That in innocence you died?

Thy sire offered up his life—
Patriot 'mid the fields of strife,
Thus no nation's sorrows knew;
Nor thy father's love for you.

Now thou knowest more than we,
Happy as thou, may we be,
When vicissitudes are o'er
May we meet to sigh no more.

Poetry.

For the Patriot.
"Our Annie."

When last we saw the Summer twine
Its garlands green and brave,
We little dreamed the Spring would shine
Above our darling's grave;
That ere the bloom of life and light,
We'd smile upon the sod,
The soul that made our household bright
Should pass away to God!

We little dreamed,—so many years
Had left her by our side,
To share our hopes, to soothe our fears,
To win our love and pride,—
That soon, so soon, life's broken strands
Would draw her down to rest,
And we should fold her quiet hands,
Above her silent breast.

And yet though round our hearts to-night,
The shade of sorrow lies,
Though life has lost its wonted light
Before our tear-stained eyes;—
Though brothers, sisters, gather near,
Their fond hearts sick with pain,
We nor call her Annie here,
Nor call her back again.

For Death is but the Gate of Life,
And up its golden stairs,
She walks apart from sin and strife,—
Our child of many prayers;
Nor walks alone,—A brother stands
Whose task of love is given,
To clasp his sister's trembling hands,
And guide her feet to Heaven!

Thus while we bend in tears and gloom,
Above our treasured dust,
Faith lights above the pall and tomb,
The altar fires of Trust;
They clear the path so dark before,—
And future years unfold,
When we shall meet part no more
Beyond the stars of gold!

Float on Forever, Proud Flag of the Free

BY WILLIE F. GILCHRIST.

Bright gleam the stars on our banner to-day,
Illumed by the beam of Liberty's ray, Shedding their warmth thro' the breadth of the earth,

To bright hopes and gladness e'er giving birth,
They speak to the captive in his lone cell,
Bidding him hope to burst tyrannic's spell,
Causing his heart to cry out manfully,
"Float on forever, proud flag of the free."

An army of nations, proud flag of the free,
Hopefully turns, thou proud flag, unto thee;
Old Erin, bleeding from England's foul scars,
Turns her gaze to the "stripes and the stars,"
And Italy, bound with tyrannic's chain,
Eagerly turns to thy beams o'er the main;
They long for the boon of fair liberty,
Float on forever, proud flag of the free.

Round it we'll rally, defend it with sword,
From traitors at home, and fierce foes abroad,
Star after star we add to its fold,
Till to all nations the story be told,
Of our proud UNION, the pride of the world,
Our flag respected wherever unfurled,
And may our motto forever still be,
"Float on forever, proud flag of the free."

Anecdotes.

Sidney Smith tells of a maid who used to boil eggs very well by her master's watch, but one day he could not lend it to her because it was under repair; so she took the time from the kitchen clock, and the eggs
came up nearly raw.

Why did you not take three minutes from the clock as you do from the watch, Mary?
Well, sir, I supposed that would be too much, as the hands on the clock are so much larger.

A private in one of the regiments at Fred-ricksburg cried out during the hottest part of the action:
Och, murder, I'm kilt entirely!
Are you wounded? inquired an officer
near him.

Wounded, is it, yer honor? replied the gallant Emerald; by jabsers, I'm worse than kilted, out and out; wasn't I waiting for the last quarter of an hour for a pull at Jim Murphy's pipe, and there, now, it's shot out of his mouth!

What is your name? said a gentleman to a porter.

My name, replied the fellow, is the same as my father's.

And what is his name? said the gentleman.

It is the same as mine.

Then what are both your names?

Why, they are both alike, said the porter.

Two loafers were spouting the other day,
in front of the bank, when one drew a wallet
from his pocket and said,
He who steals my purse, steals trash.
Yes, replied the other, and he who filches
from you your good name, takes from you what you never had!

When the Persian poet Hafiz was asked by the philosopher Zinda what he was good for, he replied:
Of what use is a flower?
A flower is good to smell, said the philosopher.
And I am good to smell it, said the poet.

SARSAPARILLA

From Quincy Editor, a well-known merchant of Quincy, Mass.

"I have sold large quantities of YOUR SARSAPARIL-

LA, but never yet one bottle which failed of the desired effect and full satisfaction to the patient.

As fast as our people try it, they agree there has been no medicine like it before in our community."

Eruptions, Pimples, Blisters, Pastules,

Ulcers, Sores, and all Diseases of the Skin.

From Rev. Robt. Stratton, Bristol, England.

"I only do my duty to you and the public, when I testify to the merits of your SARSAPARILLA. My daughter, aged ten, had an afflicting humor in her ears,

eyes, and hair for years, which we were unable to cure until we tried your SARSAPARILLA. She has now a clear countenance, and her hair is growing again. From Mrs. Jane E. Rice, a well-known and much-esteemed lady of Domesville, Cape May Co., N. J.

"My daughter has suffered for a year past with a

scrofulous eruption, which was very troublesome.

Nothing afforded any relief until we tried your SAR-SAPARILLA, which soon completely cured her."

From Charles P. Gage, Esq., of the widely-known firm of Gage, Murray & Co., manufacturers of emerald

cut glass in New York, N. Y.

"I had for several years a very troublesome humor in my face, which grew constantly worse and

disfigured my features and became an intolerable affliction. I tried almost everything a man could of medicine and surgery, but without any avail

whatsoever until I took your SARSAPARILLA. It immediately made my face worse, as you told me

it would, but in a few weeks the humor began to form under the blotches, and continued

until I took your SARSAPARILLA. I am now

without any symptoms of the disease that I know of. I enjoy perfect health, and without a doubt owe it to your SARSAPARILLA."

Erysipelas—General Debility—Purify the Blood.

From Dr. Robt. Smith, Houston St., N. Y.

"Dr. AYER's Sarsaparilla is a most effective remedy for the Scrofulous Taint, and for all

Scrofulous Sores by the preserving use of your

SARSAPARILLA, and I have just now cured an attack of Malignant Syphilis. No alternative

we possess equals the SARSAPARILLA you have supplied to the profession as well as to the people."

From J. E. French, Esq., Boston, Mass.

on my right arm, during which time I tried all the best physicians I could reach, and expended many dollars' worth of medicines. The ulcers were so bad that the cords became visible, and the doctors

For the Patriot
The Mermaid's Invitation.
BY WILLIS F. GILCREST.

Come with me to my coral cave,
Far, far, beneath the briny wave,
Mid gems that flash and sparkle bright
As stars in the still summer night;
Then come with me,
And with my love supremely blest,
Mid wreaths of coral we will rest,
Beneath the sea.

The amber shall our footsteps bear,
While waves will make sweet music there,
As on the shore they wildly roll,
Thrilling chords of the inmost soul;
Then come with me
Unto those rocky caverns deep,
Where waves will e'en our souls to sleep
Beneath the sea.

We'll lightly float upon the sea,
When stars are gleaming merrily,
While sea-nymphs all around will sing,
Far o'er the sea their notes will ring,
Then come with me,
And lightly skipping o'er the wave
We'll sink into my coral cave
Beneath the sea.

task. He won't perform it if you do.

In reading the puffs on gravestones we can only hope that the dead are not spoiled
by gross flattery.

A contemporary boasts that he "can stand on his intellectual capital." We suppose he means that he can stand on his head.

It is more important to discover a new source of happiness on earth than a new planet in the sky.

When is a young lady old enough to get married. When she is suited to be man-aged.

It's a shame, husband, that I have to sit here mending your old clothes!—Don't say a word about it, wife; the least said the soon-est mended.

Since the breaking out of the war, up to the first of January, there have been two thousand battles and skirmishes.

No bad man was ever brought to repentance by angry words—by bitter, scornful re-proaches. He will hurl back foul charges in the face of his accuser. Yet guilty and hardened as he seems, he has a heart in his bosom, which may be softened by a gentle voice.

Constant motion is a great law of nature,
nothing being stationary—except pen, ink,
and paper.

We cannot behold the proportions of the great ship of the universe, for we are shut up in the hold.

Miscellaneous.

A Story of Art.

In one of the art-galleries of Vienna hangs
a picture of Venetian life, by the painter Francisco Mayez, which excites peculiar interest in the visitor. It is an interior, an apartment in the Ducal Palace, where three aged senators, evidently the famous Council of Three, are holding one of their secret sessions. One of them, a tall, proud figure, with the finely chiselled, intellectual, dark
face, familiar to us in old Venetian portraits,
has arisen in excitement, and, with a stern
gesture, is addressing a young and beautiful woman, who sits fainting on the stone floor.
She was supported by an official who seems to deprecate the harsh demeanor of the senator. A notary, behind the table in the rear of the group, is making a record of the proceedings.

The story on which this picture is founded is contained in a French romance of the Seventeenth century, and though no authentication of it has been discovered in the Venetian archives, it probably rests on a tradition then current. If not, it is no less a true reflection of the character of the time in Venice, when, amidst the gay pageant of its flourishing and gorgeous life, rose that dark,
mysterious tribunal; irresponsible, remorseless, irresistible as Fate, which held in its unseen hand the whole power of the republic.
The story runs thus:

Valenzia was the daughter of the Senator Gradenigo, by birth, therefore, one of the first ladies of Venice. She had all the rich beauty of her countrywomen, with this remarkable distinction, admired in proportion to its rareness, that her hair was of the loveliest blonde color, changing in the sun to gold, and was so abundant that it fell in heavy shining waves below her knees.

A beautiful Italian woman of nineteen could not be without a lover, and Valenzia
had already yielded the first bloom of her heart to the young patrician Leonardo.— Whether from necessity or the mere caprice of the youthful fancy, the attachment was kept a secret from their respective families,
and the young pair met only in the palace
of Leonardo's bosom friend, Antonio Foscarini.

Even he was not entrusted with the name of the lady who stole, closely veiled, into his house, nor had he even been favored with a glimpse of her face. But the glowing eulogies of her charms, to which he was obliged to listen—especially a description of her wonderful hair—excited his imagination all the more, and the idea fastened itself in his mind that in those golden threads lay some magic power which had enthralled his friend,
for heretofore Leonardo had been insensible to female attractions.

For a time the course of true love ran smooth. Then, suddenly, as if the earth had opened to swallow him up, Leonardo disappeared, and a few days after his dead body was found in one of the canals which vein
this city of the sea. A deep wound in the breast showed that he had been the victim of assassination. Valenzia's grief had all the stormy violence of a first great sorrow. But far more profound was the affliction of the friend, who fully believed that the fatal stab had been given by a jealous rival.

Leonardo! Leonardo! he exclaimed, as he gazed on the bloody corpse, the accursed
blonde locks are answerable for this deed.
From this hour an unconquerable aversion to blonde hair took possession of him, which grew into a monomania. It was the fashion of that day in Venice for the ladies to bleach
their dark hair by the use of chemical preparations, and so strong and undisguised was his contempt for the practice as to obtain for him the sobriquet of "Blonde Hair Hater."

His relatives, anxious to divert his mind
from those morbid fancies and recollections, urged him to marry. He was one of the handsomest of the young patricians of Venice—his figure noble, his face full of intelligence and feeling—and he had a further passport to the favor of the ladies in his singular devotion to friendship, and his corresponding indifference to themselves. Admiration, sympathy, pique, conspired to render him an object of transcendent interest to the fair sex. His friends led him from one gay circle to another, in the hope that he might,
unaware, find himself in the meshes of the little blind god. It was all in vain. At length his father settled the question by an arrangement with the senator Gradenigo for a marriage between the two families—and Antonio found himself pledged to the connection entirely without his own knowledge or consent. But such marriages of domestic or state policy were the rule in Venice, and his heart having no tie elsewhere, he submitted without remonstrance. Preparations were hastened on, and the wedding-day was appointed.

Valenzia had yielded with less reluctance;
nay, even with a degree of mournful pleasure.
She well knew Antonio, though herself wholly unknown to him. Their mutual attachment to the lost Leonardo was a tender bond. His inconsolable grief for one so dear to her had given him a sacred place in her heart. Her own lot, moreover, was full of discomfort and chagrin—her father being one of those stern
and cruel men whose iron rule turns the palace into a detested prison. After the death of her lover she had wished to bury her sorrows in a convent, but the old Senator, who regarded his daughter as an instrument of family aggrandizement, had peremptorily and harshly refused his consent. Life, with the honorable, gentle and true-hearted Antonio, seemed to her crushed spirit a blessed escape
from this bondage; and thus it happened
that she not only assented without objection to her father's plan, but became most anxious to win the affections of her bridegroom.— Knowing too well his morbid prejudice against blonde hair, and the fatal cause of it,
she dared not reveal to him at once the secret of her history, and accordingly stipulated that he should not see her face till the day of their marriage. Antonio, utterly indifferent to the whole affair, had nothing to say in opposition. But etiquette required that he should pay assiduous court to his veiled bride,
and these interviews soon began to have an unexpected interest for him. Her character, softened and exalted by sorrow, harmonized
with the tone of his own heart; her sweet anxiety for his regard, the grace of her shrow-ded figure, wove around him insensibly a tender spell which he wished not to break. As hope awoke in her bosom, she grew more charming, and more conscious of her power;
the morning of a new life of happiness brightened before her, and she looked forward with increasing confidence to the approaching revelation.

Thus the wedding-day arrived under the happiest auspices. A magnificent assembly was gathered in the Gradenigo Palace, and the handsome and joyous bridegroom awaiting with impatience the moment which should disclose to him the features of his bride. But that moment changed all. The instant that Valenzia throwing off her veil, revealed that glory of golden hair floating and glittering about her person, the frenzy returned upon him with double violence.

She has deceived me! he cried, in a wild burst of anger, and breaking his way madly
through the astonished company, rushed forth
without a word of explanation to Gradenigo,
or casting so much as a look on his deserted bride.

That from this hour a deadly feud, like that of the Montagues and Capulets, divided the house of Foscarini and Gradenigo, was a matter of course. Valenzia alone could not share this feeling. She blamed her own fraud, so innocently meant, as the sole cause of her calamity, and mourned her second lover with a sorrow far more deep and lasting than she had given to the first. Her father gave himself no rest in his efforts to avenge
the dishonor of his house. But for the present he was able only to obtain the expatriation of young Antonio, and this under the honorable form of an embassy to France. He bided his time.

After four years absence, Antonio returned to Venice. His welcome home was a summons, the fruit of Gradenigo's labors, to appear before the Council of Three to answer
the charge of disobedience in certain points to the orders of the Council. His bold defence and the conclusive proofs he adduced of the skillful manner in which he had performed his mission, procured his honorable acquittal. But plots thickened around his path; enemies lurked for him on every hand,
and time after time he barely escaped through the warnings of an unknown friend. That friend was no other than the true-hearted Valenzia, who watched over him like a protecting angel, nor even relinquished her chosen office when he entered into a mariage engagement with a noble Spanish lady.

But it was an opportunity long watched for by her father who now accused him before the Council of a secret alliance with a foreign power, and procured his imprisonment. Valenzia had warned him in season, and had arranged his flight; but, too proud to succumb to injustice, he hesitated till it was too late. He was brought in chains to the Ducal Palace, where, according to the ancient usages of Venice, a speedy trial, to be followed by a speedier death, awaited him.

Valenzia did not despair even yet. By gold and tears she gained an entrance to the Doge's Palace, and having won the overseer to her interests, she descended with him, at midnight, into those damp and gloomy depths beneath, whose dread secrets only the last day will fully reveal. At any other time, the scene would have frozen her blood with horror. The black passages into which the cheerful light of day had never shined, and slimy with the moisture of centuries, the heavy doors, bolted and barred, which the light of the guide dimly disclosed on either hand, the sepulchral silence broken only by the dull play of the water against the outside walls, and the loud knocking of her own heart, were full of dark suggestions, of pitiless cruelty and unutterable woe. But that which would have deterred a weaker soul, but made her bold; for was she not bringing to her best-beloved deliverance from these horrors? And was there not exquisite joy in the thought that now at length he could not fail to understand and forgive her? The jailer unbars a door; she steps in trembling with fear and hope. The next instant the door is shut behind her, is locked and barred with malignant haste, and the unhappy girl finds herself a prisoner! Her pretended helper was a true servant of the republic. He had betrayed her to her father. All was lost.

With the first gray of the morning she was brought, wearing the man's habit in which she had disguised herself, before the Council of Three, of which her father was a member.
The first glance told her there was no hope of pity from him. As she entered, he started passionately from his seat, and poured upon his wretched daughter, as she stood trembling
before him, a torrent of the bitterest reproach, ending with a fearful curse. Exhausted by the terrors of the preceding night, and foreseeing her own and Antonio's doom, she yielded to this last stroke, and sunk in a deep swoon into the arms of the jailer. Even he,
her betrayer, hardened as he was in crime,
was shocked by the unnatural scene.

Signor, he cried, you are here as the servant of the state, and not as the avenger of your personal wrongs. You are the representative of justice, but you have no commission to curse your own child.

This is the moment chosen by the artist for his picture.

Through what fortunes the hapless pair,
with fates so strangely severed and yet so strangely united, passed to the repose of death, we are not informed. Only so much is known, that from this time the noble and brave Antonio, the flower of the patrician youth of Venice, and Valenzia, the fairest of her daughters, were seen and heard of no more among the living.

Our Nation's Sin.

A brief abstract of a Discourse by Rev. E. P.
Thwing, April 30th, 1863.
Text.—Is. 58: 1.

Our Fast days have almost justified each other of late. Besides our church fasts and State fasts, three similar appointments have been made by the authorities at Washington since the war began. The nursing of Rebellion was but two weeks old, when the feeble voice of "an old Public Functionary"
was heard, begging the people to pray the Lord to avert the mischievous consequences
then seen to be the results of criminal neglect or more criminal connivance. The fast of January 4th, 1861 was observed by a pious few, but the mass of the people either disregarded or despised the call. The events of the following summer wrought a wonderful change. Sadly, soberly and in earnest we kept our autumnal fast. We were smarting under defeat. Our pride was mortified. True confessions ascended from humbled hearts.
The next season opened auspiciously. The victories in Tennessee filled the land once more with rejoicings. But the summer again brought disaster and sorrow. We now are beginning to learn that we have serious work
in hand, and that our strength is not in navies, though iron clad, nor in armies, though multitudinous, but in God alone. The resolutions of the Senate and the Proclamation, by which this National Sabbath is appointed are indications of this fact.

The text is God's call to Isaiah to "show
the people their transgression and the house of Jacob their sin." Their sin was idolatry,
a retrograde movement towards the Polythe-istic ideas of paganism. This is not our sin.
What is it? We might specify particular evils, but it is not our great, generic sin, the unlawful preponderance of material appetite over our spiritual life? We have sought physical good with absorbing zeal. The interests of trade, the interests of agriculture,
the interests of manufactures have been guarded with greedy eye. Moral principles succumb before insatiable selfishness. The "Almighty Dollar" rules too generally.
Passion for power, lust of wealth, love of office have debauched the conscience, while truth, equity, honor and loyalty have fallen in the dust. [The preacher illustrated this point at length and then showed the true
method of readjusting our relations with God.]
Peace, which is "the effect of righteousness"
is the only permanent peace for the individual or the state. Tranquility can be secured by no other means. Change of our government to a monarchy cannot secure it. New compromises with perjured men cannot secure it; still less, submission to treason and rebellion. We must settle our controversy with God. With a sedulous use of the means in our power we may then hope, with his blessing, to conquer a peace. Let him be our ally and we have nothing to fear. Let ours

be that serenity of faith so beautifully expressed by that great and good man whose precious dust lies here beneath our feet in yonder
crypt, President John Quincy Adams—
"knowing that except the Lord keep the city,
the watchmen waketh but in vain, with fervent supplication for his favor, to his over-ruling providence, I commit with humble, but fearless confidence, my own fate and the future destinies of my country." With all its limitations and deficiencies, our national administration is the representative of our political life. It must therefore be sustained!
"Render unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's," carries the same authoritative-ness as the clause which stands in juxtaposition,
"Render unto God the things which are God's." In the words of the immortal Washington: "Let the reins of government be braced and held with a steady hand, and every violation be reprobated."

From fees that would the land devour,
From guilty pride and lust of power,
From wild sedition's lawless hour,
O Lord deliver us.
From blinded zeal by faction led,
From giddy change by fancy bred,
From bloody treason's serpent head,
Good Lord preserve us free."

How True.

Every editor knows the truth of the following from the New York Journal:—

It is one of the hardships of our profession that its working wheels—brains and hearts—are not allowed to lag for sickness, or stop for calamity or sorrow. The judge may adjourn his court; the school and the workshop
may close shutters; the mourner may veil features, and turn friend and stranger from the door—but the journalist must forget the tomorrow of to-day—must write gaily and freshly as a news-monger, on the trifles of the hour, whatever burden has been laid on that same hour, by Providence, for his heart and brain as a man. It sometimes tries and mocks—as the world that reads what is thus written would never dream of.

What Is a Lady?

A great deal of argument is going the rounds
respecting the title of lady and the name of woman. The expression lady is so much abused, that I infinitely prefer the sweet, unpretending title of woman. If we could but sift the chaff from the wheat, abrogate all the self-styled ladies there could be no objection to the title, but ministers of grace defend us
from some ladies of the present day, who do not even know why a woman should be so called. A lady must possess perfect refinement and intelligence. She must be gracious, affable, and hospitable, without the slightest degree of fussiness. She must be a Christian, mild, gentle, and charitable, unostentatious, and doing good by stealth. She must be deaf to scandal and gossip. She must possess discrimination, knowledge of human nature,
and tact enough to avoid offending one's weak points, steering wide of all subjects which may be disagreeable to any one. She must look upon personal cleanliness and freshness of attire next to godliness. Her dress must be according to her means, not flashy. Abhorring everything like soiled or faded finery
or mock jewelry, her pure mind and clear conscience will cause the foot of time to pass
as lightly over the smooth brow as if she stepped on the flowers, and as she moves with quiet grace and dignity, all will accord her instinctively the title of lady. If I had time and you patience, I could present the other view of the case, looking upon this picture and upon that. But when one constantly comes in contact, in omnibuses, cars, stores,
the promenade, places of public amusement,
wherever women are generally found, with those who loudly arrogate to themselves the contested title, can you wonder at the disgust
it produces?

What One Shell Can Do.

The steamer Mercedita, which recently arrived at Philadelphia, from Port Royal, requires repairs to her engine and hull, caused by damages from collision with the ram Palmetto State, off the harbor of Charleston.
About thirty feet of her side will have to be taken out. Seven planks and two timbers were stove in by the ram's prow, making a hole five feet vertically and three feet horizontally. A shell of one hundred pounds weight passed through the ship, cutting one man in two, and by going through the steam chimney, three men were scalded to death,
three others badly scalded and a number slightly. It passed out the port side, destroying six planks and two timbers, making a clear hole three feet by two and a half feet
and shattering the planks eight or nine feet further. The shell exploded as it passed out.
It is the opinion of the steamer's officers that had there been a swell of the sea at the time,
she must have gone to the bottom like a stone.

Geological Wonder.

About thirty years ago somebody made the discovery that the ice fields of Siberia contained immense numbers of fossils of elephants and mastodons. Where they came from, or how they got there, is a problem which perhaps may never be solved; their existence,
however, was no chimera, and as ivory is one of the most valuable commodities of trade in all nations, some utilitarian Englishman conceived the idea of turning these vestiges of a former epoch to profitable account. Accordingly, about the year 1835, Thompson, Bonner & Co., a rich London firm, fitted out an expedition to seek for ivory in the Siberian ice. Novel and incredible as it seemed, the expedition was crowned with complete success. The ships returned to England richly laden with the choicest ivory; and even to the present time, although the world knows little about it, the ivory market is mainly supplied from the ice fields of Siberia.

Nouns of Multitude.

A little girl was looking at the picture of a number of ships, when she exclaimed, "See what a flock of ships!" We corrected her by saying that a flock of ships was called a fleet, and a flock of sheep was called a flock. And here we may add, for the benefit of the foreigner who is mastering the intricacies of our language in respect to nouns of multitude, that a flock of girls is called a bevy, and a bevy of wolves is called a pack, and a pack of thieves is called a gang, and a gang of angels is called a host, and a host of porpoises
is called a shoal, and a shoal of buffaloes is called a herd, and a herd of children is called a troop, and a troop of partridges is called a covey, and a covey of beauties is called a galaxy, and a galaxy of ruffians is called a horde, and a horde of rubbish is called a heap, and a heap of oxen is called a drove,
and a drove of blackguards is called a mob,
and a mob of whippers is called a school, and a school of worshippers is called a congregation, and a congregation of engineers is called a corps, and a corps of robbers is called a band, and a band of locusts is called a swarm,
and a swarm of people is called a crowd, and a crowd of gentle folk is called the elite, and the elite of the city thieves and rascals are called the roughs, and a miscellaneous crowd of city folks is called the community or the public, according as they are spoken of by the religious community or the secular public.

Presence of Mind.

If you should happen to meet with an accident at table, endeavor to preserve your composure, and do not add to the discomfort
you have created, by making an unnecessary fuss about it. An anecdote is related of a very accomplished gentleman, which illustrates the idea we would inculcate. When carrying a tough goose, he had the misfortune to send it entirely out of the dish into the lap of a lady who sat next to him; on which he looked her full in the face, and said, with the utmost coolness, "Madam, I will thank you for that goose."

Women and Children.

But I have seen scores of women leave school, leave their pinnos, and drawing and fancy work, and all manner of pretty and pleasant things, and marry and bury themselves. You hear of them about six times in ten years, and there is a baby each time.—
"They crawl out of the farther end of the ten years, yellow, and wrinkled, and lank; teeth
gone, hair gone, roses gone, plumpness gone;
freshness, and vivacity, and sparkle, every thing that is dewy, and springing, and spontaneous, gone, gone, gone. This our Tract Society book puts very prettily:

"She wraps herself in the robes of infantile, and burying her womanly nature in the tomb of childhood, patiently awaits the sur-
coming resurrection in the form of a noble,
high-minded, world-stirring son, or a virtuous, lovely daughter. The nursery is the mother's chrysalis. Let her abide for a little season, and she will emerge triumphantly, with ethereal wings and a happy flight."

But the nursery has no business to be the mother's chrysalis. God never intended her to wind herself up into a cocoon. If He had,
He would have made her a caterpillar. She has no right to bury her womanly nature in the tomb of childhood. It will surely be required at her hands. It was given her to see itself in the broad, bright day, to root itself
fast and firm in the earth, to spread itself wide to the sky, that her children in their infancy and youth and maturity, that her husband in his strength and in his weakness, that her kinsfolk and neighbors and the poor of

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, May 9th, 1863.

THE MAY FESTIVAL which was held at the Town Hall, on Friday evening, May 1st, in behalf of the Ladies' Soldiers' Aid Association, was a happy affair, and in point of interest and attractions, the most successful of that class of amusements, which has been given during the season. The house, at an early hour was filled to its utmost capacity, with a crowd of welcome visitors, who came with hearts in their hands, to aid in the good work, and enjoy the rich intellectual treat which had been provided for them. The tableaux and Parlor Theatricals were the absorbing subjects of interest in the evening's entertainment. Many of the former were original conceptions—novel, and faultlessly portrayed. No. 1—"May Festival," was the opening piece—twenty young Misses, dressed in white, emblematic of the season, presented themselves—the effect was magical. G—"Flower of the Family"—in this scene on the rising of the curtain, the only object observable, was, to appearance, a barrel of flour; at the next change, the chrysalis shell opened, and out stepped a tiny piece of humanity; the surprise to the audience was so unexpected and agreeable, that the new comer was welcomed in the most enthusiastic manner. 11—"The Artist's Dream;" this was a fancy picture; on the wall was suspended a large picture frame, over which this gauze was drawn, in the back ground, fairy figures in human form, were seen to pass, like the flitting fancies or creative conceptions of the artist's dreams; it had many admirers. "The Loan of a Lover," a theatrical representation—was received well, and put the house into the best of humor. But where all excelled, we forbore to particularize. The address of fortune, during the evening, also, presided, and distributed her favors among her favorites; Mr. Jesse Buntin, in a game of chance, drew the rich prize of an elegant African, and others were fortunate in the guess cakes.

Twelve o'clock came round before the company thought of separating, and when they did, it was with the pleasing reflection, that the exhibition in every respect had been successful; furnishing a pleasant entertainment, and a pile of substantial aid to meet the pressing wants of our brave soldiers.

THE HUTCHINSONS. The audience on Tuesday evening last was not large, on account of the weather, but it was an appreciative and enthusiastic one. These charming vocalists certainly possess a wonderful power to stir the feelings of their auditors. We have heard good singing by some of the prima donnas of this and other lands, but never with more satisfaction than we had in listening to the performances of this gifted family. Their unaffected simplicity and naturalness, their fervor and heartiness, imparted a charm to their singing, which, aside from their artistic excellencies, elicited frequent and prolonged applause. The variety of music, too, seemed to delight every one. There were ballads and descriptive pieces; songs full of humor and pathos; hymns of liberty and patriotism—all of which were rendered in excellent taste. We hope the day is not distant when our citizens may be favored with a second benefit.

THE PROSPECT OF FRUIT. We notice that some of the buds on the pear trees have been blasted, probably by the sudden changes in the weather, still there is a good prospect of a fair crop. The apple trees bore so abundantly last year, that we cannot expect much of a crop this season, still some of the trees indicate a full blossom, others an average one. The cherry and plum trees are full of buds, nearly ready to burst forth; and, in fact, we noticed a few blossoms on the former. Also some tiny flowers on the strawberry plants which shows distinctly that spring is advancing, and summer will soon be knocking for admittance. Still the present week has been one of the most disagreeable of the season. The cold, damp, raw, cutting east wind has put us very forcibly in mind of our overcoats, and sent a chill all over us, at the thought of thin dresses and white pants.

APPOINTMENTS. At a meeting of the Selectmen held at their room on Saturday, the 25th day of April, Joseph G. Brackett, John Chamberlin, James M. Glover, Ebenezer Cleverly and Samuel Adams were appointed Engineers of the Fire Department for the year ensuing.

At a meeting of the Engineers held April 28th, Joseph G. Brackett was chosen Chief Engineer and John Chamberlin was chosen Clerk of the Board of Engineers.

INDICTMENTS FOR POISONING. The Grand Jury for the Superior Court of this County returned indictments on Tuesday at Dedham, against Benjamin Hamblin of Dorchester for poisoning his wife, and against Henry C. Brown of Dedham, for an attempt to poison.

VERY NATURAL. There is a man out West who labors under the delusion that "Hon." placed before a man's name stands for honest.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, MAY 5, 1863.

The collision of the opposing armies in Virginia—awful, frightful, and pregnant in future consequences of the highest character, is the theme of all circles here. Since Monday morning the excitement from war news has been intense; the public mind is at fever heat, and business matters are but of secondary importance. To the moment of dictating this, the thrilling accounts of the great battle of Saturday, Sunday and Monday, are quite indefinite, coming from other sources than headquarters—but there is every reason to believe that the army of General Hooker will pass this fearful ordeal in triumph. The present picture presents the facts that Frederickburg is ours! that during the battle, four thousand prisoners and large munitions of war have been captured by our gallant army; that Lee, the accomplished rebel General, has been outflanked at all points—that in the terrible series of battles since Friday, the rebels have been three times repulsed with great slaughter, fighting with superhuman efforts, worthy of a better cause, and their retreat by railroad line to Richmond cut off, in consequence of our forces having destroyed the bridges in the rear of the rebels across the Mattaponi River. The banks of the Rappahannock are crimsoned with the blood of thousands; nay, more, that this mighty conflict was still progressing and the battle raged on Monday. If Hooker wins and enters Richmond, his fame is immortal. Accounts reach us from every quarter of his army that our troops as a whole fought with great gallantry, if we except some cowardly Dutchmen and a Regiment of Germans attached to our corps. The successful movements of our army in Virginia, are glorious auguries, that the war will soon end by conquest—the only way it should end—with that rebellious foe, who dared to blight the most perfect government of civil and religious liberty that has ever been devised by human wisdom. As we expected, the success of Hooker has been at the great sacrifice of life in his brave army, for which we all sorrow; one Major General killed, two or more Brigadier Generals wounded; some twenty Colonels killed and wounded, besides a host of other officers inferior in military rank, but whose lives with the thousands privates that have fallen, are as precious to the country and their friends as those clothed with the highest insignia of office. Grief and sadness hover over the hearthstones of many, very many families of the noble dead of our army who have offered up their lives at the shrine of liberty. It is not inappropriate to use the classic phrase here: Dulce et decorum est pro patria mori. We await further intelligence from the seat of war with deep interest, and shall be able to acquaint you with decisive results in the Patriot of Saturday next.

EPISODICAL.

The worthy correspondent "P" in your paper two weeks since, has honored the Boston Correspondent with a personal allusion. He infers from my late effusions in the columns of your paper, that my Unionism until that day has been "conditional." The files of your paper will show otherwise. I deny the soft impeachment and ask him for his proofs. Of the Douglas school of politics before the last Presidential election, since the first beligerent blow was struck by the rebels at the bombardment of Fort Sumter, "I have stood by the Flag." My motto is fidelity, sacred and unflinching to the Constitution and Laws of the country, and in upholding the Federal Government in every effort to crush this wicked rebellion, and to punish all traitors North or South.

Later: The news from General Hooker's army is not so favorable this evening, but we hope for the best.

AMERICAN SALVE. Mr. Daniel Monk, of this town, has compounded from the receipt of an eminent physician, a new article to which he has prefixed the above name. Its healing qualities, in such complaints as scalds, burns, cuts, chapped hands, and kindred ills, is admitted by those who have used it, to excel, and in many other respects is preferable, to the celebrated Russia Salve. It boasts no foreign name, but is a purely domestic medicine. We have numerous testimonials, setting forth its many virtues, and recommending it to general favor. No family should be without it. For sale by the trade generally.

LUNCH. There will be a free lunch at the Mariposa Saloon this evening.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

I would here return my sincere thanks to the officers and members of Company G, for the kind manner in which they have seen fit to remember me in this hour of my trial and need; and also, for the deep interest they have ever shown for the welfare of my late lamented husband, and those connected with him, convinced, that in the trying ordeal he had to pass through, before death closed the scene, that he received every aid and comfort from his generous comrades in arms, which sympathy could dictate or human means furnish. May the God of the widow and orphan direct and bless you, and the day be not far distant, when peace shall invite you home, to enjoy once more those social blessings from which you have so long been estranged, and receive the heart's true homage from the lips of those whom your liberality and aid has so gently befriended, is the prayer of Your grateful recipient, MELISSA NOTT.

DEPOSITS OF COIN. Assistant Treasurer Lincoln gives notice that hereafter interest at the rate of 5 per cent. will be allowed on deposits under the act of Congress, approved Feb. 25, 1862, for not less than thirty days, subject to be withdrawn after ten days' notice. Deposits heretofore made at 4 per cent. may be withdrawn at any time, without notice, for the purpose of being re-deposited at 5 per cent.

BARFOOTED REBELS! Says Mrs. Partington,—Law me! No wonder they complain. Why don't their mothers buy them some shoes? Taint longer ago than yesterday, since like came home from school crying, cause he had stub'd his toe, poor fellow. I told him he shouldn't go barefooted another day,—and I went right up to Cummings' Boot and Shoe Emporium, and got him a real nice pair, and he has been as happy as a kitten ever since.

RICH PLATE. In one of the windows on Broadway, (N. Y.) there is on exhibition a piece of plate that attracts attention. It is a massive silver butter dish, in a crimson case. The cover of the dish has on it as an ornament an elaborately encaused cradle, which holds the figure of a child. It has been made in accordance with an old and quaint custom of the graduates of Columbia College. The butter dish is made at the expense of the graduating class, and becomes the property of the member of the class who is father of a child.

PRINCE OF WALES WEDDING. Wm. H. Russell "did up" the account of the Prince of Wales wedding for the London Times and was paid 100 guineas therefor; and is going to have the benefit of having it published in a book form besides. The sale of the London newspapers describing the ceremony was very great, greater in fact than ever before known in England. The Times sold 139,000 copies, the Daily Telegraph 220,000, and the illustrated London News 200,000.

RESOLUTIONS

OF THE Quincy High School Memorial Society,
on the death of Miss Helen J. Savil, of Quincy, who died at Wakefield, (N. H.) April 30th, 1863, aged 19 years and 5 months.

Whereas,—He who doeth all things well has been pleased in His inscrutable wisdom to remove from earth's trials and temptations, our former schoolmate and much loved companion, Helen J. Savil;

Therefore Resolved,—That we deeply lament this earthly separation from one whose memory, as a valued associate and constant friend, we have ever loved to linger upon, and though with many pangs of sorrow we realize that our greetings with her in time are to be enjoyed on earth no more, yet we bow with submission before the will of an All-Wise Father, resting in the hope that when the "mortal put on immortality," it was but a transfer from temporal cares to eternal happiness.

Resolved,—That the Memorandum Society has lost in this death of its member, one who possessed the sterling traits of a true character, and who was ever loved by her associates, for her many social and moral virtues.

Resolved,—That recognizing in this dispensation the mysteries of Divine Providence and God's overruling power, and realizing upon how slender a thread life hangs, we will endeavor by Christian precept and example, so to live that when our summons come for us to take our places in the "silent halls of death" we may go "sustained by an unfaltering trust, like one who wraps the drapery of his couch about him and lies down to pleasant dreams."

Resolved,—That we sympathize with her parents and friends in their hour of deep affliction, and commend them to God, assured that in His limitless goodness and mercy, he will mete unto them comfort and consolation, pouring healing balm into their wounded hearts.

Resolved,—That a copy of these Resolutions be printed in the Quincy Patriot and a copy be furnished her parents.

A. F. NIGHTINGALE, President.

G. RANDALL, Vice President.

Summary of Intelligence.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

The first thunder shower of the season passed over New Bedford Saturday night.

The Adjutant General has decided that the period of service of the nine months regiments ends in nine months from the date when their field officers were commissioned and sworn in.

A new paper has lately made its appearance in Alexandria, (La.) printed upon the white side of wall paper. Printing paper cannot be obtained.

A new electric light is exhibiting in London. A strip of silver foil, pasted on the ceiling, is said to give a light equal to two thousand candles.

It is against the rules of Quakerism to allow a piano in the house. A rich Quaker in Philadelphia, who bought one for the use of his daughter a few weeks ago, was severely reprimanded, and would have been read out of church but for his wealth.

It is stated that the preparations for the attack on Charleston cost one hundred and fifty millions of dollars. The fight lasted but half an hour, and at the rate of five millions of dollars per minute.

Of one hundred parts into which the surface of the earth is to be divided, Europe contains seven; Africa twenty-one; Continental Asia thirty-three; New Holland, &c. eight; South America fifteen; North America sixteen.

The entire army has been paid up to the first of May, the last dollar having been issued, making a grand total of fifty-nine millions of greenbacks.

Tom Thumb has an insurance upon his life and that of Mrs. Thumb, amounting to $50,000.

The negroes employed by General Foster, to assist in defending Washington, (N. C.) made such good soldiers that the General is reported to have become reconciled to the plan of employing negro troops.

Poetry.

The House that Jack Built.

Behold the mansion reared by dædal Jack,
See the malt, stowed in many a plethoric sack
In the proud cirque of Ivan's bivouac;
Mark how the rat's felonious fangs invade
The golden stores in John's pavilion laid.
Anon, with velvet foot and Tarquin strides,
Subtle Grimalkin to his quarry glides—
Grimalkin grim, that slew the fierce rodent
Whose tooth insidious Johann's sackcloth rent.
Lo! now the deep-mouthed canine foe's assault,
That vexed the avenger of the stolen malt,
Stored in the hallowed precincts of that hall
That rose complete at Jack's creative call.
Here stalks the impetuous cow with crumpled horn,
Whereon the exasperating bound was torn,
Who bayed the feline slaughter-beast that slew
The rat perdidious, whose keen fangs ran through
The textile fibres that involved the grain
Which lay in Han's inviolate domain.
Here walks forlorn the damsel crowned with rose,
Lactiferous spoils from vaccine dogs who drew
Of that coruscate beast whose tortuous horns
Tossed to the clouds, in fierce, vindictive scorn,
The harrying hound, whose braggart bark and air
Arched the lithe spine and reared the indignant fur
Of Pass, that with vermicular claw,
Beheld the weird rat, in whose insatiate maw
Lay reeking malt that erst in Juan's courts we saw.
Robed in senescent garb, that seems, in sooth,
Too long a prey to Crono's iron tooth,
Behold the man whose amorous lips incline,
Full with young Eros's osculatory sign,
To the 'lorn maiden whose lact-albic hands
Drew alba-lactic wealth from lacteal glands
Of that immortal bovine, by whose horns
Diotri to realms ethereal was borne
The beast cutaneous, vexer of that sly
Ulysses quadrupedal, who made die
The old marducian rat that dared devour
Antedecanses ate in John's domestic bower.
Lo! here, with hirsute honors doled, succulent
Of sponaceous locks, the priest who linked
In Hyæna's golden bands the torn unthrif,
Whose means exiguous started from many a rift
Even as he kissed the virgin all forlorn,
Who milked the cow with implicated horn,
Who in fine wrath the canine torturer skied
That dared to vex the insidious muricide
Who let auroral effluence through the pelt
Of the sly rat that robbed the palace Jack had built.
The loud cantankerous Shanghai comes at last,
Whose shouts arouse the harem ecclesiast,
Who seeth the vows of Hyæna's sacrament
To him who, robed in garments indigent,
Exorcises the damned lachrymose.
The omni-giver of that horned brute morose,
That tossed the dog, that worried the cat, that kilt
The rat, that ate the malt, that lay in the house
That Jack built.

For the Patriot.

My Early Home by the Blue Hills.

Dedicated to W. T. Page, Slough, Mass.

My childhood home beside those hills,
Whose towering heights so blue appear,
Oft draws my heart and bends me still,
To those rough wildwood scenes so dear.
The little brooklets hurrying on
To add their mite to larger streams,
Made music for that youthful morn,
Such as no other music seems.
But now removed from scenes so dear,
And parted from the friends I loved,
My mind goes back to linger there,
And wonder why it ever roved.
Still towering those blue hills will stand,
Though in the grave this body lie,
Till, on the Resurrection morn,
The voice of God be heard on high.
Then as all hills shall pass away;
And time on Earth shall be no more;
May I with loved ones hail the day,
We meet on Canaan's happy shore.

Anecdotes.

A gentleman was about completing the sale of a horse which he was very anxious to dispose of, when a little urchin appeared and innocently inquired, Grandpa, which horse you goin' to sell? that one you built a fire under yesterday to make him draw? The bargain was at an end.

An old lady, meeting a Cambridge man, asked him how her nephew behaved himself. Truly, says he, he's a fine fellow, and sticks close to Catherine Hall, (the name of a college).
I vow, said she, I feared as much; he was always a hankering after the girls from a boy.

An old lady, whose son was about to proceed to the Black Sea, among other parting admonitions, gave him strict injunctions not to bathe in that sea, for she did not want to see him come back a nigger.

Ma, said little Whitehead, I don't think Solomon was so rich as they say he was.
Why, my dear? said her astonished ma.
Because he slept with his fathers; and I think if he had been so very rich he would have had a bed of his own!

Fluid Extract Buchu,

A Positive and Specific Remedy

For Diseases of the

Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel and

Dropsical Swellings.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excites the ABSORBENTS into healthy action, by which the WATERY OR CALCAREOUS depositions, and all UNNATURAL ENLARGEMENTS are reduced, as well as pain and inflammation, and is good for MEN, WOMEN, OR CHILDREN.

HELMHOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU

FOR WEAKNESSES

Arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, or Abuse.

Indisposition to Exercise, Loss of Power,

Dimness of Memory, Difficulty of Breathing,

Weak Nerves, Trembling of the Skin,

Horror of Disease, Wakefulness,

Dimness of Vision, Pain in the Back,

Universal Lassitude, Flushing of the Face,

the Muscular System, Eruption of the Face,

Hot Hands, Pallid Countenance.

These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes soon follow

IMPOTENCY, FATUITY, EPILEPTIC

FITS.

In one of which the patient may expire. Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "dreadful diseases,"

Insanity and Consumption.

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering, but none will confess. The records of the insane Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion. The constitution, once affected with Organic Weakness, requires the aid of medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system, which HELMHOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females, Females, Females,

Old or young, single, married, or contemplating Marriage—in many affections peculiar to Females the Extract Buchu is unquestionably the other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of the customary Evacuations, Ulcerated or Scirrhous state of the Uterus, Leucorrhœa, or Whites, Grethra, itching pain and inflammation, so frequent in this class of diseases, and expelling POISONOUS, DISEASED, AND WORN-OUT MATTER.

Thousands upon thousands who have been the victims of Quackery and who have paid Heavy Fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the Poison has, by the use of Powerful Astringents, been dried up in the system, to break out in aggravated form, and perhaps after marriage.

Use Helmhold's Extract Buchu

For all Affections and Diseases of

THE URINARY ORGANS,

Whether existing in Male or Female, from whatever cause originating, and no matter of how long standing.

BLOOD! BLOOD! BLOOD!

Helmhold's Highly Concentrated Compound

Fluid Extract Sarsaparilla Syphilis

This is an affection of the Blood, and attacks the Sexual Organs, Linings of the Nose, Ears, Throat, Windpipe, and other Mucous Surfaces, making its appearance in the form of Ulcers. Helmhold's Extract Sarsaparilla purifies the Blood, and removes all Scaly Eruptions of the Skin, giving to the Complexion a Clear and Healthy color. It being prepared expressly for the cure of complaints of the Blood, its Properties are preserved to a greater extent than any other preparation of Sarsaparilla.

THE peculiar taint or

infection which we call

SCROFULA lurks in

the constitutions of

multitudes of men. It is a disease which is produced by an en-

feebled, vitiated state

of the blood, wherein

that fluid becomes incompetent to sustain

the vital forces in their

vigorous action, and

consequently the system

falls into disorder and

decay. The scrofulous

contamination is variously caused by mercurial

disease, low living, disordered digestion from

indulgence in food, impure air, filth and filthy habits, the depressing virus, and, above all, by

the venereal infection. Whatever be its origin,

it is hereditary in the constitution, descending

from parents to children unto the third and

fourth generation; "indeed, it seems to be the seed of him who says, "I will visit the iniquities

of the fathers upon their children." The

diseases which it originates take various names,

according to the organs it attacks. In the

lungs, scrofula produces tubercles, and finally

consumption; in the glands, swellings which

suppurate and become alcerous sores; in the

stomach and bowels, derangements which produce indigestion, dyspepsia, and liver complaints; on the skin, eruptive and cutaneous

affections. These all having the same origin,

require the same remedy, viz, purification and regeneration of the blood. But the blood,

and these dangerous distempers leave you

With feeble, foul, or corrupted blood, you can-

not have health; with that "life of the flesh"

healthy, you cannot have scrofulous disease.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

is compounded from the most efficient anti-

dotics that medical science has discovered for

this afflicting distemper, and for the cure of the diseases it entails. That it is far superior to any other remedy yet devised, is known by all

who have given it a trial. That it does combine virtues truly extraordinary in their effect

upon this class of complaint, is indisputably

proven by the great multitude of publicly

known and remarkable cures it has made of the following diseases: King's Evil or

Glandular Swellings, Tumors, Erup-

tions, Pimples, Blisters and Sores, Ery-

sipelas, Rose or St. Anthony's Fire, Salt

Rheum, Scald Head, Coughs from tu-

berculous deposits in the lungs, White

Swellings, Debility, Dropsy, Acne, Eczema,

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Syphilis and

Syphilitic Infections, Mercurial Diseases,

Female Weaknesses, and, indeed, the whole

series of complaints that arise from impurity

of the blood. Minute reports of individual

cures may be found in AYER'S AMERICAN

ALMANAC, which is furnished to the druggists

for gratuitous distribution, wherein may be

learned the directions for its use, and some of

the remarkable cures which it has made when

all other remedies have failed to afford relief.

Those cases are purposely taken from all sections of the country, in order that every reader

may have access to some one who can speak to

him of its benefits from personal experience.

Scrofula depresses the vital energies, and thus

leaves its victims far more subject to disease

and its fatal results than are healthy constitu-

tions. Hence it tends to shorten, and does

greatly shorten, the average duration of human

life. The vast importance of these considerations has led us to spend years in perfecting a remedy which is adapted to its cure. This

we now offer to the public under the name of

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, although it is composed of ingredients, some of which exceed the best of Sarsaparilla in alternative power. By

its use you may protect yourself from the suffering and danger of these disorders. Purge out

the foul corruption that rot and fester in the blood; purge out the causes of disease, and

vigorous health will follow, with its peculiar

virtues this remedy stimulates the vital functions, and thus expels the distempers which

lurk within the system or burst out on any

part of it.

We know the public have been deceived by

many compounds of Sarsaparilla, that promised

much and did nothing; but they will neither be

deceived nor disappointed in this. Its virtues

have been proven by abundant trial, and there

remains no question of its surpassing excellence

for the cure of the afflicting diseases it is intended to reach. Although under the same

name, it is a very different medicine from any

other which has been before the people, and is

relied on to do all it has ever done.

The Young Volunteer.

From a Quincy Boy to his Mother.

Come, my dear mother! and hear what I say,

Give ear to your son, who is now far away;

Do not be fretting nor shedding a tear,

Though I now am a soldier—a brave volunteer.

I know you lament me since I have gone;

It's natural a mother should think of her son;

Pray, do not be weeping, but be of good cheer,

For your son is as brave as the best volunteer.

The day I was leaving my heart was all joy,

When the band played the air of the "Bold soldier boy;"

My feelings soon changed, which brought many

a tear,

For then I was off as a brave volunteer.

I soon looked around me, and who did I see,

But my kind and brave sisters calling to me:

"Have courage, dear brother—be of good cheer,

For now you are off as our own volunteer."

The words were scarce uttered when we started away,

To the cars we then marched without any delay:

For our parents and friends they loudly did cheer,

While the hot tears were rolling from the young volunteer.

Miscellaneous.

The Delabars.

Carriages were standing closely around a depot in one of our Eastern cities, waiting for the train due at 4.30.

But one, an elegant little affair, was conspicuous for a pair of eager eyes that looked anxiously from the open window, away into the distance in the direction from which the train was expected to come. There, a signal! Yes, they are coming! The horses paw and arch their glossy necks; while the crowd sways like grain with a breeze passing over it. The occupant of the private carriage, a beautiful woman of forty, perhaps—although she looked much younger—could hardly restrain her impatience.

She arose, as if she would descend, and then with a smile at her own childishness, she sat down and waited the arrival. "Among the first to step from the cars were two gentlemen, the one middle-aged and the other scarce eighteen. It was worth going a mile to see the lady, as her eyes rested on them. The light of happiness was on every feature, and she looked even youthful in the transfiguration.

Our carriage, father! said the younger one; and in a moment the two were in the little vehicle, and, grasping each a hand of the wife and mother, who had come to convey them from the depot. The most casual beholder would have called them a happy trio, as, indeed they were, and all the world to each other—Mr. and Mrs. Delabar and their only son, Frank.

They had been absent but three weeks, but a hundred questions were to be asked and answered by each.

And how did you find Mr. Smith and my pretty namesake, Josephine? asked Mrs. Delabar of her husband.

Mr. Smith is well, and doing well I should think. He has several hundred acres of wild land, and there is a fair prospect that it will soon become valuable, from its situation on the lake shore. A pier is being constructed on it already, and a village will eventually spring up near it.

I am so glad! Poor George! He has had such a dark, dark way. I hope he is coming into the sunshine now. But little Josie, is she as pretty as ever?

Frank can tell you about her; I must go to the store now. And, with a sly smile at the young man, he left them.

Well, Frank, about Josephine? her mother promised her to you one day, when you saved her head a bump from the front steps, more than ten years ago.

The young man laughed almost boisterously, as he replied,

That is as much as I would do for her now, mother. Why, she is the roughest, most un-cultivated girl I ever saw; or, at least, was ever acquainted with.

Why, Frank, you must be mistaken; Anna Smith's child cannot be rough, I am positive! Well, mother, let me tell you, please. We left the cars at a little station in Michigan, and obtaining a private carriage were conveyed as speedily as possible to the residence of Mr. Smith, situated about ten miles away; said residence consisting of a double log house—

A double log house! What is that pray? Why, two log buildings made to touch each other, and with a door leading from one to the other; as trees will not work into logs long enough to build a large dwelling, and hence the two. There were about forty acres under cultivation, and enclosed by a rail fence, and beyond that, on every side, was heavy timber. Famous for hunting, mother; but, oh, such a place for a farm! We found Mr. Smith in the field, endeavoring to root out an obnoxious stump that came on a line where he wished to set a fruit tree. He looked like a bad carrier, but was overjoyed to see us, and leaving the stump with his hired man, a great, burly Dutchman, he went at once with us to the house. Since the death of his wife, eight years, I believe, he has hired a family to work for him; the man and boys out doors, and the woman and girls in the house. And they were just such a family as you would expect to find hired out; especially in a place where land is as cheap as it is there. Dinner was soon announced and we all sat down together, Dutchman and all. The food was good enough, and in abundance, but tumbled upon the table in such a disorderly manner, that I hardly knew when the meal was over. Just as we were leaving the table, a horse came galloping past the window.

Here comes Jo, said Mr. Smith, and down from the horse on to the block used as a door step slipped a great awkward girl, about fourteen, I should think. Her face was tanned to the color of a coffee-berry; frizzled curls, all in a tangle; hands destitute of gloves, coarse shoes, soiled dress and a torn sun bonnet. And this was Josephine! My mother's namesake—and, ahem! my promised wife! She had not even the good sense to seem mortified at her plight, and, when introduced, merely bobbed her head at us, and then, with the remark that she was half starved, sat down to the table and ate like a famished wolf. O, dear, mother! I wish you could have seen! and he laughed as noisily as before.

We stayed two days; but Jo, as they all called her, did not improve upon acquaintance. She called me a "stuck up" to my face, answered my questions with yes sir-ee and no sir-ee, until I began to

MR. JOHN B. BASS has left his hospital quarters in Boston, and is now at his father's in Granite street. He was brought to Death's door, from his wounds, but is slowly recovering to comparative health and a new life.

NATURE is putting on her summer livery. Vegetation during the week has taken a fresh start. The fruit trees many of them are out in full bloom, the cherry has not looked so well for a number of years. The buds on the pear, peach and plum, are unfolding themselves, and if nothing happens, our markets will be well supplied with this kind of fruit.

OUR WOUNDED. Our wounded with the enemy at the late battle of Fredericksburg, are reported at twelve hundred, and as comfortable as possible under the circumstances, and to be exchanged. General Lee refused to allow them to recross the Rappahannock on pontoon bridges to be erected by our troops. They will be brought to the United States Ford in rebel ambulances, and there brought over in pontoon boats and put in hospital. The probed prisoners generally report abundant food, kind attention, and the usual spirit of defiance with the enemy, who are also in force all along the south side of the river.

AFFIDAVITS MUST BE STAMPED. The Internal Revenue Department has decided that affidavits are subject to a stamp duty of five cents, except when the same is part of an acknowledgment of a deed, or other instrument in writing. In no case will an instrument not duly stamped be received as evidence in court.

SMART OLD PEOPLE. Humphrey Anthony of South Adams, in his ninety-fifth year laid a rod of stone wall a short time since—a smart old gentleman. Widow Mchitable Potter of South Adams completed her one hundredth year on Tuesday last, and makes her own bed yet. That's more than some sixteen year old females do in these days.

THE RETURNING REGIMENTS. It is stated that in consequence of requests from Senators Morgan of New York and Sprague of Rhode Island, the Secretary of War has ordered that the Regiments leaving the service now shall not be mustered out until they reach home. They will thus retain their arms until their arrival, and will be paid at home instead of in Washington or in camp.

SUFFERING IN IRELAND. It is said that the distress in Ireland from want of employment and consequent poverty, is fast coming up to what it was in the time of famine and fever. Not less than one hundred thousand people are thrown out of employment in the north of Ireland, through the influence of the Southern rebellion, and most of them are on the borders of starvation.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, MAY 14, 1863.

THE SITUATION.

Not so bad as has been represented by many sensation writers purporting to be at the head-quarters of the army of the Potomac, when in reality they were snug in their sanctuaries in New York and other quiet cities. Much of the news that has come to us for a week past, has evidently been manufactured for business speculation; and the week closes more favorable than could have been expected a few days ago. Whatever may have been the fortunes of war during this contest, we still have a country and government; and a large portion of the people of the loyal states are actually pursuing their occupations in life as peaceful and prosperous as before the war. We are receiving favorable accounts daily of our army movements in the South-West. Banks, one of the ablest and most discreet generals of our army is doing well. And we have strong assurances from General Grant's army that Vicksburg will soon be in possession of the National troops. An officer from the army of the Potomac in a letter dated near Falmouth, 9th inst., says:

"Although Hooker was obliged to return across the river the rebels were whipped worse than ever before and were unable to follow us. Hooker has proved himself as able to handle a large army as a division. He is more highly thought of than ever. When he rode through the various corps after the fighting had ceased on Sunday, the men were perfectly wild with excitement. The sky was black with caps thrown in the air, and you could not be heard five feet for the cheers, and I believe every man would have kissed him if they could have had a chance."

The nine months' boys will soon be at home. But it is said that a large majority of these troops have expressed a determination to re-enlist for the war after a month's furlough, provided they can return to their old departments. General Meagher of the Irish Brigade has resigned his commission. This will be universally regretted, as we have not a braver or better officer in the army.

LOCALS, ETC.

We have had all varieties in the weather the present week. On Monday the thermometer rose to eighty-eight degrees in the shade. On Tuesday it was cold enough for great coats. Since then, the prevalence of east winds and fogs has not been favorable for health or cheerfulness. Business is limited, especially in commerce. But the industrial classes find enough to do and at good wages. Rumor respecting our capture, for the well-grounded rumor respecting our foreign relations. The next steamer to England will carry out intelligence of great importance, touching a suspension of diplomatic intercourse, between this country and France and Great Britain. The speedy recall of Mr. Adams, our Minister to England, is predicted here by many. In reality, we have more danger of war with France than Britain, as Louis Napoleon can hardly hold his throne unless at the expense of involving the French in foreign wars.

The financial market deserves a passing notice. Gold touches the point of 148. National securities go off like hot cakes. Government closed last evening at 107 5/8 for coupons; 106 5/8 for Treasury 7-3-10 notes; certificates were at 99 1/2. The sale by Mr. Chase of two to three millions of Treasury notes daily, keeps Uncle Sam's pockets in good condition and illustrates the patriotism and prosperity of the people of the United States.

That venerable relic, the old Hancock House on Beacon street, near the State House, has recently been sold to Messrs. Beebe & Brewer for $125,000. The building is to be removed and elegant structures erected on the lot. It will be recollected that this ancient domicile was built of granite, probably from the quarries of Braintree, now Quincy, nearly a century since. It was the residence of Governor John Hancock for many years, until his death in 1793. A suggestion has wisely gone forth that it should be removed to the Hancock lot in Quincy, where Governor Hancock was born, and there be re-erected. Let it be done.

NEW VOLCANO IN MEXICO. An extract of a letter from Mr. John Xantus, United States Consul at Manzanillo, dated Colima, March 18, 1863, addressed to the Smithsonian Institution, says:

"The whole town is at present in a state of extraordinary excitement, news having come that a new volcano broke forth yesterday, only six leagues from town. The eruption came so suddenly and was so violent, that the Armeria river was filled up by a baricade of ejected sand, mud and stones, to a height of over one hundred feet. The river, of course, was stopped from coming down, and it is said that, north of the baricade, the river is running back and inundating the forest for leagues. The volcano broke out in the top of a hill, only about one hundred and fifty feet high above the level of the Armeria river, but it is said to be growing alarmingly every hour. For the past three days we have had many heavy earthquakes."

NEW PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON. A new likeness of Washington, supposed to have been executed during his lifetime by a French artist, has come to light at Salem (Mass.) and is pronounced an excellent picture by Josiah Quincy, who knew the original.

BOATS ON THE ERIE CANAL. The Rochester, (N. Y.) Union gives the following as a reliable statement of the capacity of the Erie canal fleet, for 1863, derived from an actual survey recently taken:

"There was building at various points, in New York State, two hundred and fourteen boats, which would be ready for launching on the opening of navigation. These boats will have an average capacity of two hundred tons, thus adding forty-two thousand eight hundred tons to the carrying capacity of the fleet. There were three thousand one hundred and eighty-five boats, good, bad and indifferent, afloat at the close of navigation last fall, and with the new will make a total of three thousand three hundred and ninety-nine. Something over two thousand of these boats are suitable for carrying grain; if each of these two thousand grain boats make eight round trips in the season; and carries a cargo of two hundred tons, the total amount moved would be three million two hundred thousand tons, or over one hundred million of bushels of wheat.

LINT FROM THE FATHERLAND. One of the steamers of the Hamburg and American Steamship Company, lately arrived at New York, brought over eighty large packages of fine linen and lint, which had been contributed by the friends of the Union along the Rhine, for the benefit of our sick and wounded soldiers. Some of the packages were of the size of hogheads, and all were made up of the best material. Every package bore this inscription: "Rhine, Bavaria. For the Wounded Defenders of the United States."

A NEW INVENTION. Some ingenious German has invented a paper cup which will completely hold a draught of the hottest liquid, and can be bought for a penny. By means of this invention the good people of Berlin take up and drink at their ease, as they go along the railroad, the cups of coffee which the comfort-loving Englishmen find it impossible to swallow without scalding their throats.

INGENUITY OF A MASSACHUSETTS SOLDIER. There is a beautiful and finished specimen of the ingenuity of a Yankee soldier on exhibition in Boston. It is a four-bladed knife of exquisite polish, with every part complete, including a large blade, two smaller blades and a nail-clencher, manufactured by a soldier of the Massachusetts 33rd Regiment, encamped in Virginia, during his leisure hours. It was made from a common beef-knife. The inventor, a private named Heald, who forwarded more than one hundred corn poppers to her husband in the army, who wrote to her for two hundred corn poppers, has made a good speculation out of her mistake, having received double price for the poppers in the army.

A MILWAUKEE, WISCONSIN, paper states, that the wheat trade of that city, as reported by the Chamber of Commerce, is greater than that of Chicago. The total wheat trade of Milwaukee for 1862 was no less than seventeen million eight hundred thirty-four thousand nine hundred and twenty-six bushels. This amount would make it the greatest primary wheat market in the world. Wisconsin wheat is of a very excellent quality.

CORNERING FUGITIVES. A bill has been introduced into the Canadian Parliament providing for a return to the United States of all deserters from our army; and by the new Conscription law, every man whose name is drawn, and who fails to appear is called a deserter, and when caught will be punished as being one.

PEABODY INSTITUTE. The costly Peabody Institute building in Baltimore is nearly finished, but the Trustees have concluded not to put the Institution into practical operation till the war is ended. The most interesting feature about the building is the library-room, ninety feet long, forty feet wide, with a capacity for fifty thousand volumes. Ten thousand volumes are already collected.

GLEASON'S LITERARY COMPANION, is in every sense of the word, in the family circle, what its name imports. It is refreshing amidst the exciting topics which fill up other journals to be able to turn to one of a purely literary character, whose teachings elevate, and purify the heart, and strengthen the bonds of union and friendship; where the brightest gems of American literature are presented to the reader in the most fashionable dress by a practical and accomplished artist.

"STRAY BUDS," by W. F. Gilcrest. We have received quite a collection of them, with the request of our correspondent to transfer them to our columns. The first of the family appears in our paper to-day, from which the reader may form an idea of the character of those which are to follow.

EMPLOYMENT OF CONVALESCENTS. General Rosecrans has set convalescent soldiers at work raising vegetables for his army hospitals. One hundred and fifty acres of land near Nashville have been selected for this purpose.

WHEAT CROP OF 1862. The Milwaukee News says the large receipts of wheat in that city for several weeks past go to show that the crop of 1862 was much larger than has been counted on heretofore.

FLOWER OF THE FAMILY. At the late exhibition of Tableaux in this place, by the Ladies' Soldiers' Aid Association, the Tableau of the above name was received with great satisfaction. In our advertising columns, it will be seen, that there is Flour of another kind being offered to our people by the new firm of Wilson & Blake, which is meeting with the same success.

FARMING DOWN SOUTH. A refugee from Arkansas says that the rebels have planted an immense wheat crop in that State, and recommends that national troops be sent in to destroy the grain before the rebels gather it.

DRIED BEEF. Dried beef is used by the Mexicans as rations for their soldiers. It is much better than fat pork or briny beef.

MARRIAGE UNDER FIRE. During the progress of the taking of Fort Huger, at Suffolk, (Va.) Wm. Reed, of the Hawkins Zouaves, 9th N. Y. Vols., and Miss Sarah Holland, of Suffolk, were united in marriage by the Rev. D. Henry Miller, Chaplain of the 15th Conn. Vols.

FIRE IN BRIDGEWATER. The foundry connected with Bates, Hyde & Co.'s machine shop, in Bridgewater, was entirely destroyed by fire on Monday afternoon.

STRENGTH. Prof. Field of the Troy Gymnasium, has succeeded in lifting over two thousand pounds. That beats anything by Windship.

EXPORT OF WESTERN GRAIN. In the year 1860 New Orleans exported, of North-western grains, 226,000 bushels; and New York 3,500,000 bushels; flour, New Orleans 80,000, New York 1,250,000 barrels; provisions, New Orleans 15,500,000, and New York 98,500,000! Thus it will be seen that, in ordinary times, more than ten times as much grain found its way to the seaboard by way of New York as by way of New Orleans, and since the war broke out it has all been sent by way of the East.

Poetry.

For the Patriot.
The Flag of our Nation—

BY F. M. ADLINGTON—WEYMOUTH.

TUNE—The Red, White and Blue.
Hail glorious flag of our nation
That triumph'd o'er Albion's crown,
And gain'd the wide world's approbation,
When Tyranny's colors went down—
The flag that at Bunker and Eutaw
Our fathers baptiz'd with their blood,
And pledging their honor anew, for Both tyrants and traitors withstood.

At Bennington, Cowpens and Trenton
The heroes this banner upheld,
And death or dear liberty bent on
The foe of their country expell'd;
The flag that destroy'd the delusion
That England the ocean should own,
When Hull in the old Constitution
Sunk Britain's bold Guerriere down.

When Jackson a vict'ry effected
Despite the great Pakenham's boast,
And booty and beauty protected
Triumphant o'er Wellington's host;
The flag that rose over the Crescent
And made the Turks colors down haul;
When pirates demanded a present,
We gave it in powder and ball—

We gave it in powder and ball,
When pirates demanded a present,
We gave it in powder and ball,
When pirates demanded a present,
We gave it in powder and ball.
And taught the wild rovers of Ocean
Respect for the flag of the Free,
That powder and shot was the portion
We gave for the right of the sea;
The flag that in Mexico flaunted
And over its battlements rose,
Sustain'd by the men who undaunted
Defied a brave nation of foes—

Defied a brave nation of foes,
Defied a brave nation of foes,
Sustain'd by the men who undaunted
Defied a brave nation of foes.
O wave it aloft as our token,
Respected on every far shore;
That Slavery's yoke has been broken,
That Tyranny triumphs no more;
Surround it you gallant defenders,
Salute it with reverence and pride;
The banner that never surrenders,
Nor ever was safely defied—

Nor ever was safely defied,
The banner the never surrenders
Nor ever was safely defied.
The stripes for our foes—they have felt them;
Our stars are the emblems of light;
Let tyrants, the blows we have dealt them,
Remember and quail at the sight.
They fear the joint strength of our nation,
To scatter our stars they have tried;
But fix'd is our great constellation,
'Tis one and can never divide—

'Tis one and can never divide,
'Tis one and can never divide,
But fix'd is our great constellation
'Tis one and can never divide.
The spirit of Washington hovers
Wherever our flag is unfurl'd,
And liberty welcomes its lovers,
They come from the ends of the world;
Huzza for our heav'nly bless'd banner,
Huzza for the Ark of the free,
Our Ship has a world's crew to man her—
The lords of the Earth and the Sea—
The lords of the Earth and the Sea,
The lords of the Earth and the Sea;
Our Ship has a world's crew to man her,
The lords of the Earth and the Sea.

Anecdotes.

What are you about? inquired a lunatic of a cook, who was industriously stripping the feathers from a fowl.
Dressing a chicken, answered the cook.
I should call that un-dressing, said the crazy chap in reply.
The cook looked reflective.

I understand, said a deacon to his neighbor, that you are becoming a hard drinker.
That is a slander, replied the neighbor, for no man drinks easier.

Mother, did you hear essay swear?
No, my dear; what did she say?
Why, she said she wasn't going to wear her darned stockings to church on Easter Sunday.

Dr. Mead was once assailed in a pamphlet by Dr. Woodward. The doctors met—a fight ensued with swords. Mead disarmed his adversary, and ordered him to beg for his life.
Never! said Woodward—never, till I am your patient!

Good-morning, Patrick; slippery this morning.
Slippery! and be jabers it's nothing else, yer honor: upon my word, I slipped down three times without getting up once.

Miss Johnson, have you ever seen Crabbe's Tales?
Crabbe's tale? No; it is the first time that I ever heard that crabs had tails.

From Every City, a well-known member of Oxford, Maine.

"I have told large quantities of your SARSAPARILLA,

cure until we tried your SARSAPARILLA. She has now well for some months."

it cured me. I feel almost everything a man could until I took your SARSAPARILLA. It

Morn.

"Peeping through her purple bars,
Down an endless street of stars,
Melting all the ingots up,
As her eyes more brightly shine,
Morning, in a crystal cup,
Floats the bubble earth in wine.

From the red lips of the sea,
Out into immensity,
Steals a tongue of green and gold;
Soon to swarm with the giddy dies,
When the mighty landscapes rolled Farther to the western skies.

Splendor now by splendor quaffed,
Deeper grows at every draught,
Till the monogram of fire—
The round, red flares of the sun—
Fills with flame the heavens entire,
And sweeps all glories into one.

Matrimony—A Catch.

Fire! Fire! What's the matter?

I've a burning at the heart:

'Tis a raging flame—desire;

Haste and quench it—hail the smelt!

Stony—stony—flinty-hearted!

What are all the maids about?

Where's the engine matrimony?

That will quickly put it out.

Scraps.

POUND CAKE. A pound of flour, one of sugar, one of butter, ten eggs, a nutmeg, the rind and juice of a lemon. Some persons use only 14 oz. of butter, and add a quarter of a teaspoonful of saleratus. Citron and currants
may be added if preferred.

ADVICE GRATIS. If you are in law, get out; if you are out, stay out. If you are a bachelor, marry anon—if you cannot marry, grow yourself.

Keep thy tongue from evil, and thy lips
that they speak no guile.

The politician who undertakes to do the people generally undoes himself.

Man has been described by Byron as a pendulum betwixt a smile and a tear.

During the past week a gentleman called upon the President and solicited a pass for Richmond. "Well," said the President, "I would be very happy to give you one, if my name were respected; but the fact is, sir,
I have, within the past two years, given passes to 250,000 men to go to Richmond, and not one has got there yet." The applicant quietly and respectfully withdrew on tip-toe.

Common sufferings are far stronger links
than common joys.

Be good natured if you can, for there is no
charm so great, no attraction so admirable.
A face that is always full of the expression of amiability, is always beautiful.

The happiest man is the benevolent one,
for he owns stock in the happiness of all man-

A covetous man renders a service to his poor neighbors by illustrating to them the uselessness of riches.

That is an unfortunate disposition in a man
to attend much more to the faults of his companions which offend him, than to their per-fections which please him.

It is by troubles Heaven drags us to itself.
If you wouldn't have trouble, don't wait to be dragged.

O, let me die in peace! the debtor cried,
To a hard creditor at his bedside;
How—die? roared Gripus, and thus your

No, no, sir; you shan't die till I am paid.

Miscellaneous.

Farmer Wells' Two Wives.

And so poor Mrs. Wells is dying!

This was spoken mournfully by more than one person, as glances long and yearning were cast toward that one window where the blinds were shut.

Poor Mrs. Wells! Just as she had got so comfortably settled in her new house, too;
poor Mrs. Wells!

Yes, it was poor Mrs. Wells; a withered, pale, almost deformed woman, old at forty-two, when she should have been in the prime of life, healthy and blooming. The street was a village-street whereupon stood the new house that Farmer Wells had bought.

It has a pleasant look, a hospitable, handsome presence, and seemed to invite alike, the stranger and the friend. Every thing around was well laid out, the trees had once been monarchs of a forest, and the Farmer had wisely let them stand around his new home.

Freshness and beauty marked all the premises, from the handsome portico to the ample stable and barn. The garden was just beginning to send forth its choicest treasures—
the trees were giving bountifully of their blossom and fragrance—every thing spoke of spring, and the fruits that lay concealed in her bosom; but poor Mrs. Wells was dying.

Her husband sat patiently and sorrowfully in
the darkened chamber, battling with his grief,
for he had loved that patient wife for twenty long years, and if any misgivings came there to his mind, it was on account of the toil he had brought upon a frame that was young and beautiful. Yes, those sharp, pinched features were beautiful when she became his wife, and those dull eyes sparkled with the fire of joy and health. Children had been carried in those wasted arms, and from thence all too soon to the grave. The hand so motionless had moved in labor incessantly, beginning action before the sun began to kindle the dawn into day, and ceasing only when the over-task must be finished, whether it were twilight or midnight. Two sons stood in the chamber with solemn faces, awaiting the last lingering breath—consciousness there was none. Twenty years ago Mrs.
Wells was installed by a happy husband, mistress of his home. It was not his own farm whose broad acres he cultivated; consequently he had determined in his mind to work hard, to be diligent, frugal and saving,
so that in the years to come he might have some place to call his own. In this pleasant scheme the handsome young wife entered with all her heart.

She was healthy and strong, knew how to work, and was not afraid of her labor; she would aid him by every means in her power;
be his co-worker, his help as well as his wife. So she went to work, and her thrift and toil told. Every year the Farmer laid by money toward his purchase. People wondered why the Wells would go to meeting in that rickety old cart, and why Mrs. Wells wore the same faded calico that she had worn for ten years at least. But she knew,
and though her form began to bend, though
her hands had grown coarse and misshapen,
and she felt pains and ills she never knew before, it did not once occur to her that these were the effects of hard and wearing labor.

Time to read! Why, the good woman would almost have laughed in the face of any person who might have asked her the question—
Look at her work, and then imagine if you could, that she had any time.

Why, she hadn't even leisure enough to eat her meals properly. That was most lamentably true; with that cooking huge measures of pork and beef, cabbage and potatoes, filling tub after tub with apple sauce, making all the cheese and bread, and butter, for the household and the hired men, how could she eat her meals as she ought? Yet, strange to say, she never regretted all this outlay of strength, all this waste of human life. Ever before her was the prospect of that farm, cleared, planted and paid for. She never would allow herself to have any help, except when her children were born, and even then she gave the wearied frame no repose, but stitched and mended, propped up by pillows,
before her nerves or her muscles were able to perform their proper functions. And thus it was that she grew deformed, shrunken and old; grew into a machine of flesh and blood that never tired of the huge toil it had taken upon itself to bear. Her husband became accustomed to seeing her pale face; and so often had he listened to her reiterated declaration that she wouldn't have a girl near her, that at last he gave up all thought of it.
He had several times in the early years of their marriage, proposed to drive and visit;
but she had always something to do, until he never dreamed of taking her out for a drive.

One day he came in early in the afternoon.
It was an unusual hour for him; and his wife so remarked as she looked up from the pile of shirts she was mending.

Well, said he, with a flush and a smile, as he seated himself in one of the high backed wooden chairs, I've bought a farm at last, and paid for it, every cent.

At first the faded eye kindled, the lip smiled; but suddenly the wife bowed her head on her hands and burst into tears.

Why Sarah, why wife—I thought you'd be pleased, exclaimed the Farmer, quite chagrined at this very unusual exhibition.

Sarah, after a little struggle with herself,
lifted her head and wiped away the tears,
striving to smile.

I am dear, she said, very much pleased;
but there did come such a dark feeling over me just then as you spoke, that I had to give way to it and cry for a minute, like a baby.

Well, well, that is strange for you, Sarah;
you're feeling sick, perhaps.

O no; I feel well—that is, my head ached
just a little after dinner; but then I 'posed
I was tired, she replied.

Tired—yes, that's just it, said the Farmer;
well, you shall have a girl after this; no more slaving. I'm rich enough now, and it's nonsense for you to kill yourself.

I ain't killing myself, John, and I'd rather not have a girl now. The boys are grown up, and there are no babies to take care of;
so you see I can get along nicely. Besides, I'm used to my own ways, and shouldn't like any one to break in upon 'em. Every thing will be new there and nice; but do tell me
all about it; where is the house, and what did you give?

He answered her question by resolutely declaring that she must come out and get into the carriage, and go and see for herself.

For once she laid aside that important,
all-engrossing work, and did as she was desired. As for the house and grounds, she was almost in ecstasies about them; every thing was so pleasant and convenient for her work. Work was uppermost, and her theme was, how easy it would be to do this, and how easy to do that—still work—still work!

They were settled, and much of the old furniture replaced by new, and yet so fearful was the good wife that things would not be kept up to just the point where she found them, that it was scrub and delve, delve and scrub, from morning till night, just the old way, only a little worse. At last nature would hold out no longer. After enjoying the new farm for six months, Sarah complained of feeling strangely one evening, fell down
in a fainting fit and was taken to her bed
which she never left again.

The neighbors as they passed and repassed,
soon saw a black crane tied to the front door,
and then they knew and looked sorrowful.
Poor John Wells! he stooped also, and bore
a hopeless, melancholy face at the funeral,
and his new, smart house, felt like a new smart tomb, where the bricks, the varnish
and the painting, are all fresh.

It took him two years to get accustomed to his loneliness, and he would have lived on single forever, if some presumptuous friends had not undertaken to find him a wife, and then almost do his wooing for him.

Miss Sally Holt was the woman destined to take the place of the late Mrs. Wells. She was an active, enterprising, girlish old maid, as the terms go, and a woman who knew how to take care of herself, too.

At first, she laughed the idea to scorn—
What! she be married! No indeed! Not to the best man that ever trod in two shoes.
The idea! She, Sally Holt! it wasn't a going to do. But it did, and Sally had the prefix of Mrs. before her new name. She went into the new house and groom took it self off before her bustling ways and sunny face. She must have a girl, she said, yes a girl, the first thing, and a smart capable one,
too. John rather opened his eyes at this,
for it seemed indeed a new doctrine, but he was able, and forthwith a girl was installed in the kitchen. Still John Wells stooped and looked perplexed and careworn. It quite startled him on the spring in which he was married, to hear his wife ask him to spade up a bit of land in a favorite spot, where she could plant some flowers, and then stranger of all! commission him to go to the city to buy some choice seeds. Why! Sarah would have done both, herself, or else gone without them; this he only thought, however, but said aloud, he didn't know as he could spare the time. Sally said he must, very playfully, though under the trifling air she assumed, lay a resolute tenacity that conveyed it self even through smiles. John went.

Not long after harvesting time came on.
Sally saw what was required of her, and in her half serious, half sportive way, protested that she could not do the work for all the men who were coming; that she didn't like the manners and conversation of those she had seen, and it would be very much against her inclination to have anything to do with it.

Why Sarah never said or thought of such a thing! was his astonished (mental) exclamation.

Sally divined his thoughts. She was cut,

was Sally, and sometimes very abrupt with her tongue.

I know that poor Mrs. Wells always did these things, she said mercifully, and I know, and every body knows, that she worked herself to death.

Well, true enough, it might be; said the Farmer, slowly and thoughtfully, he never thought of it. But what shall I do? he asked, fingering his hair nervously.

I will try and get along with a little extra help, but I have a plan, said the determined Sally, her black eyes shining. That little old house on your place.

Well, what of it? asked John Wells, not a little curious.

Fit it up and let Harry Lee take it. Give him ground for a garden, a privilege in the wood lot, and pay him a small sum over. He will bring his wife here, she will help me enough to dispense with the services of a girl except in planting and harvesting time; then let the men eat with them, you paying the difference of table expenses, and you will save yourself money, and me my health, besides having a good reliable man always within call.

John Wells looked and thought, toyed with his hair, knit his brow, and thought and looked again. He couldn't see into it just then, but it didn't take long after that to appreciate the whole thoroughly, and to put the plan into execution.

The next move of the adroit Sally was to induce her husband to procure a neat, inexpensive little carriage, and after that, she found it convenient to affect that she wasn't used to driving, and it would do them both good to take a daily drive. John Wells did not like this at all, at first. It broke in upon his habit of taking a "snooze," as he called it,
after tea—but the break up put new life in him. It was a great point gained to get him to put on a clean suit of clothes for supper—and the John Wells sitting at the table with hair curled and clean collar on, (John was really a handsome man,) would not be known for the same dirty, tired, stooping husband of the first Mrs. Wells.

Now if he would only take a paper! It was a pity, but he had a sort of moral horror of newspapers. He thought all the fashionable foibles and extravagancies, even crimes of the country, originated in the columns of the newspaper. It took a long time for the cunning Sally to gain her point.
Like a true woman she never gave up, but after every failure turned her tactics, and of course came off conqueror. A splendid paper that treated largely of farming soon laid on his table—and John Wells acknowledged to take a wife a year after that, well, really it was astonishing how much one could learn from a little paper; it was, really! He had actually saved all of twenty dollars by a judicious expenditure of two.

Didn't I tell you so? asked Sally, with a comical face.

Yes, you did, and that's a fact. Strange
I didn't see all these things before; and he sighed to himself.

Well, the result of all this is—for Sally is alive and well, and blooming too, at forty-nine.
I say the result of all this, is that, if you
roader, ever happen to see Farmer John Wells twenty years ago, you wouldn't know him today; no, that you would not.

Look up the road; see that dashing carriage. Well, that is the property of Esquire Wells and his still handsome wife. Mark
the old gentleman as he glances this way.
With what an air he bows! Perfectly well bred, I assure you—perfectly at his ease. His cheeks are ruddy, you perceive, although his hair has turned grey, and his eyes have fire and expression, both of which were wanting there once. He sits quite erect also, thanks to his wife, for she has been the magician's wand, the transforming power.
She knew what she was about when she took upon herself the matronly office. Go to his home and see the three happy, ruddy children.
Poor Mrs. Wells, when she bore children, could not snatch the time from ordinary domestic duties to take care of either souls or bodies, and the consequence was a deterioration of both, and five little graves in the churchyard. The sacrifice of so much life was not needed; doctor's bills and interments came to more than two strong healthy girls would have cost, to say nothing of medi-

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, May 23d, 1863.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

OUR SEASONS. During Spring, the easterly and northerly winds prevail, which come from cold regions, and keeps Nature in check, oftentimes undoing what has been done well. The southerly is the only wind which brings warmth and gives life to vegetation; in April we are favored with a few breezes; in May their visits are more frequent and of longer duration—and by June, usually, their mellowing influence has prepared the way for the heats of summer.

NINE MONTHS' MEN. We learn through a friend who has a son in General Banks' army, that the "nine months' men" attached to that division of our forces, will be mustered out of service as follows:

The 42d and other regiments, the 14th of June; the Indiana quota, the 1st of July, and the balance during the month of August.

FROST. It is said that the low-lands in the vicinity of the railroad, between Granite and School streets, were visited by a light frost on Tuesday evening last. It must have been light and confined to that locality, for we did not hear that it visited any other place, or that any injury was done to vegetation.

RUSS B. WALKER. The Spring Term of Mr. Walker's School is brought to a close to-day. He has been very successful. A recess is asked for until September, when it will again be re-opened under the most favorable auspices. Mr. W. lives in the hearts and confidence of our people. In fact, we doubt whether the young would tolerate any other teacher. He has their friendship, and they have his. The pains he has taken in their education naturally begets this feeling.

An exhibition of his school will take place at the Town Hall on Thursday evening next. A general invitation is extended—parents and guardians in particular are invited to be present. It will be the finale of that class of amusements for the season.—See card in another column.

PLANTS. Those in want of Cabbage or Tomato Plants should not fail to give Mr. Joshua H. Spear an early call, as his plants usually go with a rush; being much superior to those commonly purchased in the city.—See notice in another column.

DEATH OF STONEWALL JACKSON. Stonewall Jackson died on the 10th instant, from the effects of an amputation of one of his arms, he having been accidentally shot by his own men. In his death the rebels lose one of their ablest generals. His true name was Thomas J. Jackson.

RENEWAL OF THE CHARLESTON SIEGE. The attack on Charleston by the Monitors is evidently not abandoned. A heavy cargo of war materials for the fleet left New York on Friday, the 1st inst., and with it two of the machines called "devils," which are carried in front of the Monitors to remove piles and torpedoes from obstructed waters. There are now three of those customers at Port Royal, and the sending of them affords a strong presumption that the iron-clads are to try another experiment upon the Charleston batteries. It was expected that the iron-clad frigate New Ironsides would cross the bar in the Charleston harbor on the 24 instant.

NATIONAL FINANCES. The appropriations made by the Thirty-Seventh Congress are as follows: Extra Session, July, 1861, about $264,000,000; Long Session, ending July 17, 1862, $913,000,000; Short Session, ending March 4, 1863, $1,100,000,000. Receipts from duties on imports, internal revenue, direct taxes, sales of public lands, &c., and estimates from March 4, 1861, to July 1, 1864, $320,000,000—which, deducted from the above sum, will leave the amount of indebtedness up to July 1, 1864, including the $70,000,000 debt left by the last Administration, $2,627,000,000.

ITEM IN THE VICKSBURG EXPENSES. Steamboat-men at St. Louis say that the expenses of the Vicksburg expedition, for the single item of chartering steamers, are forty thousand dollars a day.

Our friend Cummings of the Boot and Shoe Emporium, ever mindful of the wants of the people, has been making large additions to his previous large stock. Persons in want of anything in the Boot and Shoe line would do well to give him a call. He wishes to call particular attention to his Ladies' Serge Congress heel Boots, which he is selling at the low price of $1 30 a pair.

LIVERMORE, CLEWS & Co. of New York, Government Agents for the sale of the National "5-20" Loan, sold May 12th and 13th, $1,800,000 (eighteen hundred thousand).

ARRIVAL. Arrived at Quincy Point, May 19, 1863, Schooner D. H. Bills, loaded with coal for E. Adams.

LUNCH. There will be a free lunch at the Mariposa Saloon this evening.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, MAY 21, 1863.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP.

That Vallandigham is to be sent to Fort Warren, Boston harbor, a close prisoner during the war—but that Secretary Seward favors his release. Difference of opinion between high officials as to the conduct of General Hooker and the affair of the Peterhoff, are said to prevail to such an extent as to interrupt the previous entente cordiale. Civil and military changes of a tall character are about to take place. General Hooker it is said has returned to Falmouth to make ready for another campaign. It is the opinion of some of our best military men that if the army of the Potomac remains inactive much longer, the rebels will take the offensive and move toward Washington.

"Perley," the regular correspondent of the Boston Journal at Washington, the 16th instant, in speaking of the situation says:

"Now it is useless to longer attempt to conceal that the battle of Chancellorsville was disastrous in its results; that Stoneman's 'raid' failed to accomplish what had been allotted to that General; that Richmond has not been taken or in danger; that our losses of men and munitions have been heavy, and that the commander of the army of the Potomac has never dreamed of recrossing the Rappahannock or of moving 'on to Richmond' by any other route until his forces have been reorganized, recruited and re-equipped. But when the people are honestly told that another attempt to take the rebel capital has proved a failure it will be found that they are equal to the crisis."

There appears to be a good deal of political engineering just at this time at the Capital. There is a strong pressure for change of commanders. The friends of General McClellan are working hard to procure his reinstatement. And the friends of Burnside, say, Perley quotes with malicious delight, the evidence before the Committee on the conduct of the war; and Teutonic influence, indignant at the charge of defeat on the eleventh corps, is working with might and main with other elements of disaffection, all seeking to procure the removal of General Hooker. Never was there a man more soundly abused than he is just now.

He intimates that the President's perplexities, equal his responsibilities, and that changes in the Cabinet may be expected about this time.

THE CONSCRIPTION.

Or Draft not to take place before the first of July. The soldiers now returning home will have had six weeks away from the army. It is said that the War Department by the middle of July will offer a bounty of three hundred dollars to all who will re-enlist, using the fund which has accumulated from those drafted persons choosing to pay the three hundred dollars rather than go into the field. It is expected that nearly all these returning soldiers will accept the high bounty and return to service. Six or eight weeks will undoubtedly be used in the enrolling of all persons subject to military duty.

BOSTON HARBOUR AND ITS DEFENCES.

This subject is attracting much attention here, more particularly the occupation and disposal of South Boston Flats for business purposes. The Flats can be entirely closed by a sea wall bordering on the channel and several hundred acres filled in solid and even as a house floor. The sea-wall would make an excellent defence in case of hostile invasion, by common fortification.

You have in Quincy many million tons of grout, or loose, rough granite, which if means of transportation could be devised, would be admirably adapted towards this great improvement of extending the area of Boston several hundred acres. All the loose stone of your quarries would be needed to fill up and wall these Flats. The manner of getting Granite from Quincy to Boston has always been a desideratum. In the consideration of this great project, several interests, such as the State and City in several relations; certain railroads; riparian owners, and owners of real estate as abutters on the Flats, would have to be consulted—and to accomplish anything, be harmonized. A contract of one million of dollars towards furnishing this refuse stone from the Quincy Ledges to South Boston, where directed, would enable the stone contractors of Quincy to construct an independent track of Horse Railroad from Quincy, (including branches to the principal quarries) to South Boston Flats. And several hundred tons could daily be carried by this means of transportation. The new track would require a strong foundation, but could run in any course the least injurious to the public.

JENKINS' VEST-POCKET LEXICON.—This is the title of a new work, which lays claims to public favor, for certain merits not to be found in pocket dictionaries heretofore published; these are the omission of words in common use, such as are familiar to all; which leaves room in this little book for nearly all that any one requires to know. As there are but few that carry a dictionary in their heads, the publishers have provided one for a numerous class, which may be carried in the next convenient place, the vest pocket. It is a neat little affair, and we should think it would be found a useful companion.

For sale by Lippincott & Co., publishers, 22 and 24 North Fourth street Philadelphia; Price, 53 and 75 cents per copy.

FROM THE WHEAT-FIELDS OF THE WEST. Accounts from the principal agricultural centres of the Western States inform us that the prospect for the coming crop of winter wheat is very good. Notwithstanding the great scarcity of labor, more than an average breadth of land has been sown in most places.

THE PROSPECT FOR THE CROPS. New York.—In this State wheat looks well, and planting operations incident to the season are well advanced. New Jersey.—The wheat and grain crops promise to be very large. In the southern tier of counties a large yield of fruit, especially of peaches and apples, is anticipated. Pennsylvania.—In Pennsylvania the planting of corn has been interfered with by unpropitious weather, but wheat, oats and rye look well and promise a heavy yield.

Maryland.—There is now every indication of an abundance of fruit. The trees were kept back by the late cold weather, and the blossoms now show promise of a large crop. Michigan.—In Michigan wheat, on the whole, presents a most promising appearance. In St. Joseph county peppermint has been extensively planted; last year the essential oil realized from this source was disposed of for $37,500.

Illinois.—In Illinois, the growing wheat is said never to have looked more promising than now; the spring has also been very favorable for getting corn and oats into the ground, of which large crops will be raised. There never was a better prospect for fruit in that State than there is this season.

Indiana.—The peach crop promises to be very abundant. The wheat, which in the winter did not look favorable, now looks fine, and there will be no end to the grass.

Iowa.—In Iowa everything looks equally promising. The prospect for an abundant crop of wheat the coming harvest was never better than it is now. The winter wheat looks unusually well.

Kansas.—Grass looks fine; wheat never looked better, and the farmers being encouraged, are making arrangements to cultivate more extensively the lately adopted staple—"cotton."

Kentucky.—The wheat crop is promising. A Lebanon letter says that farmers are in good spirits, "expecting every species of grain in abundance."

Wisconsin.—Of fruit, the yield in Wisconsin is likely to be large. Of the cereals the product, with good weather, will no doubt be large.

Ohio.—From Ohio no general reports as to the grain prospect have been made, but of fruit there is a promise of a large yield.

THE FINANCES. A Washington dispatch announces that Secretary Chase entertains no intention at present of attempting a loan either here or in Europe, and confidently anticipates a very large increase in the amount of concessions of treasury notes during the month of June.

The government has discontinued the issue of legal tender notes, and the black notes on hand have been sealed up. The total amount of greenbacks in circulation is about four hundred and five million.

PETROLEUM. Up to the 13th of last April, no less than 7,402,339 gallons of Petroleum had been shipped from New York to foreign ports. London and Liverpool are the two great receiving ports of American Petroleum, over one million gallons having been sent to each of these places at the date stated. In addition to the above, 3,353,608 gallons have been shipped from Portland, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore, making a total of 10,755,947 gallons. Our Petroleum trade with foreign nations has already attained to gigantic proportions.

A NEW ORGAN. The Portland Courier understands that a new Democratic daily paper is to be started shortly in Boston with a capital of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars. The paper, it says, is designed to be an organ of the untimely Democracy, and will be sold for one cent a copy.

THE LADY'S BOOK FOR JUNE is already before the public. It is in the hey-day of the season; abounds in flowers, from which every lady may select a nosegay to suit her fancy. It contains four splendid fashion plates, made up to the latest date; patterns for children's dresses, and travelling costumes; designs for crochet and an endless variety of other work—Cottage architecture, etc., etc. The other embellishments are in excellent taste; the "Fairy Court" is a fairy scene, embracing the extravagant ideas wove in a fairy tale. The "Little Tease," is a picture true to life; the tantalizing disposition betrayed by the young vixen, is in the spirit of her sex, and likely to grow with her growth, requiring masterly reproof in admonitions of the old song:—"Oh, girls, why don't you let the boys alone, and let them quiet be." Dr. Bolus, or the "Country Physician" is a capital hit, which is illustrated by an excellent story.

The present number completes the half-year of the sixty-sixth volume, and is accompanied with an appendix.

THE CHANGE in the weather has brought to the farmer a change in his feelings and prospects; what to them a week ago was gloom and despondency is now sunshine and hope; vegetation has come forward grandly within a few days; early fruits are rapidly developing themselves; the strawberry is out in full bloom, and looks remarkably well. Mr. H. G. Whiting, on Cross street has gone extensively into the culture; he has extended his area this year; his fruit is an early and delicious kind; the soil admirably adapted to the plant—but this is not all—Mr. W. has such a peculiar way of coaxing and leading them along that they do not seem to know when to stop bearing. He has raised two crops from the same vines in one season.

A NOVEL MAIL CARRIER. In London, at present, one hundred and ten mails pass through the pneumatic despatch tube from the station to the district post office during the day; and not only letters but trucks of iron of the weight of five tons have passed, and adventurous visitors now and then perform the journey with great delight.

MANUFACTURE OF PLATE GLASS. The Lenox (Mass.) Plate-Glass Works is the only manufactory of the kind in the country. The works were destroyed by fire in the summer of 1862, but were speedily re-built and in full operation again in November. What is known as "rough-plate glass," used for skylights, floors, &c., is manufactured here. There are used at the establishment, per month, sixty tons of sand, three hundred cords of wood and three hundred bushels of lime, and there are made about five thousand two hundred and eighty feet of glass each week, averaging one-half inch in thickness. All the materials for the glass are found in the neighborhood.

THE TRADE IN CRINOLINE. It would hardly be believed how important an industry has sprung from the fashion of wearing crinolines, if there were not statistical documents to prove the fact. The steel spring for petticoats amount to 4,800,000 lbs. weight for France alone, 2,400,000 lbs. for England, and 1,200,000 lbs. for the rest of the world. These springs, covered with cotton, are sold at the rate of 25c. per lb., which gives an average of 10,500,000ft. annually. The cotton employed in covering them is sold at about 30¢. the 200 lbs., which makes the sum 1,200,000ft.

DOMESTIC COAL. Coal is now being mined at Portsmouth, from the Rhode Island coal-beds.

THE CHANGE in the weather has brought to the farmer a change in his feelings and prospects; what to them a week ago was gloom and despondency is now sunshine and hope; vegetation has come forward grandly within a few days; early fruits are rapidly developing themselves; the strawberry is out in full bloom, and looks remarkably well. Mr. H. G. Whiting, on Cross street has gone extensively into the culture; he has extended his area this year; his fruit is an early and delicious kind; the soil admirably adapted to the plant—but this is not all—Mr. W. has such a peculiar way of coaxing and leading them along that they do not seem to know when to stop bearing. He has raised two crops from the same vines in one season.

SAVANNAH A CLOSED PORT. Developments concerning a late flag of truce from Port Royal show that the rebels consider the port of Savannah closed to all communication with us. The rebel officer gave as his reason for refusing to receive our communications, that the Savannah port had been closed by order of Beauregard for over two months, and that no further communications with flag of truce in that port would be allowed.

"Buy me and I'll do you Good."

HEALTH AND STRENGTH SECURED BY THE USE OF THE GREAT SPRING AND SUMMER MEDICINE, DR. LANGLEY'S

Hoot and Herb Bitters! Composed of Sarsaparilla, Wild Cherry, Yellow Dock, Prickly Ash, Thoroughwort, Rhubarb, Mandrake, Dandelion, &c., all of which are so compounded as to act in concert, and assist Nature in eradicating Disease.

This medicine has been before the public for over fourteen years, with constantly increasing success, and is now

The Standard Medicine of the Age! Its effect upon the system is most wonderful—acting directly upon the seat of disease, cleansing the bowels, removing all obstructions from the internal organs, stimulating the system to healthy action, purifying the blood, divesting it of all humors, building up the weakened system, and restoring the invalid to health and usefulness.

They cure and eradicate from the system: Liver Complaint, that mine of so many diseases; Jaundice in its worst forms; all Bilious Diseases and Foot Stomach, Dyspepsia, Constipation, all kinds of Humors, Indigestion, Headache, Dizziness, Piles, Heartburn, Weakness, Pains in the Side and Bowels, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, and all the various ailments of a Disordered Stomach, or Bad Blood, to which all are more or less subject in Spring and Summer.

It is highly recommended by Physicians: every body tries it, and you will never regret it. No medicine can be like it in its salutary effect, therefore inquire for LANGLEY'S BITTERS, and take no other.

Poetry.

May.

BY JOHN G. WHITTIER.

Beyond the bursting greenness of the woods,
Unto the misty, mountain solitudes,
Has April breathed her sweet and changeable
moods;

But in the folded buds and leaves, and higher,
Where nest the small bird's in the fir tree's spire,
Through all the world there breathes a soft desire!

A mystic influence broods o'er hidden things;
The caterpillar, in his drowsy rime,
Dreams purple pictures of his future wings.

A sweet presentment fills the intense Clear air. The brooks hang in suspense
Among the rocks. The small grass feels a sense
Of life.

Prophetic of a joy most strange and dear,
For lo! May lifts the deer-latch of the year!
Deep out of sight, where earth's great mystery
lies,

Shut up within her heart forever, lies
A thrill along the unseen arteries.

Within the tangled roots of beach and lime,
The sweet saps pulsate as they blindly climb,
And sprout their tassel'd greenness ere its time.

Along the stream the whispering rushes say
To one another, how the gentle May Brings in the sunshine of a dearer day.

And to the sweet-breathed violets that blow
An aure margin to their silver flow,
The gurgling ripples tattle as they go.

Sick with desire, the lily bells turn pale;
The wondering cow-slips peep from every dale;
And daisies stand on tiptoe through the vale.

The amorous boughs bend towards her, far and near,
While May stands in the door-way of the year.

At her charmed coming, at the far South, where
It lingered for her bidding calm and fair,
The sunshine flows through all the happy air.

Aerial arches of the sunset dyes,
O'er the enchantment of her presence rise,
And span the glory of the bending skies.

Now roll the minutes to the golden hour,
And now the bud fulfils the perfect flower;
Now Earth puts on her beauty's crown and power.

From the low casement of the cottage room,
To the far distance where the dim hills loom,
The lengths of meadow-land burst into bloom.

A hundred brooks, down leaping whence they hung,
And seeming mad, with many a silver tongue,
Sing sweeter songs than ever yet were sung.

The birds all pipe her welcome, blithe and clear,
While May comes through the door-way of the year.

The Quaker's Creed.

My creed requires no form of prayer;
Yet would I not condemn
Those who adopt with pious care
Their use as aids to them.

One God hath fashioned them and me;
One Spirit is our guide;
For each, alike, upon the tree
One common Saviour died.

Each the same trumpet-call shall wake,
To face one judgment-seat;
God give us grace, for Jesus' sake,
In the same Heaven to meet.

Too Late I Stayed.

Too late I stayed—forgive the crime—
Unheeded flow the hours;
How noiseless falls the foot of Time,
That only leads on flowers!

And who with clear account remarks
The ebbs and flows of glass,
When all its sands are diamond sparks,
That dazzle as they pass?

And who to sober measurement
Time's happy swiftness brings,
When birds of paradise have lent
Their plumage to his wings?

Anecdotes.

Well, what next? said Mrs. Partington, as she interrupted Ike, who was reading the news—the pickets were driven in five miles? Bless my poor soul, but that will make a strong fence. I suppose they had to be driven in deep, to keep the secessionists
from digging out under them.

Bridget, where's the gridiron?
An' sure, ma'am, I's just after giving it to my sister's own cousin, Bridget O' Flaherty;
the thing is so full of holes it's no good at all.

A tender-hearted widower fainted at the funeral of his third beloved.
"What shall we do with him?" asked a friend
of his.

Let him alone, said a waggle by-stander
he'll soon re-wive.

An Irishman, who lived in an attic, being asked what part of the house he occupied, answered

If the house were turned topsyturvy I'd be livin' on the first flure!

Friend, it is very wrong to swear as you do.
Why do you do it?
Because, replied the prisoner, I have understood that a man may swear out of jail in thirty days, and I want to see if it can't be done in fifteen. I am going to sit up all night and do my worst.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills.

THE ALL SUFFICIENT THREE
The Great "American Remedies,"

Known as "Helmhold's"
GENUINE PREPARATIONS, VIZ:
HELMHOLD'S EXTRACT "BUCHU,"
"SARSAPARILLA," IMPROVED ROSE WASH.

HELMHOLD'S
GENUINE PREPARATION,
COMPOUND

Fluid Extract Buchu,
A Positive and Specific Remedy
For Diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel and Dropsical Swellings.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excites the ABSORBENTS into heating action, by which the WATERY OR CAL-CULOUS depositions, and all UNNATURAL ENLARGEMENTS are reduced, as well as
pain and inflammation, and is good for MEN, WOMEN, OR CHILDREN.

HELMHOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU
FOR WEAKNESSES
Arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation,
Early Indiscretion, or Abuse.

ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS:
Indisposition to Exer- Loss of Power, Difficultly Breathing,
tion, Debility, Dryness of the Skin,
Loss of Memory, Trembling, Weak Nerves, Wakefulness,
Horror of Disease, Pain in the Back,
Dimness of Vision, Flushing of the Body,
Universal Lassitude, the Mucous System, Erection of the Face,
Hot Hands, Pallid Countenance.

These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which
this medicine invariably removes soon follow
IMPOTENCY, FATUITY, EPILEPTIC
FITS.

In one of which the patient may expire. Who can say that they are not frequently followed by
those "direful diseases,"

Insanity and Consumption.
Many are aware of the cause of their suffering,
but none will confess. The records of the insane
Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion. The constitution, once affected with Organic Weakness, requires the aid of medicine
to strengthen and invigorate the system, which HELMHOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably
does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females, Females, Females,
Old or young, single, married, or contemplating
Marriage—in many affections peculiar to Females the Extract Buchu is unequalled by any
other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Ir-
regularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of the
customary Evacuations, Ulcerated or Scirrhous
state of the Uterus, Leucorrhoea, or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex,
whether arising from Indiscretion, Habits of Dissipation, or in the Decline or Change of Life.

No family should be without it.
Take no Balaam, Mercury, or Unpleasant Medicine for Unpleasant and Dangerous Diseases.

HELMHOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU
CURES SECRET DISEASES
In all their stages; at little expense; little or
no change of diet; no inconvenience, and no ex-posure. It causes frequent desire, and gives
strength to Urinate, thereby removing obstructions, preventing and curing Strictures of the Urethra, slaying pain and inflammation, so frequent in this class of diseases, and expelling
POISONS, DISEASED, AND WORN-
OUT MATTER.

Thousands upon Thousands who have been
the victim of Quacks, and who have paid Heavy Fees to be cured in a short time, have found they
were deceived, and that the Poison has, by the use of Powerful Agents, been introduced into the system, to break out in aggravated form, and
perhaps after Marriage.

Use Helmhold's Extract Buchu
For all Affections and Diseases of
THE URINARY ORGANS,
Whether existing in Male or Female, from whatever cause originating, and no matter of how long
standing.

BLOOD! BLOOD! BLOOD!
Helmhold's Highly Concentrated Compound
Fluid Extract Sarsaparilla Syphilis
This is an affection of the Blood, and attacks
the Sexual Organs, Linings of the Nose, Ears, Throat, Windpipe, and other Mucous Surfaces,
making its appearance in the form of "Cic-
cels," "Mercurial Sores," "Eruptions," "Pimples,"
"Scalds," "Ulcers," "Furuncles," "Boils," "Abscesses,"
"Gonorrhea," "Syphilis," "Scrophulous Swellings,"
"Dropsy," "Neuralgia," "Dyspepsia," "Indigestion,"
"Syphilis," "Syphilitic Infections," "Mercurial Diseases,"
"Female Weaknesses," and, indeed, the whole
series of complaints that arise from impurity
of the blood. Minute reports of individual cases may be found in AYER'S AMERICAN
ALMANAC, which is furnished to the druggists
for gratuitous distribution, wherein may be
learned the directions for its use, and some of
the remarkable cures which it has made when
all other remedies have failed to afford relief.

These cases are purposely taken from all sections of the country, in order that every reader
may have cause to some one who can speak to
him of its benefits from personal experience.
Scrophulous depresses the vital energies, and thus
leaves its victims far more subject to disease
and its fatal results than are healthy constitutions. Hence it is so important to keep the blood pure, and the average duration of human life. The vast importance of these considerations has led us to spend years in perfecting a remedy which is so adequate to its cure. This we now offer to the public under the name of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, although it is composed of ingredients, some of which exceed the best of Sarsaparilla in alternative power. By
its use you may protect yourself from the suffering and danger of these disorders. Turn out
the foul corruptions that rot and fester in the
blood; purge out the causes of disease, and
vigorous health will follow. By its peculiar
virtues this remedy stimulates the vital functions, and thus expels the distempers which
lurk within the system or burst out on any
part of it.

We know the public have been deceived by
many compounds of Sarsaparilla, that promised
much and did nothing; but they will neither be
deceived nor disappointed in this. Its virtues
have been proven by abundant trial, and there
remains no question of its surpassing excellence
for the cure of the afflicting diseases it is intended to reach. Although under the same
name, it is a very different medicine from any
other which has been before the people, and is far more effective than any other which has
ever been available to them.

AYER'S
CHERRY PECTORAL,
The World's Great Remedy for Coughs, Colds, Incipient Consumption, and for the relief
of Consumptive patients
in advanced stages
of the disease.

This has been so long used and so universally known, that we need no more than assure the public that its quality is kept up to
the best it ever has been, and that it may be relied on to do all it has ever done.

The peculiar taint of
 infection which we call SCROFULA lurks in
 the constitutions of
 multitudes of men. It
 either produces or is produced by an en-
 feebled, vitiated state
 of the blood, wherein
 that fluid becomes impurified, and is competent to sustain
 the most violent and dangerous action, and
 leaves the system to
 the mercy of disease and
 decay. The scrofulous
 contamination is variously caused by mercurial
 abuse, low living, disordered digestion from unwholesome food, impure air, filth and filthy
 habits, the depressing vices, and, above all, by the venereal infection. Whichever be its origin,
 it is hereditary in the constitution, descending
 from parents to children until the third and
 fourth generation; indeed, it seems to be the
 rod of Him who says, "I will visit the iniquities
 of the fathers upon their children." The
 diseases which it originates take various names,
 according to the organs it attacks. In the
 lungs, Scrofula produces tubercles, and finally Consumption; in the glands, swellings which
 suppurate and become ulcerous sores; in the
 stomach and bowels, derangements which produce indigestion, dyspepsia, and liver complaints; on the skin, eruptive and cutaneous
 diseases. These all having the same origin,
 require the same remedy, viz, purification and
 invigoration of the blood. Purify the blood,
 and these dangerous distempers leave you.
 With feeble, foul, or corrupted blood, you can-
 not have health; with that "life of the flesh"
 healthy, you cannot have scrofulous disease.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla
 is compounded from the most effectual antidotes that medical science has discovered for
 this afflicting distemper, and for the cure of the
 disorders it entails. That it is far superior to any other remedy yet devised, is known by all
 who have given it a trial. That it does combine virtues truly extraordinary in their effect
 upon this class of complaints, is indisputably
 proven by the great multitude of publicly
 known and remarkable cures it has made of
 the following diseases: King's Evil or Glandular Swellings, Tumors, Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches and Sores, Ery-
 sipelas, Rose or St. Anthony's Fire, Salt
 Rheum, Scald Head, Coughs from tu-
 berulous deposits in the lungs, White
 Swellings, Debility, Dropsy, Neuralgia,
 Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Syphilis and Syphilitic Infections, Mercurial Diseases,
 Female Weaknesses, and, indeed, the whole
 series of complaints that arise from impurity
 of the blood. Minute reports of individual
 cases may be found in AYER'S AMERICAN
 ALMANAC, which is furnished to the druggists
 for gratuitous distribution, wherein may be
 learned the directions for its use, and some of
 the remarkable cures which it has made when
 all other remedies had failed to afford relief.
 Those cases are purposely taken, in order to convince the country, in order that every reader
 may have access to some one who can speak to
 it of its benefits from personal experience.
 Scrofula depresses the vital energies, and thus
 leaves its victims far more subject to disease
 and its fatal results than are healthy constitutions. Hence it tends to shorten, and does
 greatly shorten, the average duration of human
 life. The vast importance of these considerations has led us to spend years in perfecting a remedy which is adequate to its cure. This
 we now offer to the public under the name of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, although it is composed of ingredients, some of which exceed the best of Sarsaparilla in alternative power. By
 its aid you may protect yourself from the suffering and danger of these disorders. Purge out
 the foul corruptions that rot and fester in the blood; purge out the cause of disease, and
 vigorous health will follow. By its peculiar
 virtues this remedy stimulates the vital functions, and thus expels the distempers which
 lurk within the system or burst out on any
 part of it.

We know the public have been deceived by
 many compounds of Sarsaparilla, that promised
 much and did nothing; but they will neither be
 deceived nor disappointed in this. Its virtues
 have been proven by abundant trial, and there
 remains no question of its surpassing excellence
 for the cure of the afflicting diseases it is intended to reach. Although under the same
 name, it is a very different medicine from any
 other which has been before the people, and is
 far more effectual than any other which has
 ever been available to them.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.

The World's Great Remedy for Coughs, Colds, Whooping Consumption, and for the relief
 of Consumptive patients
 in advanced stages
 of the disease.
 This has been so long used and so univer-
 sally known, that we need do no more than
 assure the public that its quality is kept up to
 the best it ever has been, and that it may be relied on to do all it has ever done.

Affection.
 I would be with thee in thy happy hours,
 My love to thee resign,
 When not a shadow o'er thy pathway lowers,
 When sunny joy is thine;
 I would be with thee when hope's sky is fairest,
 When bright its soft star shines;
 When over scenes the fondest and the dearest
 Its radiance ne'er declines.
 I would be with thee when sad sorrow beareth
 For thee a wintry shade.
 For o'er the sky the brightest hue that weareth
 Some sombre tints are laid;
 I would be with thee then to share thy sighing,
 Kind words are balm for woe;
 Thy gentle dove, when wounded to its flying,
 A loving voice will know.
 I would be with thee in the gladdest time
 Of summer leaf and song,
 When in the heart awakes the sweetest chime
 Where strains of love belong.
 I would be with thee, have thee mine to cherish
 Ere fades life's morn away,
 Or from thy brow one sunny memory perish,
 I would be thine always.

Flowers.
 As skylarks love the clouded sky,
 Where bees and flowers are, there am I.
 Who loves not flowers? I know not who.
 But this I know, most good folk do.
 No foe of flowers could I forgive;
 They are my life, on them I live;
 But oh! there's frailty in their beauty,
 How sadly making sadness duty.

Scraps.
 Morns. Many persons erroneously suppose that the best way to prevent moths from getting into woollens or furs, is occasionally throwing the summer to hang the articles out in the sun and air. This is a great mistake as it is by such exposure that the moths get into them. On the contrary, in the Spring, when the season is over for furs and woollens, they should be well shaken and brushed, and then wrapped up tightly in linen, laying among them lumps of camphor, handfuls of fresh hops,
 shreds of good tobacco, or cuttings of Russia
 leather.

DELICIOUS LEMON PIE. Four eggs, two coffee cups of sugar, beat to a froth; the juice of two lemons, grate the yellow peel of one, rejecting the pith of the second and the pulp of both; beat all together a few moments longer. Have ready two pie plates lined with rich pastry, into which turn the above;
 cover with pastry, and bake an hour.

Would that men everywhere were fully convinced that fair and honest dealing is not only the most honorable, but that it is the safest and surest road to success.

There are two kinds of cats—one with nine lives, the other with nine tails; the former always fall upon their own feet, the latter upon others' backs.

The pursuit of pleasure is unprofitable business. The more you catch it the more it escapes from you.

Babies are the tyrants of the world. The Emperor must tread softly; baby sleeps! Mozart must have his nocturne; baby sleeps!
 Plutarch must drop his hammer and chisel;
 baby sleeps! Demosthenes, be dumb!
 —baby sleeps!

In good society, we are required to do obliging things to one another; in genteel society
 we are required only to say them.

It is easier to give counsel, than to take it.
 Give not your advice or opinion before required.

Repine not, O man, that thou servest another; it is the appointment of God, and hath many advantages; it removeth thee from the cares and solitudes of life.

Generosity consists not in the sum given,
 but in the manner and the occasion of its being bestowed.

The possession of wealth and riches cannot give a man a title to greatness, because it is looked upon as a greatness of mind to condemn these gifts of fortune, and to be above the desire of them.

Pure truth, like pure gold, has been found unfit for circulation, because men have discovered that it is far more convenient to adulterate the truth than to refine themselves.

Miscellaneous.

The Soldier's Letter.

When did you hear from Thomas?
 A young lady had stopped at the door of a small house, standing in the outskirts of a village in Pennsylvania, and asked this question of a woman who sat working on a coarse garment.

It's more than two months since I've had a word from him, replied the woman, in a half-troubled, half-complaining tone. Then rising, she added: Won't you come in, Miss Annie?

The young lady accepted the invitation,
 and as she took the proffered chair, said:
 Two months is a long time not to have heard from your son, Mrs. Rogers. Where is he?

The last news I had came from Williamsburg just after the battle. He sent me three or four lines to say that he wasn't hurt.

And you have heard nothing since?
 Nothing, Miss Annie. He may be dead,
 or a prisoner, for all I know. Oh dear! dear!
 It's worrying the very life out of me.

When did you write to him last? inquired
 the young lady.

Mrs. Rogers moved uneasily, and a shame-flush covered her face, as she replied:
 I haven't taken a pen in my fingers these five years. They're all cramped with hard work, and I couldn't write fit to be seen.

A single line from your hand, Mrs. Rogers, blotted and scrawled though it might have been, would have come to Thomas, in his far away camp, as a most welcome visitor from home. Think of his comrades getting letters by every mail, while there came not a word or a token for him.

Oh! but Miss Annie, I've sent him two pairs of stockings knit with my own hands;
 and he's never so much as let me know that he received them.

A letter should have gone with them, said
 the young lady. The stockings, if they ever reached him, were but dumb signs; a loving sentence, even if he had been obliged to spell it out slowly from among ill-formed words, would have spoken to his heart and warmed it with a living pleasure. Write to your son, Mrs. Rogers. Nothing that you can send him will do Thomas half so much good as a letter from his mother. A single line will be precious. Don't let him any longer have the feeling, among his comrades, that he alone has no one to care for him, or send him sweet remembrances.

I don't believe I can write, Miss Annie,
 said Mrs. Rogers.

Try. Have you pen and ink?
 No, Miss. As I told you just now, I have not had a pen in my fingers these five years;
 and I don't believe I could compose a letter
 even if I had the skill to write it out.

You must try, Mrs. Rogers. It will never do in the world for Thomas to go any longer without a letter from home. I have a spare inkstand, and will step around for it.

And the young lady arose, saying as she went out:

I'll be back again in a little while, with pen, ink and paper. Between us, Thomas must have a letter.

On Annie's return with writing materials,
 Mrs. Rogers, still reluctant to undertake the unaccustomed task of writing a letter, sat down, half per force, and made sundry awkward attempts to form words and sentences,
 by way of practice, before essaying the epistle which her ardent young visitor had made up her mind should be produced and mailed to the absent soldier that day.

Very well done! Of course you can write!
 said Annie, encouragingly, as she watched the efforts of Mrs. Rogers. Now take a sheet of paper, and just think you are talking to him. Write down whatever you would like to say, and say just as much about home,
 and what is going on here, that you think would interest him, as you can call to mind.

Take your time to it, and don't feel hurried.
 I'll come around again in the course of an hour, and see what you've done. Then we'll both go over it, and I'll make all the corrections needed, so that you can copy it out fairly. My word for it, there'll be a nice letter for Thomas, that will do his heart good.

In an hour Anne came back, as she had promised. Mrs. Rogers had filled two pages of paper with rather badly spelled sentences;
 but the matter was all right as far as it went.
 Annie made all needed corrections, and then waited until Mrs. Rogers had copied the letter which she folded and directed for her.

Shall I mail it for you?

If you please, said Mrs. Rogers.

And the young lady went away, taking the letter. Since learning that Thomas Rogers, whom she very well remembered, had not once received a letter from his mother, altho'
 he had been absent for over a year, she had felt pity and concern for the young man, whose she remembered as a little wild in his habits before he went into the army. This had made her more urgent that the mother should do her duty. The letter was as well as could be expected under the circumstances. Still, as Annie's thoughts went off to the distant camp, and dwelt upon the young man's particular case, it did not seem to her

 all that he needed.

I will write to him! she said, as the case
 (continuing to dwell in her mind) presented itself in stronger and stronger light. He was once, for a short time, my scholar in Sunday School, and that will be my warrant.

She wrote him a brief but pointed and earnest letter, touching his duties as a soldier and a man. Not in a superior, lecturing tone—but in a kind, suggestive way, and in language calculated to touch his feelings and arouse his better nature.

An officer sat in his tent near Gaines' Mills,
 Virginia, three days previous to the assault
 on the right wing of our army before Richmond.

In the guard-house again! he said, speaking to the orderly, who had just submitted his report. There was regret, as well as discouragement in his voice. What are we to do with the man?

You will have to order severe punishment.
 Simple confinement in the guard-house is of no use.

He has in him all the elements of a good soldier, remarked the officer. No one goes through the manual better. He is perfectly drilled; is quick, steady and brave. At Williamsburg he fought like a lion. I can't forget that to his prompt courage I owe my life. No—not severe punishment.

We must bear with him a little longer. What is his offence now?

He was away at roll-call, and his report of himself is unsatisfactory. The man is restless and brooding, and sometimes so ill-natured
 as to make trouble with his comrades.

The officer sat in thought for some time.
 He was about speaking, when a sergeant came in with letters, a mail having been received. In running his eyes over them,
 the officer noticed two directed to Thomas Rogers, the soldier reported as in the guardhouse. He held them for a moment in his hand, and then laid them aside with his own letter.

Let me see you again in half an hour, he said to the orderly. We must do something to reform this man. There is good in him, if we can only discover the way to make it active.

The orderly retired, and the officer became occupied with his letters. After getting through with them, word was passed to have Rogers brought before him. He came under guard, but the guard was dismissed, and the man was alone with the officer, who regarded him more in pity than in anger. The soldier was a young man, not over twenty years of age, of slender form, but compactly built and muscular. Even under disgrace, there was a manly, self-poised about him that did not escape the officer's notice.

Under arrest again! What have you to say for yourself? The officer tried to be stern and speak with severity.

The soldier did not answer; but a look,
 half-dogged, half-defiant, was visible in his face.

I shall have to order severe punishment.

There was no reply; only a slight change
 in attitude and expression of countenance that indicated a bracing of mind and nerve for more endurance.

When did you hear from home? asked the officer, who did not remember to have seen a letter addressed to Rogers until the receipt of that day's mail.

Not for a long time, was answered, with apparent surprise at so unexpected a question.
 Here are two letters to your address. And the officer who had the letters in his hand, held them toward the soldier, who started with a strange look of surprise and bewilderment, and received them with a hand that trembled visibly.

Sit down and read them, said the officer,
 pointing to a camp-stool. The man sat down, showing considerable excitement, and after looking curiously at the delicately written superscriptions, opened one of the letters and glanced it through hurriedly. The officer's gaze was on him, and he read in his countenance the rapid play of various emotions.— Then he opened the second letter, which was read twice. As he finished it he drew his hand hastily across his eyes.

From home? queried the officer.

The young soldier stood up, giving the usual sign of respect, as he answered in the affirmative. The officer noticed that his face was graver and paler, and that all the late look of dogged defiance had faded out.

And now, Rogers, what have you to say for yourself? Will you drive us to a severe punishment? You know, as well as I do, that discipline must be enforced. There was remonstrance, not anger, in the officer's voice.

Only this, answered the soldier, humbly, yet in a firm voice. I have done wrong, and am sorry. Forgive me, and if I break a rule of the service again, shoot me.

Spoken like a man and a soldier! I will trust you, Rogers, said the officer; and, dismissing the guard, he sent him to duty.

Two days afterward came that overwhelming assault upon our right wing, and on the next day the terrible conflict at Gaines' Mills.

Among the coolest and bravest in all the fierce battles that followed, and among the most enduring in the long nights of retreat, was young Rogers. He was with that body of infantry which lay at the bottom of Malvern Hill, under our death-dealing batteries,
 the fire of which staggered and then drove back the rebel masses, whose desperate courage in that maddest of all assaults was worthy of a better cause. Twice during this series of battles, as once at Williamsburg, had Rogers, risking his own life, saved that of his Captain's; and in several of the conflicts he had shown such coolness and courage, that positions were saved, which, but for the infusion of his spirit into his comrades would have been lost.

One day, about three weeks after the letters were written to Thomas Rogers, the young lady whom we called Annie, received a reply from the soldier, dated: In camp, near Harrison's Landing. It ran thus:

A good angel must have put it into your heart to send me that letter; for it came just in time to save me. I was in the guardhouse for neglect of duty and disobedience
 of orders.

I was reckless and desperate. All my comrades were getting word from home;
 letters came to them by every mail—but no
 one wrote to me, or seemed to care for me.
 So I lost respect for myself, grew sour, unhappy and indifferent to duty. But your kind words—your talk about the past time when you were my teacher—your strong appeal to my better nature—your calm, true, sweet sentences, dear lady! stirred my heart with new feelings, and filled my eyes with tears.

I was before my Captain, in disgrace, when your letter was placed in my hands. He waited for me to read it; saw that I was touched, and, like a true man that he is, forgave my offence. Then and there I resolved to do sooner than avert a hair's breadth from duty. I have been in fearful battles since, but God has kept me from harm. Today, for bravery and faithful service in these battles, I have been made a Second Lieutenant. Thanks, thanks to you, kind, good friend! You have saved one who came nigh being lost!

Fair reader is there not, in some far away
 camp, a soldier who would be made better or happier through a letter from your hand?
 Think, if there is, write to him. Brothers, sisters, fathers, mothers, write often to the soldiers who have gone out from your homes.
 They are in the midst of temptations, trials,
 suffering and privations, and your words of love, your tenderly manifested interest, your exhortations to courage and duty, cannot but do them good.

Disposing of an Attorney.

A simple farmer, who had just buried a rich relation, an attorney, was complaining of the great expense of a funeral cavalcade in the country.

Why! do you bury your attorneys here?
 asked Foote.

Yes, to be sure we do—how else?

No, we never do that in London.

Oh! then pray how do you manage?

Why, when a patient happens to die, we lay him out in a room over night by himself, lock the door, throw open the window, and in the morning he is entirely off.

Indeed! said the other, with amazement,
 what becomes of him?

Why, that we can't exactly tell; all we know is, there's a strong smell of brimstone
 in the room the next morning!

Envy.

Envy is strongly characteristic of littleness
 of mind; a truly noble and generous man
 feels no enmity towards a successful rival.

It is related by D'Herbelot, of an Arabian king, who reigned at Hira, named Normannal Aour, that when his architect Sennamar had finished for him a structure of surpassing magnificence and beauty, he ordered him to be thrown from his highest tower for fear that he might build a palace of equal or superior beauty for some rival king.

A Cute Darkey.

Bob, now called Belmont Bob, is the body
 servant of General Clermand, and at the battle of Belmont it is said of him that when the retreat commenced, he started for the hosts.
 Rescuing the banks, he dismounted and slid rapidly down, when an officer seeing the action, called:
 Stop you rascal, and bring along the horse.
 Merely looking up as he was to the plank through the mud, the darker replied:
 Can't 'bey, Colonel! Masior told me to save the most valuable property, and 'dis nig-
 ger's woff mo'n a horse.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, May 30th, 1863.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

JONES' ELEVENTH MASSACHUSETTS BATTERY. The time of this corps of nine months' men, connected with the army of the Potomac, expired on Sunday last; they reached Boston on Tuesday—and are now resting from the fatigues of their nine months' campaign, at their respective homes. Mr. Charles Merritt, a member of this Battery, and who graduated from this office, called upon us soon after he arrived in town. We were pleased to see him look so well. The wear and tear of camp life, has made but little impression upon him. His health is much improved—and the salubrious air of Virginia, and Uncle Sam's good living, he says, has carried his weight up to a pretty high figure. He remains at home for the present.

The annexed are the names of the Quincy boys, who were members of this Battery:—James G. Shannon, W. Q. Baxter, Charles W. Baxter, Chas. Merritt, Oliver J. Blanchard, Theodore B. Thomas, Zebina Small, Wm. H. Taplin, and Thomas Jones. Of one hundred and fifty-one members which composed this company, all have been blessed with a safe return.

A GOOD MOVE. We notice that the Surveyor of Highways, Capt. Richard Newcomb, of the Centre District, is making improvements on Washington street, between the Canal and the Stone Church, by grading and other ways improving the same. This is something which has been much needed for a long time, and we hope, now the Captain has got about it, he will do it up in good shape.

MR. WALKER'S SCHOOL. The Exhibition of this School in their graceful accomplishment, at the Town Hall, on Thursday evening, was highly gratifying. There was a large company present—and every thing passed off in the most agreeable manner. The grace, dignity, and sylph-like motions of this young school, as they threaded the intricacies of the maye dance, bore evidence of their proficiency, and reflected great credit on their accomplished teacher. They kept the floor until ten o'clock, and then yielded it to an older class, to finish what they had so admirably begun.

ACCIDENT. We are sorry to learn that Mr. George W. Hutcheson, of North Weymouth, had his leg accidentally broken, on Tuesday last, while riding in an open wagon at Weymouth Landing, by a kick of his colt, which took fright from the sliding of a load of boards.

GUNBOAT LAUNCH. The United States Gunboat Osceola was launched from the yard of Curtis & Tilden, at East Boston, on Saturday afternoon last. She was gaily decked with flags and streamers. A company of two or three hundred persons were upon her decks, and a crowd upon the bridge and in the yard, to witness the launch. A few minutes before three o'clock, she started with a sudden spring, as if impatient for battle—nearly throwing the entire company upon her decks; then sliding gracefully forward, "With one exulting, joyous bound, She leaps into the ocean's arms."

A salute was fired from the deck of the steamer, and was answered by the cheers of hundreds of spectators. Miss Mary E. Moore, daughter of the late Sailing Master Moore, of the Congress, broke the wine bottle over the bows, and named her Osceola. (May the name of the proud Chieftain of the forest never be disgraced.)

A steam tug took her in tow, before she came to a stop—and in about forty-five minutes after she started on the ways, the company were safely landed at the Glendon Rolling Mills' wharf, where her engines and machinery will be taken in. The whole affair was very successful.

ICE CREAMS. In these "hot times" who is it that does not wish for a cool, delicious Ice Cream? And who is there better adapted to serve these delicacies morsels than our friend Carver, whose card appears in another column. Give him a call and get refreshed by partaking of his icy Creams.

GENERAL BURNIDE AND THE LADIES.—The wife of the corsair Semmes, who has been passing the winter at Cincinnati, has been compelled to go South, by a recent order of General Burnside. A correspondent says, "She was accompanied by her three daughters and two sons. She is fifty or fifty-five years of age, and very homely. She was very indignant about having her baggage searched, and said all sorts of hard things about the officers."

Boston Correspondence.

Boston, May 28, 1863.

The memory of man runneth not to the contrary, of so large gatherings in the American Athens in the last week of May as we witnessed the past four days. Visitors are here daily by the thousands in attendance on the Anniversary meetings. So far, the weather has been propitious, and the city wears a gay and lively appearance. The proceedings of the Unitarian and Universalists, denominations—of the American and Foreign Christian Union—the United States Christian Commission—the Seamen's Friend Society, and the pleasant gatherings of other societies too numerous to mention in words, have been of much interest. War matters and anti-Slavery, are the prominent elements of discussion in the various gatherings of these moral and religious associations. The special interest of the day is the Festival of Faneuil Hall, at the Unitarian Festival and anti-Copperhead. Mr. Collier of Chicago, was quite radical. He advised Governor Andrews who was present, if he ever got a chance, to hang up a copperhead, and see what effect it would have on the mass. He predicted that such men as Phillips and Garrison would have their reward, and their teachings be practised forever; all of which were received with applause.

BUSINESS.

Trade transactions through the week, with wholesale dealers continue limited. Retail trade is improving. It will be good news to all housekeepers to know that cotton goods are declining daily in price in anticipation of the opening of the Mississippi, by which a million bales of cotton would be released from rebel control.

WAR INTELLIGENCE.

The public mind has been in a spasmodic suspense since Sunday last respecting the supposed capture of Vicksburg by General Grant. But to the moment of my writing no definite news has reached us of the fall of Vicksburg. Yet we cannot mistake the strong conviction that the doom of this ill-starred city is irrevocably sealed; and that the American flag will soon wave there in triumph.

The army of General Hooker is profoundly quiet—and from appearances will not move or stir for some weeks or months to come.

ENGLAND HUMBLED.

The London Standard's New York correspondent, "Manhattan," in a late letter gravely asserts that a reputation of no less than ten eminent Americans, headed by Mr. W. H. Aspinwall, of New York, is on its way to Old England by direction of Mr. Seward, for the purpose of arranging all matters between England and the United States. They are to have unlimited power to draw on the Secret Service Fund, with which to buy up the London editors, and if need be, the British Cabinet. Mr. Adams having lost the confidence of Mr. Seward, is to be requested to resign, and if he declines, to be recalled peremptorily.

THE OLD HANCOCK ESTATE.

In consequence of the sale of this estate spoken of in my last—the heirs have made a gift of the old stone house, furniture and fine old portraits, together with many other objects of historical interest to the City of Boston—to be removed and kept entire as a museum of antiquities—open to the public forever. The removal of the house to any part of the City would cost $10,000 to Quincy more than that sum.

GETTING NEWS UNDER DIFFICULTIES.

An ecclesiastical trial occurred lately at Peoria, Illinois, and to prevent its publication, all the persons were previously sworn not to divulge the proceedings. The trial was held in a building in which a fire company meet in one of the rooms. Two reporters for the press took a suction hose, fastened it to the end of the stovepipe, inserted it in the chimney, and by that means conveyed the sound into the room below, where they took notes, which next morning appeared in the newspapers generally, to the surprise of the court.

LEGISLATION AGAINST THE NEGROES.—The assembly of New Jersey has passed a bill providing that any negro or mulatto coming into that State, and remaining ten days therein, shall be transported to Liberia or some island in the West Indies where slavery does not exist; and authorized the Governor to pay the expense, not exceeding fifty dollars in each case arising under the act.

COTTON. A correspondent of the New Orleans Era, at Opelousas, says a gentleman intimately acquainted with the planters of that and the neighboring parishes, informed him the estimate made by them of the number of bales of cotton opened up to the world in the country occupied by our troops would not fall short of two hundred thousand bales, and our advance would soon throw as much more on the market. It had been hid in the woods, &c., to keep the rebel soldiers from burning it.

A DRAFT. The Washington correspondent of the Chicago Tribune says that a draft for three hundred thousand men will shortly be ordered by the President for the purpose of filling up the old Regiments. It is not the present intention to form any new Regiments. There is no time to drill and prepare Regiments for this campaign. The draft has been delayed by the labor of organizing the machinery for it.

JACKSON, MISSISSIPPI. Jackson, the capital of Mississippi, which has been captured by General Grant, contains a beautiful State House, erected at a cost of half a million of dollars, the Executive mansion, the State Lunatic Asylum, the Penitentiary, sundry churches, and three or four newspaper offices. It is, or was before the war, the centre of a large and lucrative cotton trade. About thirty thousand bales used to be annually shipped from there. The population according to the last census, was about five thousand.

Summary of Intelligence.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

Heretofore it has been generally estimated that the quantity of change in circulation in this country was $50,000,000. Now it appears that fifteen millions of the postal currency has filled all the channels of circulation. The government has printed only eighteen millions, and it has three millions on hand for which there is no call.

A fine carriage was seen in the streets of Columbus, Mississippi, the other day, drawn by a fine pair of black oxen.

Eight thousand bushels of flax have been sown in one county in Ohio this season. There is to be a great crop all over the land. Hay is worth the moderate price of $180 per ton in Dixie.

It is claimed by agriculturists that Minnesota is a great State for the culture of flax, and as linen can be substituted for cotton almost wholly, the dominion of King Cotton might be disturbed by its cultivation.

Nebraska contains some of the richest salt fields in the world. In Saline and Lancaster counties, fifty miles from the Missouri river, are about twenty thousand acres, in the several basins, covered with a thick crust of salt.

A smart negro, the other day, in making his exodus through Kansas, city was driving a stylish buggy with the following inscriptions: "Emancipation and no Compensation," "Deportation and Free Transportation."

It is said that one of the rich men of New York, on being recently required to give an account of his personal property for taxation, gave a note to his wife for five hundred thousand dollars, and then swore that he was worth only fifty thousand dollars personal, and owed five hundred thousand dollars.

Maine had eight Regiments in the late battles and Massachusetts had eighteen. Maine Regiments lost a total in killed, wounded and missing, of 543 men, while Massachusetts Regiments lost 732.

MARKETS IN ILLINOIS. The strawberry season has opened in Chicago. The berries now in market are from Southern Illinois, and are of large size and fully ripe. The Chicago markets present the singular spectacle of ornamental and fruit trees, bulbs, plants and garden seeds for spring planting, while alongside are offered for sale ripe strawberries and full sized green gooseberries.

ABOUT BOURBON WHISKY. Our readers will notice the advertisement in to-day's paper, headed "Wheat, Rye, Corn." The "Golden Sheaf Whisky" is, without doubt, a reliable article, and we have no hesitation in recommending it to those who require a pure and nutritious stimulant, for family and medicinal use. It is made from choice selected grain, in Bourbon Co. (Ky.) and is supplied by the exclusive agent, C. A. Richards, Esq., 91 Washington street, Boston. Mr. Richards has had a large experience in the manufacture and sale of Bourbon Whisky, and he stakes his reputation on the excellence and purity of the "Golden Sheaf Whisky." It is put up in bottles, in a convenient and useful style, and purchasers will neither be deceived or disappointed, should they try it. It has met with a large demand in Boston, where its merits have been tested by many chemists, and others of well-known ability to judge.

For the Patriot.

The Draft.

To the Publisher of the Patriot:

This is a subject which has agitated the public generally for the last few months. There is scarcely one, among the many that are liable to the Draft, who has read the "Conscript Bill" without a shudder; and none, more so, than the poor laboring man, who has, perhaps, a kind and loving wife with little ones looking to him for support and protection. For this reason, I wish to bring before the citizens of Quincy, particularly the laboring portion, the excellent example set us by the voters of Phippsburg, Maine, who have voted to raise $300 for each one who may be drafted from that town, that he may pay his fine, or join the ranks, as he may see fit. In doing this, those who are able will have to pay the fine of those who may choose to stay at home; and this would be right and just, since a certain amount will exempt a man from military duty. Let us, then, citizens of Quincy, not be backward in a good cause, but call a meeting and do as Phippsburg has done. This will enable those who cannot go, to remain with their families; and it will also encourage those who can go, by its handsome sum.

Mr. Heath will preach to-morrow afternoon upon—"The contradictions in the Trinitarian Theology."

AMMONIATED PACIFIC GUANO.

WE are receiving a constant supply of this superior Guano, which will be found one of the cheapest and best Fertilizers in the market. It is powerful and efficacious, capable of carrying the crops through the season, maturing the same, before the early frost, and leaving the soil enriched by the addition of Phosphate of Lime and Ammoniacal Salts—not impoverishing it as does the Peruvian. It is adapted to all soils, and all the various crops—Grains, Corn, Potatoes, Root Crops, Tobacco, &c., &c., as will be seen by the numerous letters and testimonials received the last season. Every Farmer and Gardener should give it a trial. The present and prospective high prices for the products of the country are enough to stimulate every agriculturalist to extra exertions in producing more than a usual crop the coming season. Poetry.

The Maiden's Choice.

A young maid sat by her cottage tree,
A beautiful maid,—at the dawn of day;
Her sewing fell idle upon her knee,
For her heart and her thoughts were far away;
When a sober old wooer came up to the dell,
A wooer, whose hopes one would think were few;
But a maid's heart is a puzzle to tell,
And though old his face, yet his coat was new;
"Oh! fix it yourself, my darling," said he;
"No, go and ask my mother," said she.

Scarcely into the house had the wooer gone,
When a young man leaped over a neighboring stile,
And said was the look that the youth put on,
And playful and gay was the maiden's smile;
"Pray who is this card that comes here to town?
And why at your side does he look so free?
Must I ask your mother, dear Mary, too?"
"No, Harry," she whispered, "you must ask me!"
"I'd better go in your mother to see!"
"No, Harry, no, no, you must kneel and ask me!"

There was waiting one morn at the village church,
Waiting and weeping and words of woe;
For the wealthy old wooer was left in the lurch,
The maid had gone off with a younger brook,
Warmly the sun on the hedgerow glowed,
Warmly it shone on the old farm gate;
And with the laughter upon the road,
As Harry rode off with his wedded mate:
"Ha, ha!" cried she, "Ho, ho!" laughed he,
"They may wait a long time ere the bride they see."

Coming Home.

O brothers and sisters, growing old,
Do you all remember yet
That home, in the shade of the rustling trees,
Where once our household met?
Do you know how we used to come from school,
Through the summer's pleasant heat;
With the yellow fennel's golden dust
On our tired little feet?
And how sometimes in an idle mood
We loitered by the way;
And stopped in the woods to gather flowers,
And in the fields to play;

Till warned by the deepening shadow's fall,
That told of the coming night,
We climbed to the top of the last, long hill,
And saw our home in sight!
And, brothers and sisters, older now
Than she whose life is o'er,
Do you think of the mother's loving face,
That looked from the open door?

Alas, for the changing things of time;
That home in the dust is low;
And that loving smile was hid from us,
In the darkness, long ago!
And we have come to life's last hill,
From which our weary eyes
Can almost look on that home that shines
Eternal in the skies.

So, brothers and sisters, as we go,
Still let us move as one,
Always together keeping step,
Till the march of life is done;
For that mother, who waited for us here,
Wearing a smile so sweet,
Now waits on the hills of paradise
For her children's coming feet.

Anecdotes.

Some years ago, a person requested permission of the Bishop of Salisbury, to fly from the top of the spire of that cathedral. The good Bishop, with an anxious concern for the man's spiritual as well as temporal safety, told him he was very welcome to fly to the church, but he would encourage no man to fly from it.

Smith and Brown, running opposite ways round a corner, struck each other.
Oh, dear! says Smith, how you made my head ring.
That's a sign it's hollow, says Brown.
Didn't your ring? says Smith.
No, says Brown.
That's a sign it's cracked, replied his friend.

Mr. C. one day said to Lord Stuart, now the war is over, won't you put your mustache on the peace establishment? I don't know, replied he, but would advise you to put your tongue on the civil list.

William, said a teacher to one of his pupils, can you tell me why the sun rises in the east?
Don't know, sir, replied William, 'cept it be that the 'est makes everything rise.

A pretty little brunette of fourteen was passing along the streets a few days since, when she was accosted by a strange man, rather worse for liquor, who inquired if her mother was as black as she was.
I believe not, was the reply; but pray tell me if your father is as blue as you are.

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering, but none will confess. The records of the insane Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion. The constitution, once affected with Organic Weakness, requires the aid of medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system, which HELMHOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. Three Words of Strength.

There are three lessons I would write—
Three words as with a burning pen,
In tracings of eternal light,
Upon the hearts of men.

Have Hope. Though clouds environ now,
And gladness hides her face in scorn,
Pat thou the shadow from thy brow—
No night but hath its morn.

Have Faith. Where'er thy bark is driven—
The calm'st of spirit, the tempest's mirth—
Know this—God rules the hosts of heaven,
Th' inhabitants of earth.

Have Love. Not love alone for one,
But man, as man, thy brother call,
And scatter like the circling sun,
Thy charities on all.

Thus grave these lessons on thy soul—
Hope, Faith, and Love—and thou shalt find Strength when life's surges rudest roll,
Light when thou else wert blind.

What was Wanted.

She tied the new cravat
Which she so kindly made me;
Then smoothed with care my hat,
And with her arms delayed me;
She brushed my "glossy hair,"
And said "it was so early!"
While going down the stairs
She cried, "Come home, dear, early!"
How happy then I was!
With all I'er desired;
I fortune could defy
While thus I was admired!
We parted at the door—
Her smile deserved a sonnet!
"Dear love!—but one thing more,
I want—a new spring bonnet!"

Scraps.

SMOKED BEEF. One quart of molasses, thick with salt; one tablespoonful of sal-petre. The meat to be well rubbed with this;
then let it lie three weeks before smoking.

It is no wonder that our people are brave
as well as martine, as every boatman is necessarily a Row man.

It is considered a well established truth that battles are decided not so much by the number of men killed and wounded as by the number scared.

He who goes through the land and scatters blow roses, may be tracked next day by the withered petals that strew the ground; but he who goes through it and scatters rose seed, leaves behind him a hundred years after, a land full of fragrance and beauty for his monument and as a heritage for his daughters and sons.

Nature is a great believer in compensations.
Those to whom she sends wealth, she saddles with lawsuits and dyspepsia. The poor never indulge in woodcock but they have a style of appetite that converts a number three mackrel into a salmon, and that is quite as well.

Boy, why don't you go to school? "Cause,
sir, daddy is afeared that if I learns everything
now, I shant have nothing to learn when I come to go to the 'cademy."

As daylight can be seen through very small holes, so little things will illustrate a person's character. Indeed, character consists in little acts, and honorably performed; daily life
being the quarry from which we build it up,
and rough-hewn the habits that form it.

"None of your unkind reflections," as the old maid said to the mirror.

We wise; for in gaining wisdom you also gain an entrance from which no shaft of malice can hurt you.

Never, perhaps, are children dearer to their parents than when the price of bread and meat is excessive.

Pitch upon that course of life which is the most excellent, and habit will render it the most delightful.

It is affirmed by scientific gentlemen that the pressure of the times, if it could be used as a propelling power, would force a vessel
across the Atlantic in twenty-four hours.

We may say of a good many people's souls
that it is a wonder nature ever thought them worth framing.

Miscellaneous.

The Leap for Life.

At the siege of Fort Henry, September 1777, Major Samuel McCulloch performed an act of physical daring second to none in the annals of the Revolution, and contrasted with which Putnam's overland ride down the declivity at Horseneck in Connecticut, pales
into insignificance.

Fort Henry, situated on Wheeling Creek, on the left bank of the Ohio river, had been erected for the protection of Wheeling, a small scattered village, containing about forty-five huts. On the evening before the siege the inhabitants had received intimation of the approach of the Indians, and had one and all fled to the Fort for refuge. Early in the morning the redskins commenced the attack.

There were but forty fighting men within the Fort, and of these, twenty-eight soon fell in unsuccessful sorties against the foe; but the remaining twelve were stout, brave men—
sharp shooters—whose aim was seldom taken in vain, and who, when the notorious Girty
and his fellow warriors demanded the surrender of the Fort, replied that it would not be given up while there was a living American within it. The siege then commenced in fearful earnest, but was bravely resisted, with the desperate odds of twelve within and four hundred without the walls. The women acted nobly on the occasion—casting bullets, making cartridges, loading rifles, and in every way assisting and inspiring the men. During a lull in the evening's attack, one of the besieged, Elizabeth Zane, volunteered to go to a house, sixty yards from the Fort, to get a keg of gunpowder which had been left there.

The case was a desperate one; their ammunition was getting low, and Elizabeth urged that her life was of less importance to the garrison than that of a man. Reluctantly permission was yielded to her. She left the Fort, and, within full view of the savages, fearlessly proceeded to the house. They watched her closely, and as she flew towards the Fort with a keg of powder in her arms, a volley of shot was poured around her. But the noble girl escaped unhurt, and entered the Fort amidst the cheers and blessings of the besieged. In a few hours the Indians renewed the attack, continuing it throughout the night. They converted a hollow log into a field piece, bound it with chains, loaded it to the muzzle with stones, pieces of iron, etc., and discharged it against the gates of the Fort. It burst into a thousand pieces, scattering the contents in every direction; several Indians were killed by the explosion; but not a picket of the Fort was injured.

At sunrise, succor reached the exhausted
garrison. Colonel Swearingen, with fourteen soldiers, effected an entrance into the Fort without any loss, and an hour or two later
Major McCulloch arrived with mounted men.
The entire force, after some desperate hand-
to-hand fighting, succeeded in entering; but their brave commander was less fortunate.
Intensely hated by the Indians, for he was one of their most notorious and skillful foes,
he at once became the centre upon which their malignity was concentrated. Burning with hatred, and a desire for revenge, they crowded around him as he dashed forward in the rear of his men and succeeded in cutting him off from the gate.

Finding himself unable, after the most strenuous efforts, to accomplish his entrance,
and seeing the uselessness of a conflict against such a force, he suddenly wheeled his horse, and fled in the direction of Wheeling Hill. A throng of warriors cut off his retreat in this direction, driving him back upon another party who blocked up the path
behind; while a third closed in upon him
from one of the other sides of the square.—
The fourth and open side was in the direction of the brow of a precipitous ledge of rocks, nearly one hundred and fifty feet in height, at the foot of which flowed the waters of Wheeling Creek. As he momentarily halted, and took a rapid survey of the dangers which surrounded him on all sides,
he felt that his chance was indeed a desperate one. The Indians had not fired a shot, and as they could easily have killed him, had they chosen to do so, he saw at a glance their intention of taking him alive, if possible, that his ashes might be offered up as a sacrifice to the manes of their departed friends slain by his hand. This was to die a thousand deaths, in preference to which he determined to run the risk of being dashed in pieces; and he struck his heels against the sides of his steed, who ran forward towards the precipice. The encircling warriors, as they saw him so completely in their foils, raised a yell of triumph, little dreaming of the fearful energy which was to baffle their expectations.

As they saw him push his horse in the direction of the precipice, they stood in wonder and amazement, scarcely believing that it could be his intention to attempt the awful leap, which was to all appearances, certain death. McCulloch still bore his rifle, which he had retained in his right hand, and carefully gathered up the bride in his left, he urged his noble animal forward, encouraging him by his voice, until they reached the edge of the bank, when, dashing his heels against the animal's sides, they made the fearful leap into the air. Down, down they went with fearful velocity, without resistance or impediment, until one-half of the space was passed over, when the horse's feet struck the smooth precipitous face of the rock, and the remainder of the distance was slid and scrambled over until they reached the bottom, alive and uninjured. With a shout McCulloch pushed his steed into the stream, and in a few moments horse and rider were seen surmounting the banks on the opposite side.

No pursuit was attempted, nor was a shot fired at the intrepid rider. His enemies stood awe-struck upon the brow of the bank
whence he had leaped, and, as he disappeared
from their view, they returned to the Fort.
They did not long continue their unavailing
efforts, however, for its capture; the numerous additions it had received to its garrison,
the fearlessness exhibited in its defence,
disheartened them, and early in the morning,
after burning the village and capturing its entire stock of cattle, they beat a hasty and ignominious retreat.

Rolansack.

A TALE OF THE RHINE.

It was a charming morning when we started from Coblenz. Just before us on the right was the celebrated fortress of Ehren-breitstein. The beams of the rising sun shone brightly over its battlements, and gilded the rippling waters over which we rapidly glided down the river.

Not far from Bonn are the "Seven Mountains," which, though they somewhat resemble Scottish mountain scenery, seemed to me to wear a less sombre appearance.
This fairy domain has well been called the Paradise of Germany. Long have its mountain shores and vine-clad hills been consecrated by poetry and romance, so that to their natural beauties have been superadded the charms of historic and legendary lore. Particularly the lonely retreat of Frauenworth, and the castle of Drachenfels, attract the admiring gaze of the tourist as he is reminded of the touching legend of Roland and his fair Hildegonda.

The circumstances that invest the history
of these unfortunate lovers with such poetic charms are in substance the following. Sir Roland had completed a successful campaign in Italy, and had returned to his home, and to the bosom of his betrothed. The dangers and toils of the past, as well as the events of futura, were alike unheeded in the enjoyment of the present. Days and weeks uncounted passed, nor did their young hearts dream of aught but bliss. Suddenly, however, the clarion notes of war again were heard, and the unwelcome tidings came to the youthful knight, that the empire of his uncle was invaded by foreign foes. Duty and honor bade him leave the scenes of ignoble ease, and once more, in the excitement of court and camp, forget the halcyon days which he had spent with his fair enchanted. A long and sad adieu was that when Sir Roland left. A dim foreboding of evil seemed to weigh on the mind of Hildegonda, as she watched his white plume disappearing, and caught his last signal of recognition in the waving of his steel-gloved hand.

Months passed on, and the army of Charlemagne were again victorious, and the praises of his valiant nephew were every where heralded. When the army again returned from their southern campaign, Hildegonda anxiously awaited his appearance, but he came not. More than a year had elapsed, when her father received the sad intelligence that Sir Roland had been slain in battle, and found a grave on the banks of the Tagus.—
When the report came to the ears of his daughter, she gave way to inconsolable grief;
the world lost all its attractions, and she immediately entered the convent of Frauen-
worth, vainly hoping to obliterate the memory of her happier days in the assiduous discharge of the duties of piety.

But Roland was not dead; for, as the chroniclers say, he subsequently returned in safety, though bearing honorable scars, which he had received in many a sanguinary encounter on the hills of Spain. And when he beheld once again the mountains of the "Fair Rhine," his heart leaped for joy, for he came hither now to claim the hand of his bride. Hastening to the old castle where he had spent in former years so many sunny hours, he was amazed in finding it deserted.
Its noble lord was dead; so indeed to him
was Hildegonda, for an aged seer informed him of her fate.

"The maid thou seekest is the bride of heaven;
Yestern she spoke the holy vow, and donned the stainless veil."

Overwhelmed with sorrow, Roland at once
immured himself in a gloomy retreat on the Drachenfels, shunning the society of men, and seldom leaving his lonely hermitage but
in quest of food.

Thrice had the golden harvest been gathered in, and thrice had the rich vintage glad-dened the hearts of the husbandmen, when one quiet evening the vesper bell at Frauen-
worth startled the lone watcher with a sad, funeral tone. It is her knell! he wildly exclaimed. He hurried down the steep crag to the river, seized a shallow, crossed the stream, and found it true. Hildegonda was no more.
In silent anguish he knelt beside her newly-covered grave. His heart was broken with grief, and before the morrow's sun was set,
he was reunited with her in the spirit land.
Nor were their names forgotten; but the rude minstrel's lay perpetuated their memory, till a foreign prince erected a tower near the old hermitage. As the traveller approaches the village of Konigswinter, he sees, far up the verdant slopes of the Drachenfels, still standing in imposing beauty the classic ruins of Rolansack.

Potatoes.

The first potatoes grown in this country were from seed brought from Ireland by the Scotch Irish who emigrated from the old country in 1713 and 1719 and settled in Londonderry, (N. H.) They were first raised in the garden of Nathaniel Walker of Andover, and gradually but slowly found their way into general cultivation. They are first mentioned in Newbury in 1732; in Lynn in 1733. In 1737, Rev. Thomas Smith of Portland, says,
"there is not a peck of potatoes in the whole Eastern country." So late as 1750, if any person raised so large a quantity as five bushels, great was the enquiry among his neighbors as to how he could dispose of the enormous quantity.

A Southern Female Unionist.

We hear so often about Southern female secessionists, that it is refreshing to fall in with a Southern female Unionist. One of these rare beauties appeared before Col. Gregory, of Alexandria, (Va.) the other week, to ask some favor. The Colonel is Provost Marshal, and has very little sympathy with humbly. He is supposed to be one of the officers who believe in John Brown's celebrated motto—"We mean to put this thing through."

"Well, Madam," said the Colonel, "I must first know whether you are loyal?"
"Oh! yes," said the Virginian, "I'm for the Union, but my husband is a strong secessionist—and I sympathize with my husband."
This is the most masterly definition of the position of nine-tenths of the Southern Unionists we have seen. They are loyal; but the South is for secession, and they sympathize with it!

The Colonel did not deem the lady "sound
on the goose."

A Pen Portrait.

If an editor omits anything, he is lazy. If he speaks of things as they are, he is mad.
If he glosses over, smooths down the rough points, he is bribed. If he calls things by their proper names, he is unfit for the position of an editor. If he does not furnish his readers with jokes, he is stupid and dull; if he does, he is a rattlehead, lacking stability.
If he condemns the wrong, he is a good fellow, but lacks discretion. If he lets wrong and injuries go unmentioned, he is a coward.
If he upholds a public man, he is bought up;
if he does not, he is a tool of a clique, or belongs to the "outs." If he indulges in personalities, he is a blackguard; if he does not, his paper is dull and insipid.

A Partnership.

The Marquis della Scallan, an Italian nobleman, giving a grand entertainment, his major domo informed him that there was a fisherman below with a remarkably fine fish, but who demanded for it a very uncommon price—
he won't take any money, but insists on a hundred strokes of the strappado on his bare shoulders.

The marquis surprised, ordered him in,
when he persisted in his demand. To humor him the marquis complied, telling his groom
not to lay it on too hard.

When he had received the fiftieth lash, he cried:

"Hold! I have got a partner, to whom I have engaged that he should have half of whatever I was to receive for my fish—your lordship's porter, who would admit me only on that condition."

It is almost unnecessary to add, that the porter had his share well paid, and the fisherman got the full value of his prize.

Poetry.

For the Patriot.
May Morning.

BY LINDA LINDAN.

Arise, shake off thy slumbers!
Go forth this lovely morn,
And view the scenes of beauty
Which earth's fair face adorn.

The first beams of the day
Tinge with a golden hue
The tree tops in the distance,
All wet with sparkling dew.

The flowers, whose tiny blossoms
Fold up at close of day,
Now open their cups to welcome
The glorious sun's bright ray.

Art less alive to beauty
Than little birds that sing
In rich, melodious voices,
Sweet songs in praise of spring?

The lark is soaring upward
With soft and gentle note;
The sweet song of the robin
Upon the breezes float.

The morning dove is singing
Her sweet, though plaintive song
And through open window panes
Its echoes flow along.

Go forth and let the breezes
Of heaven fan thy brow;
Nor let one shade of sadness
Come o'er thy spirit now.

All nature wears an aspect
Of calmness and repose,
As if no clouds of darkness
Above us ever rose.

'Tis thus with life, for oftimes
When all seems bright and gay,
Dark clouds of grief will gather,
And chase our joys away.

But clouds precede the sunshine
As night precedes the day;
And hope again will cheer us
With her reviving ray.

Then let us wait with patience
Her cheering smiles beneath,
Till lost in full fruition,
Heavens joys we all receive.

Fader Linkum.

Ole fader Linkum, Sambo say,
He tank you berry much he do;
He kno you Gummam eby way,
He kno you wong for freedom too.

But den he tink you make mistake
Supposing Darkie no will fight;
It almost make he bosom ache
To be suspect ob no do right.

Gib him de gun and let him try,
And tell him freedom be won;
He tell you fader, Darkie die,
But nebber from he freedom run.

He go where white man dare to lead,
He stand where white man dare to stand,
For freedom he as freely bleed,
As will de bravest ob you band.

Den fader do not doubt de slaves,
Nor tink we'll fight so berry poor;
Gib dem de chance for onored graves,
Wid freedom's banner floating o'er.

And den if him no manhood show,
If he no prove herself de brave,
Den fader Linkum let him go;
Den bad enough to be de slave.

OLE CUT.

Anecdotes.

A tender, loving wife, being on her death-bed, and her disconsolate husband sitting by her, she, fetching a deep sigh, said to him, "My dear it grieves me to think that as soon as I am dead, you will marry again."

My dear, said he, be assured I shall not. Why, then, said she, I am afraid you will do worse.

Indeed, my dear, replied he, I cannot.

Come here, my lad, said an attorney to a boy almost nine years old.

The boy came and asked the attorney what case was to be tried next?

The lawyer answered, A case between the people and the devil—which do you think will be most likely to gain the action?

The boy replied—I guess it will be a pretty hard squeeze—the people have the most money the devil the most lawyers.

A soldier in one of the battles, sitting very coolly behind one of his guns, where the shot was falling fast, being asked by a chaplain whether he was supported by Divine providence, replied, No, sir, I'm supported by the Ninth New Jersey.

Why don't you hold your head as I do? said an aristocratic lady to a sterling old farmer.

Squire, was the reply, look at that field of grain. You see that all the valuable heads are bowed down, while those heads that have nothing in them, stand upright.

The peculiar taint or
infection which we call SCROFULA lurks in the
constitutions of
multitudes of men. It
either produces or is produced by an en-
feebled, vitiated state
of the blood, wherein
the fluid becomes incompetent to sustain
the vital forces in their
vigorous action, and
leaves the system to
fall into disorder and
decay. The scrofulous
contamination is variously caused by mercurial
disease, low living, disordered digestion from
unhealthy food, impure air, filth and filthy
habits, the depressing vices, and, above all, by
the venereal infection. Whatever be its origin,
it is hereditary in the constitution, descending
from parents to children, and to the third and fourth generation; indeed, it seems to be the
lot of him who says, "I will visit the iniquities
of the fathers upon their children." The
diseases which it originates take various names,
according to the organs it attacks. In the
lungs, scrofula produces tubercles, and finally
consumption; in the glands, swellings which
suppurate and become ulcerous sores; in the mouth and bowels, derangements which produce indigestion, dyspepsia, and liver complaints; on the skin, eruptive and cutaneous
diseases. These all having the same origin,
require the same remedy, viz, purification and regulation of the blood. Purify the blood,
and these dangerous distempers leave you.
Virtue, food, or corrupted blood, you can
not have health; with that "life of the flesh"
readily, you cannot have scrofulous disease.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla
is compounded from the most efficient anti-scrofulous medicine science has discovered for its afflicting distemper, and for the cure of the diseases it entails. That it is the best remedy
any other remedy yet devised, is known by all
who have given it a trial. That it does combine virtues truly extraordinary in their effect
upon this class of complaints, is indisputably
proven by the great multitude of publicly
known and remarkable cures it has made of
the following diseases: King's Evil or Glandular Swellings, Tumors, Erup-
tions, Pimples, Blotches and Sores, Ery-
sipelas, Rose or St. Anthony's Fire, Salt
Rheum, Scald Head, Coughs from tu-
berculous deposits in the lungs, White
Swellings, Debility, Dropsy, Neuralgia,
Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Syphilis and Syphilitic Infections, Mercurial Diseases,
Female Weaknesses, and, indeed, the whole
series of complaints that arise from impurity
of the blood. Minute reports of individual
cases may be found in AYER'S AMERICAN
ALMANAC, which is furnished to the druggists
for gratuitous distribution, wherein may be found the directions for its use, and some of
the remarkable cures which it has made when
all other remedies had failed to afford relief.
Those cases are purposely taken from all sections of the country, in order that every reader
may have access to some one who can speak to
him of its benefits from personal experience.
Scrofula depresses the vital energies, and thus
leaves its victims far more subject to disease
and its fatal results than are healthy constitutions. Hence it tends to shorten, and does
greatly shorten, the average duration of human
life. The vast importance of these considerations has led us to spend years in perfecting a remedy which is adequate to its cure. This
we now offer to the public under the name of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, although it is composed of ingredients, some of which exceed the best of Sarsaparilla in alternative power. By
its aid you may protect yourself from the suffering and danger of these disorders. Purge out
the foul corruptions that rot and fester in the
blood; purge out the cause of disease, and vigorous health will follow. By its aid the
virtues this remedy stimulates the vital functions, and thus expels the distempers which
lurk within the system or burst out on any
part of it.

We know the public have been deceived by
many compounds of Sarsaparilla, that promised
much and did nothing; but they will neither be
deceived nor disappointed in this. Its virtues
have been proven by abundant trial, and there
remains no question of its surpassing excellence
for the cure of the afflicting diseases it is indented to reach. Although under the same
name it is a very different medicine from any
other which has been before the people, and is
far more effective than any other which has
ever been available to them.

AYER'S
CHERRY PECTORAL.
The World's Great Remedy for Coughs, Colds, Incipient Consumption, and for the relief
of Consumptive patients
in advanced stages
of the disease.

This has been so long used and so universally known, that we need do no more than
assure the public that its quality is kept up to
the best it ever has been, and that it may be relied on to do all it has ever done.

Prepared by DR. J. C. AYER & CO.,

Sweet Sabbath Bells.

"Sweet Sabbath bells! Sweet sabbath bells!
That six days' inward turmoil quells,
Bid us approach the sacred ground,
Where there's a balm for sorrows found."

Methinks each bell doth seem to say
Be of good cheer, look up to day!
Your risen Saviour's promise give Because I live, so live ye too.

I will remember when your sound
No echo in my bosom found;
But now I feel my heart keeps time
Responsive to your joyous chime.

Sweet Sabbath bells! Sweet sabbath bells!
That six days' inward turmoil quells,
Chime on, till in the east shall dawn
The everlasting Sabbath morn!"

Under the Leaves.

Of have I walked the woodland paths,
Without the blest foreknowing
That underneath the withered leaves
The fairest buds were growing.

To day the south wind sweeps away
The types of Autumn's splendor,
And shows the sweet Arbutus flowers—
Spring's children, pure and tender.

O prophet souls, with lips of bloom,
Outliving in their beauty
The pearly tints of ocean shells,
Ye teach me Faith and Duty.

Walk life's dark ways, ye seem to say,
With Love's divine foreknowing,
That where men sweat but withered leaves,
God sees the sweet flowers growing.

Straps.

DANDY PUDDING. One quart of milk, two table-spoonsful of flour, yolks of four eggs well beaten and mixed with the milk. Beat the whites separately with four teaspoonsful of sugar, drop on the top of the pudding, and put it in the oven.

SPONGE BISCUIT. One pint of yeast, one quart of sweet milk, one cupful of butter, half cupful of lard, one teaspoonful of salt, a little soda. Mix when light, mould in small biscuits.
Let them set fifteen minutes, then bake.

Very tall man in train, to neighbor: I shall get out and stretch my legs here a bit, as we wait ten minutes. For goodness sake, sir, don't do that! They are too long by half, already.

Instead of regretting that we are sometimes deceived, we should rather lament that we are ever undeceived.

They say that justice isn't sold in our courts
but those who try to obtain it often are.

The human soul, like the autumn leaves,
should brighten at the approach of death.

An exchange says:—People should never kiss those of their own sex; we never kissed a boy in our lives—except occasionally a pretty tomboy.

Time wears slippers of list, and his tread
is noiseless. The days come, Indian file, softly dawning, one after another; they creep
in at the windows; their fresh morning air is grateful to the lips of those that pant for it; their music is sweet to the ear that listens to it; until, before we know it, a whole life of days has possession of the citadel, and time has taken us for its own.

Mr. Hollis says he has one of the most obedient boys in the world. He tells him to do as he pleases and he does it without murmuring.

A good man who has seen much of this world and is now tired of it, says: "The grand essentials to happiness in this life are,
something to do, something to love, and something to hope for."

Life is the theatre of arduous exertions and strenuous contention; and one of the best rules for obtaining happiness is to avoid the forming of inordinate expectations.

A quaker hearing a person tell how much he felt for another; dryly asked him: "Friend
last thou felt in thy pocket for him?"

Will you take some grapes, Monsieur? asked a gentleman of a Frenchman. No, sire, he replied: I don't swallow my wine in the shape of pills.

Miscellaneous.

The Husband's Strategy.

The sunset had faded into gray, uncertain dusk. It was decidedly too dark to read—yet it was not time to call out the brilliant fairies of light that were imprisoned in the gilded tubes of the chandeliers. And it so happened that the room was yet in darkness,
save the heavy curtains of amethystine silk,
and the ruddy, fitful gleams of the soft coal
fire that danced and sparkled in the grate.
For it was late in October, and the autumn frosts were descending on the uplands, and even city homes looked all the brighter for a cheerful fire.

All alone? and in a brown study, as I live!
I hope I haven't interrupted you, Clayton?

As if brisk Dr. Colwell ever interrupted anybody! Does the sunshine interrupt the flowers in the garden; does an invigorating breeze interrupt the fevered brow on an August morning? We rather think not! Dr.
Colwell was a man decidedly after the order
of sunshine and brisk breezes.

Not at all, doctor—take this arm chair.
Well, I will, said the doctor, depositing himself comfortably in a nest of crimson silk cushions, flinging his hat upon an opposite
table, and you shall tell me what makes you look so despondent.

Did I look despondent?

Did you? A pretty question to ask an old fellow who has held you on his knee many a time. As if I didn't know every change of your countenance as completely as if it were a printed book. Something is wrong, Mark, so out with it.

Really, sir, said Mark Clayton, laughing,
I was not aware—

Wasn't aware! O, fiddlestick, Mark. Perhaps you're not aware that you are a totally different man from the cheerful, sunny-hearted fellow of six months ago. Some influence or other has changed you to a pensive, low-spirited spooney. Excuse the word, Mark, but I assure you that it is eminently appropriate.

Thank you, doctor, said Clayton.

There, now, was that a genuine laugh? Not a bit of it—only a hysterical cachinnation
that an honest man ought to be ashamed of.

Let me feel your pulse, my boy. Ham-m—ah—all right there. Now then, if you don't speak out I'll—I'll—

What Dr. Colwell would have done in that case never was made known to the world,
for just as the words were trembling upon his lips the door opened, and a beautiful young lady swept into the room, bonneted and shawled, as if for a walk. The old gentleman started up with brisk gallantry.

Mrs. Clayton—and as rosy as a pink. I needn't ask after your health it seems.

I am very well, thank you, doctor. Dear me, Mark, how very warm the room is! Why haven't you lighted the gas?

Mr. Clayton obeyed by instantly illuminating the room. His wife threw herself carelessly into a chair.

What's this envelope on the table? Tickets for the opera.

Yes, I thought you would like to hear
the new prima donna.

Well, I shouldn't then. The opera always makes my head ache. I wish you ever remembered my likes and dislikes rightly.

Then, said Clayton, smiling, I am almost afraid to present this bracelet I bought this morning in remembrance of the day we were engaged to one another two years ago.

O, said Mrs. Clayton, ungraciously: Tur-quoises—the very stone of all others that is most unbecoming to me.

That's a pity, for I have had your initials marked on it, and consequently it cannot be exchanged.

I can't wear the thing, said the wife, pettishly, giving the velvet box a push along the table. I wish, Mark, you would take your feet off that fender; of all the disagreeable habits men pick up, that is the worst.

Mr. Clayton removed his feet from their obnoxious position without a word; the old doctor sat observing the couple in silence.

Your handkerchief, dear, said Mark, leaving forward to restore an embroidered cobweb of fine muslin that had slipped from his wife's lap. As Mrs. Clayton took it, she uttered a little impatient sound.

Mark! you have been smoking.

Only one cigar, Nina—and that was two hours ago. I didn't suppose your olfactory nerves were so delicately strung.

It is too bad, Mark, fretted Nina Clayton,
when you know how I hate a cigar.

It shall be the last time, puss, said the husband, carelessly. Come, sing us some of Dr. Colwell's favorite Scotch ballads before tea.

I don't feel like singing, said Nina, petulantly.

Play something then.

I suppose it never occurred to you that I might possibly be tired after my walk.

I beg your pardon, dear; I did not think of it.

Of course not; men are privileged to be selfish. By the way, did you get me that new piece of music?

Never once thought of it! But I'll be sure and bring it home to-morrow.

You needn't, said Nina, applying the cobweb handkerchief to her eyes. I don't care for it now!

Why, Nina, isn't it just as good to-morrow
as to-day?

Mrs. Clayton made no answer, but left the room, shutting the door behind her. Mark arose with a disturbed countenance, as if he intended to follow her.

Sit still, Mark, said the doctor, quietly pushing him back into the chair. I've discovered the secret of your changed aspect now!

I assure you, doctor, she does not mean—

Yes, yes—I understand! She's simply a spoiled, petulant child, who has unconsciously fallen into the habit of finding fault with everything that occurs. But, Mark—she makes your life miserable.

Clayton's head had fallen upon his hand.

I can't deny it, doctor—I am miserable;
and yet I know that Nina loves me dearly, in spite of all these little irritabilities. Oh, doctor, how happy I should be if she was only the Nina of a year ago.

The doctor had been adjusting and re-adjusting his spectacles, and polishing the glasses thereof with great energy, for a minute or so. Suddenly he stopped, and fixed his keen gray eyes on Mark Clayton's face.

Shall I tell you how to work the transformation?

Do, doctor.

Then you must promise to adhere to my commands strictly and literally—no half-way obedience.

It shall be implicit.

Very well, said the doctor.

What does make you so late this morning,
Mark?

Mrs. Clayton was sitting in front of the steaming coffee-urn, in that same little room,
which the fresh sunshine of the October morning, and the high heaped glow of the fire
both strove to enliven and not to warm—her husband lounged slowly into the room.

Late! It's a pretty state of things if a man can't be allowed the privilege of a morning nap!

Nina Clayton looked up with blank astonishment. Never before had her husband addressed her in that surly tone of voice. Mr.
Clayton then took his seat, giving his wife's basket an energetic push with his foot.

I wish you would keep your things in their proper places, Nina! Confound this coffee, it's hot enough to take the skin off a fellow's throat.

I thought you liked it warm, said the
abashed wife.

Thought I liked it warm. If you want me to be scalded to death, why don't you do it at once? There don't go to putting milk in and spoiling the whole. I thought so—a mess for the pigs.

Nina could not stand it a moment longer,
but she began to cry, softly, behind the coffee-
urn. Mr. Clayton banded out of the room—if he had remained in it another moment he would have broken his promise to Dr. Colwell in a most unpardonable manner.

However, Mrs. Nina had recovered her roses and bright eyes by the time her husband returned to the tea table. He was silent and morse, but the little wife was determined to be amiable, and went to the piano immediately after the meal was over, to give him
the music for which he usually petitioned in vain. But she had scarcely struck a few preliminary chords, ere he interrupted her.

I wish you would stop grumming on that piano, when my head aches!

I did not know that your head ached, Mark.

You might have known, if you had taken the trouble to notice.

Nina's lip quivered. Clayton rose and took his hat.

Where are you going, Mark?

Is it indispensible that I must repeat all my proceedings to you, Mrs. Clayton.

No—but—but—

I'm going to the theatre.

But, Mark, the Waltons are coming to spend the evening, they sent me a note this morning.

Very well, madam, what of it?

What will they think if you are not here?

They will probably think that it serves you quite right for making appointments without consulting your husband. In any event, it is nothing to me what they think.

And he had walked out of the house before Nina had recovered from the burst of sobs, which was her only reply to his unkind speech.

To-morrow came, and the next day, and still Mark's demeanor remained unaltered.
Poor Nina was thoroughly wretched. What could be the matter? Was Mark becoming deranged—or—and a shiver of horror ran through her frame at the very idea—was it possible that she was losing her place in his affections?

I would die by my own hand did I believe that! was her inward ejaculation, for, in her heart, Nina loved Mark Clayton with a love
almost amounting to idolatry.

The upshot of Nina's troubled self-commu-
nings was, however, that one fine morning
within a week of the above detailed events,
she was sitting in Dr. Colwell's study, closely veiled, and robed in a quiet pearl gray dress,
as if desirous of avoiding attention as much as possible. For to whom could Nina confide her grief more naturally than to the old man who had known her husband from the days of his infancy?

Mrs. Clayton! was the doctor's surprised exclamation, on entering the room in which he had been apprised that a lady desired to speak with him.

Nina threw aside her veil and burst out crying. The interview was not a long one;
and when at last the old gentleman dismissed
his patient, with a fatherly kiss, her face was radiant, even through its mists of tears.

When Mark Clayton came home to dinner
he found his wife singing at her work.

I suppose you have not put those buttons
on my collars, said he grimly.

No, I haven't Mr. Mark, said the little lady, archly defiant, and I don't intend to, either
until you have confessed yourself very sorry for the Bluebeard character you have been acting lately.

Nina! Mark spoke with some uncertainty.

And she buried her scarlet cheek on his shoulder.

Ah, sir, no use dissembling any longer.—
I've been to Dr. Colwell, and heard all about it; and indeed, Mark, she added, with a quivering lip, the lesson has not been thrown away, for, until my own conduct was mirrored before me in your actions, I never dreamed how very, very disagreeable I was making myself.

My dear little wife, said Clayton, tenderly,
smoothing back her dishevelled curls, if you did not know what it has cost me—

Not another word, said Nina, imperatively,
putting her hand on his mouth, it has been a bitter lesson, but it has not been lost on me.
Let me seal the compact of future happiness
with this kiss.

Very willingly, as far as I am concerned, Nina. But do you think you can ever forgive Dr. Colwell for presenting the bitter pill?

I'll send for him to tea this very evening,
said Nina, fluttering briskly, like an energetic canary bird, round the dinner dishes, and let him see that I can behave myself like a good little girl.

And from that moment Dr. Colwell never had a word of fault to find with Mark Clayton's looks. Nay, he was wont to assert that Clayton and his pretty wife were the happiest couple in his whole acquaintance.

Big Words.

Big words are great favorites with people of small ideas and weak conceptions. They are sometimes employed by men of mind, when they wish to use language that may best conceal their thoughts. With few exceptions, however, illiterate and half educated persons use more "big words" than people of thorough education. It is a very common but very egregious mistake to suppose the long words are more genteel than short ones—just as the same sort of people imagine high colors and flashy figures improve the style of dress. They are the kind of folks who don't begin, but always "commence." They don't live, but "reside." They don't go to bed, but mysteriously "retire." They don't eat and drink, but "partake of refreshments." They are never sick, but "extremely indisposed." And instead of dying, at last, they "decease." The strength of the English language is in the short words—chiefly monosyllables of Saxon derivation—and people who are in earnest seldom use any other. Love, hate, anger, grief, joy, express themselves in short words and direct sentences; while cunning, falsehood and affectation delight in what Horace calls verba sesquipedalia—
words "foot and a half" long.

Advantages of being a Woman.

A woman says what she chooses without being knocked down for it. She can take a snooze after dinner, while her husband goes to work. She can go into the street without being asked to "stand tight" at every saloon.

She can stay at home in time of war, and get married again if her husband gets killed.
She can wear corsets if too thick, and other things if too thin. She can get divorced from her husband whenever she sees another she likes better. She can get her husband in debt all over until he warns the public not to trust her on his account. But all these advantages are balanced by the great fact that she cannot sing bass, go sparring, or climb a tree with any degree of propriety.

A Great Man.

The author of the Nazarine thus speaks of President Jackson:

"He was a man! Well I remember the day I waited upon him! He sat there in his arm-chair—I can see him now. We told him of the public distress—the manufacturers ruined—the eagles shrouded in crape, which were carried at the head of twenty thousand men into Independence Square. He heard us all. We begged him to leave the deposits where they were, to uphold the great bank of Philadelphia. Still he did not say a word.

At last one of our members, more fiery than the rest, intimated that if the bank was crushed a rebellion might follow. Then the old man arose—I can see him yet.

Come! he shouted,

good for the cold, with such a start, will run its course of about a fortnight, in spite of all that can be done; and what is swallowed in the mean time in the way of physic, is a hindrance and not a good.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, June 13th, 1863.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

AN INHUMAN DEED. We were witness to a most shocking scene on Saturday evening last. A spectacle, at which humanity sickens, and which was revolting to all the better feelings of human nature. The lifeless body of a male infant, apparently but a few days old, was taken from Webb's brook, in rear of Mr. Francis Williams' tannery, on Hancock street. It was thought to have been in the water but a short time. When removed from its watery bed, it was as naked as it came into the world. No clue, as yet, has been discovered of the perpetrator of the wicked deed. Coroner Bass held an inquest, but nothing was elicited. The probability is, the unnatural mother, to cover her own shame and infamy, in this summary manner, cut the golden thread of life, which united it to the tenderest ties with her own.

In LOCK. Our worthy fellow-citizen, Daniel Baxter, Esq. on School street, was quite in luck on Tuesday evening last—a streak of good fortune which, probably, was not anticipated by him. On being summoned to the door, about nine o'clock, what should present itself but a well-filled basket, which on being opened, revealed the interesting features of a fine fat child—fresh and blooming. The presumption was, from all appearances, that it had not been an inhabitant of these parts but a few days. The lonely condition of the young outcast touched a tender chord; the good old man gave him a hearty welcome—took him in, and of course he will be well cared for. He is said to be a fine little fellow, already quite a favorite, and it is not improbable that he may have found a permanent home. This incident brings to mind a similar one, perpetrated upon Lewis Bass, Esq., a few years since. In this instance, Mr. Bass took upon himself the duties which had been cast off by its natural parents; he adopted the child, with the intention of bringing it up as his own—but it sickened, pined and wasted away—the death released him of his charge—and the little orphan found a resting place—not in the bosom of the family, but in the family vault.

SOMETHING OF A MUSS. A party of youngsters—now on a strike—got up quite an excitement in Liberty street, on Saturday last; they had been on a time; had whiskey had generated bad feelings—bad feelings, bad intentions, and an explosion seemed inevitable which threatened the majesty of the law and the peace of the community. Officer French was sent for—but when he arrived at the rendezvous the birds had flown. Thus justice was cheated out of her victims, and the officer out of his fees.

ROBBERY. The Billiard Saloon of Mr. George Follett, corner of Hancock and Granite streets was entered through a back window, on Sunday evening last, and a set of billiard balls, valued at thirty-five dollars, silver spoons, cigars, etc., stolen, amounting in all to about sixty dollars. The rogues effected their entrance by boring through the sash which enabled them to remove the fastening.

THE 44th Mass. Regiment. Colonel Francis Lee, reached home on Wednesday last, North Carolina has been their field of operations. A review of the Regiment by Governor Andrew, took place on the Common, the same day. The ladies were out to give them a welcome—a bounteous repast for their entertainment had been provided by their fair hands. The Regiment returned in tolerable health and condition; they have seen some hard duty, and been in a number of battles; they have lost one hundred men during their nine months' campaign, from death, sickness, wounds and other casualties. They will be mustered out of service at Readville, in the course of next week. Mr. Elisha Packard, a member of the corps, made us a friendly visit Thursday, from whom we learned many interesting particulars in relation to our army down South. He speaks in the highest terms of General Foster, as an officer. He likes the service, and holds himself ready when duty calls, but goes for the principle of rotation in such matters, as the best and most satisfactory.

The following list, we believe, comprise all the names of those connected with this Regiment which went from this town:

George Beal, H. White, C. B. Curtis, John Hersey, Elisha Packard, Warren Adams, Frank Newcomb, A. J. Hersey, Jacob Hersey.

IMPROVEMENTS ON SCHOOL STREET. The Athorp property has been purchased by Dr. Wm. S. Pattee, whom we understand is soon to build. This will furnish a range of splendid mansions, surpassed by none.

PROMOTION. Recent accounts from the Sixteenth Mass. Regiment, furnishes the pleasing intelligence of the promotion of Lieut. Lombard, of Company E, from second Lieutenant to first Lieutenant. He will soon have command of a company.

DEATH FROM A FLUID LAMP. On Tuesday evening last, Mrs. Margaret Simonds was found dead in her room in the West District, her dress having come in contact with a fluid lamp which was found broken near a table on the floor; her clothing was almost wholly consumed, and her body presented a horrid spectacle. Her two children were asleep at the time in another room, and her husband is absent in the army.

Mrs. White, who occupies a part of the house, heard her groan, and opened the door, but was unable to enter as the room was on fire and full of smoke; she alarmed the neighbors, who, when they went in extinguished the fire and found she was dead.

A Jury of Inquest returned a verdict of accidental death.

REV. DR. LUNT'S GRAVE. The following extract from a private letter lately received from the Rev. A. P. Putnam, of Roxbury, who is traveling in Syria, and the Holy Land, we copy from a contemporary print. The publisher in his introductory remarks, says:

"This touching and thoughtful mark of respect to the late Rev. Dr. Lunt, of Quincy, who died a few years ago, while on his way to the Holy Land, will be deeply felt and appreciated by his many relatives and friends. The letter is dated Jerusalem, April 16, 1863.

"I remember it was here at AKABA, that the Rev. Dr. Lunt, of Quincy, died several years ago. I accordingly sought out his grave, and found it on a mound, out on the great desert cemetery, the spot unmarked by a single object to tell where lay the eminent scholar, poet and divine. We procured the best stone we could find in the village, brought it down to our tent and carved it with suitable inscriptions, and the next morning had it borne to its resting place, and there set firmly in the ground, our good Presbyterian companion and brother clergyman repeating, as we closed our work and stood quietly circling about the spot, those heavenly words, 'Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord, yea, saith the spirit, for they rest from their labors and their works do follow them.' So we left the place, sad at the thought that a countryman of ours should alone have found his repose at last amid these distant desert wilds. The stone is necessarily a rude and humble one. But his friends will be but too glad to have even this erected to his memory. It was the best we could do."

FOURTH MASS. REGIMENT. We with pleasure make room for the following extract of a letter which has recently been received from this Regiment.

"We are now doing garrison duty at Reservoir City. This is a very important post. We have here, three regiments of infantry, one of heavy artillery, fifteen hundred convalescent troops, hospitals for a thousand, full—and last, but not least, two thousand contrabands of all sizes and color. Nothing can exceed the executive ability of our Colonel, Henry Walker, who is now commander of this post. He is the hardest working man here, is ubiquitous, and speculators and thieves who, through the duplicity of some government officials, have obtained passes into the interior, now find their game suddenly blocked, as our Colonel, will not connive with them, whether bearing a pass from a general or civilian. General Banks has sustained him in all his appeals to him, and this class of men now give the Brassard Department a wide berth.

Just before we expected to go to the fight at Port Hudson, we were agreeably surprised at the sudden appearance of our Colonel, who, hearing that we were about to be ordered to the front, had left his sick bed at New Orleans and hastened forward, partly by rail and partly in a springless cart, eager to join in our first fight. There is a great field here for recruiting negro regiments, and our experience has led us to believe that the negroes are capable of making good soldiers."

THE SPECULATION IN COAL. There is no reason whatever for the present exorbitant price of coal, save the grasping desire for gain which animated the speculators in this article. The coal crop has been unusually abundant this year. The N. Y. Herald says the total shipment of coal from Pennsylvania for this year, up to the present date, amount to two million two hundred thousand tons, which is over six hundred thousand tons in excess of the shipments up to a corresponding date in 1862. Before the season is over it is more than probable the price of coal will be greatly reduced to the serious detriment of the bulls in the coal market—a consummation devoutly to be wished for.—Boston Herald.

POSTAGE ON NEWSPAPERS. The law passed by the last Congress fixes the rate of postage on newspapers as follows:

Daily, per quarter,	35 cents.
Six times a week,	30 cents.
Tri-weekly,	15 cents.
Semi-weekly,	10 cents.
Weekly,	5 cents.

Weight not to exceed four ounces. The new rates take effect July 1, 1863.

STEAMERS ON THE NILE. The Pasha of Egypt is said to contemplate the establishment of a line of steamers suited for Nile navigation, and, in winter, fitted up with every convenience for European travellers to visit those dreary old ruins and cataraacts.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, JUNE 11, 1863.
THE SITUATION.

As concerns our military position, important and one likely to transpire before the month of June is complete, Lee's army in Virginia requires looking after; as a rebel invasion on Maryland and Virginia is apprehended, but with no definite basis of calculations.

At the last accounts the armies of Rosecrans and Bragg were facing each other in Tennessee with some doubts who should take the initiative for waging of battle.

To the present moment advices from Vicksburg are small in quantity, but most encouraging to the Union cause. The siege is progressing as rapidly as can be expected and the rebel garrison is likely to have a hard road to travel. At last General Grant is about to be reinforced by the government. Being the ninth army corps of some 15000 troops. Large additions to the Federal army, will likely to gobble up the rebel Johnson and consummate a triumph over our gallant army at Vicksburg.

For ten days past the public mind has been on the qui here as to the progress of matters at Port Hudson. Like Vicksburg it is a tough place to take, being of great strength in the rear—and it may be that General Banks will follow the course of General Grant at Vicksburg by besieging it. For the downfall of one will be followed by capture of both places. The latest news from the Lower Mississippi is to May 31. It was reported that the siege of Port Hudson was progressing so favorably that an offer of conditional surrender by the rebels has been refused by General Banks; that the black flag was raised by the rebels and that General Sherman was not expected to survive his wounds. So much for war intelligence.

LOCALS.

Aside from the anxiety arising from the progress of the rebellion, the week bids fair to close unexcitedly. Business as a whole is prosperous. The industrial classes have a plenty to do and at fair wages. Contrary to the general received opinion, the civil war with all its calamities is likely to increase the wealth in a wonderful manner of the loyal States. These facts develop themselves continually—a priori—as we look down the tide of time. Money is getting more in demand here, and in the New York market it has been tight for some days. Gold declines to about 142, affecting prices, particularly cotton goods. One firm in New York has lately lost two millions of dollars by the purchases of goods made last winter. Cotton shirtings and sheetings fell 40 cents per yard to 28 cents. Good calico prints sold in New York last Saturday for twelve and a half cents per yard.

FOREIGN NEWS.

To the 30th of May have been received, from certain indications it would appear that France will soon take the lead in the recognition of the Southern Confederacy and the rest of Europe will not be slow to follow.

PRESENTATION.

It is well known in the social circle in which Mr. J. A. Davis and his amiable lady have moved for some years past, that they are about leaving Quincy to seek a habitation in another suburban town.

For several years Mr. Davis has been the efficient Secretary of the Stone Temple Sunday School.

Last Sunday afternoon at their Sunday School Concert, the members of the School made Mr. Davis the recipient of a beautiful engraving of Raphael's Madonna in an elegant frame, as a parting testimonial of their gratitude and affection.

Their Pastor, the Rev. J. D. Wells in a few well chosen words explained the meaning and significance of the picture to the children—then turning to Mr. Davis with a well-deserved commendatory allusion to his past services, presented the gift in behalf of the School.

Mr. Davis made a very appropriate and happy response, upon his part, as he received the engraving, and the exercises were closed with a hymn sung with excellent spirit by the children.

MISSIONARY MEETING. Interesting exercises were held last Sabbath evening at the Hancock street Orthodox church, in connection with the monthly Missionary Meeting. After the Pastor had given the usual summary of religious intelligence on the domestic and foreign field, he introduced Rev. Professor C. A. S. Howard, of Grace College, San Francisco, California, who spoke with special reference to Episcopal Missions in that city.

He also gave a lively description of the natural attractions of the country. After years of travel in Europe, Asia and Africa, Professor Howard went to California, and with a party of fellow Englishmen visited places of interest in that State. His climate he regards the finest in the world. It is not easy to overestimate the prospective importance of California to the Union. We have not space to note other points in Professor Howard's address, but we hope during his brief stay here, he will afford our citizens the pleasure of listening to his narratives of travel in various portions of the globe.

GENERAL THEOLOGICAL LIBRARY. This Institution is coming generally into favor with professional men and scholars. A parish can give its pastor the benefit of the Library and Reading Room for fifteen years by the payment of twenty dollars. The Orthodox Church of this town has, we learn, generally made their Pastor a subscriber. Annual members are received at two dollars per annum. The rooms are at No. 5 Tremont street, Boston.

Summary of Intelligence.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

Our blockade fleet has been busy capturing prizes lately. The money of our British blockade running brothers is getting from their pockets into those of our gallant tars. We like the change.

The managers of the Old Colony and Fall River Railroad have attached a luxurious smoking car to the New York train.

Gen. Burnside is building a military railroad out toward Danville, (Ky.) This should have been done long ago, so that our base of operations could have been at Somerset instead of Louisville and Cincinnati. The work is being pressed forward with great activity.

The rebel General Ewell has taken command of Jackson's army corps, as he requested. He has but one leg, and is strapped on his horse while on the field.

One hundred and thirty-four of the dead of the wrecked steamer Anglo Saxon have been buried side by side near the scene of the disaster.

Army worms, the same species which troubled our farmers so much two years since, have made their appearance in New Bedford in full regiments.

The coal dealers of Boston, on Saturday last advanced the price of coal from $9 to $9 50 per ton. The advance is understood to be caused not by any increase in cost of coal, but in transporting it from Philadelphia and vicinity to Boston.

Accounts from Sydney, Australia, represent that a fearful drought has prevailed there. In some localities there had been no rain for fourteen months, and cattle had died by thousands.

The conscription is not to be enforced in Missouri, the people are only to be enrolled, to be left at home, to keep the peace there. The like will probably be the case in Kentucky.

Two goats on Boston common, draw a willow carriage and give babies a ride at five cents per head.

Jeff. Davis has revoked the Exequatur of the British Consul at Richmond, Mr. Geo. Moore, for exercising his official authority for a state other than Virginia, and a city beside Richmond. It took effect on the 5th inst.

Over 60,000 deserters have not heeded the President's proclamation to return to their duty. They will probably be caught by the Provost Marshals when the enrollment is completed.

TROOPS FURNISHED BY MASSACHUSETTS.

It has been stated that owing to some oversight, the War Department has neglected to credit Massachusetts with about twelve thousand three years' and nine months' men raised by the State. If this were so, the mistake has been corrected. As the matter now stands at headquarters in Washington, this Commonwealth is three thousand in advance of both quotas. The fifty-fifth Regiment, which will be full in less than a month—will increase this surplus to four thousand.

CONFIRMATION. Three candidates received the rite of confirmation at Christ Church on Thursday evening of last week. Right Rev. Bishop Eastburn preached on the Spirituality of Christ's kingdom. A discourse of a most excellent character, showing that true piety depended not on profession, forms or external observances, but on a vital union to Christ, the result of a Divine renewal of the heart by regeneration of the Holy Ghost. The audience was not large but a deeply interested one.

CROPS IN THE SOUTH. Good harvests are expected in the South, and in some localities harvesting is about to commence. An Alabama paper says its product will be great. Flour is coming down; it is now ten dollars a sack. Thirty or forty dollars a barrel was mentioned as a price.

ARRIVAL. Schooner D. H. Bills of Quincy Point arrived in Boston, June 10, 1863. Voyage from Quincy Point to Philadelphia and back fifteen days. Captain Edwin Rich, Master.

Deaths.

In this town, on the 1st inst., Edna Louise, infant daughter of G. H. and H. A. Arnold.

The Sunny Side.

When darkest hours of sadness
Come stealing o'er the heart;
When false ones dare deceive thee,
And from thy side depart;
Beat up beneath the anguish,
And breast the sinking tide,
For o'er the vale of shadows
Oh, there's a sunny side.

Let early ties be broken
Whichever thou held'st dear;
It matters but a little,
The trial how severe;
For there are many others
In whom thou canst confide,
Where'er thy sad heart paneth—
Yes, there's a sunny side.

Our lifetime here is fleeting,
It passeth soon away,
Like fancy's dreamy visions,
And autumn's wan decay;
Then take thou hold in earnest
Before thou hast tried;
Life is made up of struggles,
There's yet a sunny side.

This wide world may look dreary,
The tempest louder roar;
While every golden moment
The life-boat wafes to shore;
Delay not in thy efforts
Against the wind and tide,
To do what thou would'st have to do
Upon the sunny side.

Scraps.

HARRISON CAKE. Five cups flour, two cups and a half molasses, two cups butter, one cup sweet milk, two cups chopped raisins, four eggs, two teaspoons cream-tartar and one of soda. Spice to suit the taste.

JACKSON JUMBLES. Take five cups flour, three sugar, one butter, two eggs, and a teaspoonful saleratus, dissolved in a cup of sour cream. Bake in a quick oven.

Two words are almost universally misspelled in newspapers of the day, and even in many books. These are inbreachment and innuendo; they are commonly spelled entrenchment and innuendo. They are not to be found in the dictionaries in the latter form.

Miscellaneous.

Fannie and I.

No, John Blaikie, I shall never marry you, I said in a tone which I meant should be particularly severe. Let the conversation end here.

Mr. John Blaikie laughed in my face, which by the way, was just what he ought to have done. The consequence was that I grew angry in a moment.

You can laugh as much as you please, I continued. There is a certain class of people in the world that characterize themselves by laughing at their own folly. You have heard of them haven't you?

O, yes!

Again John Blaikie laughed a good natured, happy laugh, which did not testify very strongly for the depth of his anguish at my decision.

Of course I grew more and more piqued; nothing more could have been expected of me. You are very gentlemanly, Mr. Blaikie, I said in a tone which I meant should be very sarcastic.

And I am aware of that, too, my little Bessie, he answered good naturedly.

Cousin Fannie admires you very much, I said, significantly, for a moment forgetting my anger.

She does?

He grew suddenly thoughtful; and bent his large, honest blue eyes to the floor. Then as if a new resolution had suddenly become fixed in his mind, he arose, saying:

You are quite sure of this, Bessie, quite sure?

Yes, quite sure. If you wish to try your luck in that direction, you may be certain of success.

Thank you, Miss Bessie! I will try.

Miss Bessie! In all his life John Blaikie had never addressed me in that way before. I stared at him in very surprise.—He did not appear to notice it, but went towards the door, saying, a little sadly, I thought, as he paused at the threshold:

I have troubled you, not importunately, Bessie, but because, until now, I have been ignorant of your true feelings. The future shall speak for itself. Good morning!

Good morning! I faltered forth, still staring at him in blank amazement. For a moment I could not really believe that he had gone—not until his footsteps grew faint in the distance, and looking out of the window I could but dimly see his tall figure through the thick mass of shrubbery that lay between the house and the road; then I drew a long sigh, not of relief, I am sure, as might have been expected from a young lady who had suddenly found herself rid of an annoying lover; but a sigh which puzzled my own heart to define. I do not know what first put the thought into my head, that I should not marry John Blaikie. From my childhood, even, I had been taught to look upon him as my future husband. Through the whole neighborhood our engagement had grown to be such a settled affair, and of such long standing, that the people forgot to tease us about it, and passed by us as indifferently as though we had been a married couple for years, instead of interesting, engaged young persons.

But somehow, as I said before, I cannot tell why it came to me, the idea that marrying John Blaikie was not the best way of settling myself for life, after all; and so, working upon this, I grew to believe that I did not love him—and not loving him, what could I do but assure him that I never should be his wife? And that assurance I gave him as I have already shown.

But after he left me that morning, I felt any thing but comfortable; indeed, the tears came constantly to my eyes, and though I tried as well as I could to keep them down, they conquered me at last, and sinking down in my chair, I gave up and had a good hearty cry. I felt a little better after that, and tried to persuade myself, in my own mind, that I had done just the best thing I could do for the insurance of John's and my own happiness. But the worst is yet to come.

The next Sabbath John attended cousin Fannie to church. This was such a new and strange order of things, that it set the whole congregation to staring. Cranston could not sleep under any thing so incomprehensible, and for that Sabbath, at least, good parson Green preached to a wakeful set of hearers. But they could only conjecture, without leaving but little time for any other mental speculation. Some were ready to declare that cousin Fannie had supplanted me in John's affection and that I was a breaking my heart in a secret kind of way about it; others said that the fault rested with me, and that I was looking in another and higher direction for a lover. But I had the truth and most secretly did I guard it. It grew to be very plain to me before the summer was gone. As time wore away, and I saw plainly into the depths of my heart, I knew that for a childish, girlish whim, I had put the happiness of a life time away from me. But I could only wear a brave face, and keep my secret away from the prying, curious gaze of those who were searching for it.

I did not often meet John, and but twice during that summer were we thrown into each other's company for a sufficient length of time to exchange a dozen words. Once we met at a picnic. From the moment that I stepped upon the grounds I knew that he was intending to speak to me. Perhaps I felt it by the way he watched me as I went from place to place. When he came to my side, it seemed that the whole party hushed voice, heart and soul to listen to us. He smiled at this and commenced talking in a pleasant, gossiping way about the weather, appearing not to notice my flushed face and slightly disturbed manner.

Are you enjoying the best of health, this summer? he asked, at length, with I thought, a faint touch of mischief in his face.

The very best of health, Mr. Blaikie, I answered, curling my lip. Perhaps you have been informed to the contrary, however, I continued, more in answer to his smile than ought else. Cranston gossips, have I, believe given me the credit of bearing up under a settled heart disease.

They are inferior judges, Bessie. Do not class me among them.

I never have, I answered dryly.

No, I suppose not, he said, smiling again. This is a beautiful grove!

Have you noticed the arrangements made for dancers?

I shook my head.

Come this way, then, if you please.

He offered me his arm, which I took without thinking to thank him. For a little moment I forgot that the right of claiming his attention was not mine. It seemed so like old times to be walking by his side, watching his face and listening to the tones of his voice. Before I could help it, I found myself sighing loud and deeply. If John noticed it he was very forbearing, for by look or word he did not reply to it; but I thought the silence was a little too long for an ordinary one, and so I made a bold push to break it. Again I forgot myself.

What a nice place this is! I said. Do you remember, John, how crazy I used to be about dancing? My father used to say if my heart would always keep as tight as my feet, they would go easily with me.

Yes, yes, I remember, he replied, I thought a little sadly. Will you dance with me to-day?

O yes, certainly.

I was glad to have him ask me that. Of all persons in the world, I best loved to dance with him. I had told him so hundreds of times, too, so that he knew well enough what my smile meant. We danced together so many times that day, that the Cranston people—or at least all of them that attended the picnic—grew big-eyed with wonder. Noticing how close they watched us, John said, as he led me to my seat for the last time:

We are saving our good townsfolk from a great deal of sin, Bessie; because while they are speculating about such innocent sort of people as you and I, they cannot be talking about worse ones. We are getting famous!

I was happier then, and after I returned home, than I had been for weeks before. But my happiness was of short duration, for after the supper was cleared away, and while I sat by an open window, recalling the events of the day, my mother said to me:

Your aunt Hastings was here to-day, and she said John Blaikie was finishing his house on the hill. Did you hear any thing about it after the picnic?

No, I said scarcely above a whisper.

And she said if Fannie was going to marry John she kept it dreadfully sly; for besides piecing up a few squares of patchwork, she had not made the first step toward getting ready. What do you think about it?

I think she will be ready as soon as the house is, I answered, turning my face towards the window, that she might not notice the expression of my features.

Well, take it altogether, Bessie, it's a queer piece of business.

I did not answer, only let my forehead drop low upon the window-seat. Seeing this, mother came up to me, and rested her hand upon my head and said:

Poor child!

How from my heart I blessed her for her quiet sympathy. The next two weeks that followed were sad and tedious ones to me.

Every way that I turned, news of John Blaikie's approaching marriage with cousin Fannie was poured into my ears; and even Fannie herself, who had always been very prudent about it, seemed pleased in telling me of the arrangements that were going up at John's new house—of this piece of furniture he had selected, of the carpets which had been left to her judgment exclusively, and of the beautiful toned serephine that John's uncle had presented him for the little parlor.

You will be very happy, I said one day, in answer to all this.

Fannie looked up suddenly into my face. I thought a quizzical expression drifted across her.

How pale you look, Bessie, she said.—

What is the matter with you?

Nothing, I am sure, I answered, with some little show of spirit.

I am glad of it; but, indeed, you do look downright ill. Won't you go up to the new house with me to-night; perhaps that will make you feel better. I believe you keep too closely in the house. But you need not sigh; your head; you will go. John will be there and we will have a pleasant time of it.

And I went in spite of myself, although every step towards the house that was once to have been mine, was like very torture to me. O, what a pleasant house it was! and how simply and tastefully furnished, from the cunning, neatly grained kitchen, to the well carpeted parlors! Everything was just as I had planned it, a hundred times, in a laughing, jocular way to John. Had he indeed remembered it all on purpose to torture me with it now? It seemed so.

Do you like the house, Bessie? he asked, as if divining my very thoughts.

Very much indeed, I answered. Everything is neat and tasteful. Is it too early to wish you joy? I asked, feeling that he was expecting me to say something.

No, not too early, but it may be too late.

I looked up into his face. Its expression puzzled me.

I do not understand you very clearly, I said. But never mind, I added, noticing that Fannie had gone from the room. I have a wretched headache to-night, and hardly know what I am saying.

Headache! When all the time it seemed as if my heart was breaking!

Where is Fannie? I asked a moment after, seeing that she did not return.

Gone home! he answered, in the coolest tone imaginable.

What, and left me here?

Yes, and left you here! Are you frightened? Not much—my poor head—I will go.

Wait a moment, if you please, he said detaining me. I have something to say to you.

Something to say to me! Did he know that every kind word that he spoke to me pierced my heart like a barbed arrow.

This house is yours, if you wish it, Bessie, he began, in a slightly embarrassed way. I am afraid you made a hasty decision in casting me off forever. It seems to me that I know your heart better than you know it yourself.

I looked up into his face. It seemed to me that I was dreaming. I told him so, between my sobs and tears.

God forbid! he said, taking both my hands in his. But the past summer has been a wretched reality of doubt and despair to me. Tell me, Bessie, is it ended here?

I could not answer him in words, only go closer to his side, and nestle my hands fondly in his.

This shall be your home then, Bessie, he said, kissing me. But, remember, my dear, that I cannot allow my house to go without an incumbent, as the newspapers say. Does that idea please you?

O, yes! I answered. And John believed me. Why shouldn't he?

Settling a Minister.

We find the following anecdote going the rounds of the papers, and give it the benefit of our circulation. We leave inferences for the general reader:

"Squire Skinner," said Deacon Jones, "you must be aware that a meeting has been warned to decide on settling our candidate for the ministry, and I called to inquire if he receives your approbation."

"I shall not vote for him," said "Squire Skinner."

"Do you not think him sound in doctrine?" asked the Deacon.

"Entirely Orthodox," said the "Squire."

"Sound to the core."

"Is he not a good speaker?" asked the Deacon.

"Never heard better," said the "Squire."

"Is he not an agreeable man?" inquired Deacon Jones.

Perfectly so in most respects," replied the "Squire."

"Surely, you have heard nothing against his moral character," said the Deacon.

"Not a hint," replied the "Squire."

"Squire Skinner," said Deacon Jones, "we ought to be frank in a matter of so much importance; if you have any real objections to the settlement of Mr. Stebbins, I hope you will tell me what they are."

"Squire Skinner took his short six out of his mouth, held it some distance from him in his left hand, looked straight down the garden walk with a great deal of earnestness, and replied:

"Deacon Jones, I will say to you, once for all, that I will never vote for a man to be settled over this ancient parish, who toes in when he walks!"

Deacon Jones rose to go. He saw that the "Squire's" back was up, and it was folly to argue with him. But the Deacon was a true Christian, and did not wish to go without leaving a more favorable impression on the "Squire's" mind, so he said, in the mildest manner possible:

"Squire Skinner, I hope you will attend the meeting to-morrow night, and hear what our people have to say on the subject. Possibly you may change your views. Your opinions are entitled to much consideration. But I am bound in all fairness to say Mr. Stebbins is

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, June 20th, 1863.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

THE 17th passed off in a very quiet and common-place manner with us. There was no public demonstration to mark the return of a day memorable in the annals of our Revolutionary struggle. No roar of cannon to usher it in; no flags floating to greet the eye, or the merry peal of bells to cheer the heart; naught, but the assembling of a few private parties, who, prompted by their own feelings, broke through the silence and quiet, to celebrate it in their own way.

OUR HORSE RAILROAD is now being used in addition to its other business, for the transportation of freight. A car heavily laden with stone passed over the track, one day during last week, which has been followed by others, destined for the Horse Railroad, building at West Cambridge.

DISTINGUISHED POSITION. We are pleased to learn that one of the soldiers from this place, Lieut. William G. Sheen, of the 39th Regiment, has been appointed Assistant Provost Marshal of Washington, D. C.

EVENING SPORT OF THE 17TH. Messrs. W. E. Rudderman, Benjamin Bass, and E. S. Marsh, took from Black's Creek, by scum, at a single haul, on the evening of the 17th, fifty-nine bass and a fine fat shad; averaging five pounds each, or about three hundred weight, all told.

State Tax,	$10,752.00
County Tax,	$3,323.03
Town Tax,	$24,000.00
Overlying on Taxes,	$1,187.52
Total Amount to be raised,	$39,262.55
Rate of Taxation of $1000,	$9.40
Rate of Taxation last year,	$8.20
Number of Houses,	1,110 1-2
Number of Horses,	550
Number of Cows,	713

It will be noticed that the rate of Taxation is but $1.20 higher on a thousand than it was last year, which is very small considering the amount expended for war purposes. Also, that somebody has not a house! or that there are 1,110 1-2 houses in Quincy. It is explained thus: the house stands on the line between Quincy and Milton—one half in each town.

FOUNDINGS. We mentioned last week the case of an infant deserted by its parents, and left at the door of one of our citizens on School street. From the vein of pleasantry in which we alluded to the circumstance, it may have been inferred that we regarded such an act of desertion with complacency, or, at least, with no disfavor. But we desire to correct any such misapprehension. However much "in luck" we may deem those of our neighbors to be who are made recipients of gifts of this kind, or however comfortable their charity may make the situation of these little outcasts, the criminality of the parents cannot be overlooked. We have no words too strong to express our reprobation of a course, not only repugnant to the dictates of religion, but which is rebuked by the instincts of humanity itself. The tenderness even of the brute creation towards their helpless young ought to shame one who perpetrates such a deed. Poverty cannot be pleaded, for provision is made for its appropriate relief. Other reasons usually exists which lead to this cruel abandonment. We would not, therefore in any wise, countenance anything which tends to the demoralization of public virtue, but rather use all our influences to encourage "whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report," assured that in them alone we are to find the elements of true social prosperity.

QUINCY MORALS. Some of our readers think that our record last week was rather a dark one, and indicated no very flattering state of morals in Quincy. We cannot help thinking so, too. What can be done? One thing is certain, we can hope for no permanent improvement, as long as intoxicating liquor is so freely sold and drunk in our midst—as this is acknowledged to be the stepping-stone to all kinds of vice.

OUR GARDENS. These receptacles from which our table is furnished with the luxuries of the vegetable kingdom at this season of the year, are already yielding their supplies. Green peas are now being gathered from them, which will soon be followed by other dainties. Mr. Gay, at the South Depot, takes pride in such matters, and there are but few who understand the subject better.

LUNCH. There will be a free lunch at the Marquis Saloon this evening.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, JUNE 18, 1863.

Sabbath, June 14. A pleasant day. Many persons went to meeting, but the majority was elsewhere. News not exciting. The Sunday papers, however, went off as well as usual.

Monday. The telegraph whippers that Lee's whole army is north of the Rappahannock. Hooper moving as he should do to intercept him. An early battle probable. Again, that Pennsylvania is threatened with invasion. Out comes Governor Curtin's Proclamation, backing up that of President Lincoln, calling for fifty thousand men in the Keystone State. Matters begin to look serious, as the Governor says the issue is one of preservation or destruction. The people of Pennsylvania are rushing to arms. Again, the telegraph speaks—the rebel pirates are capturing our vessels within a few miles of the Cape of Virginia. The mercantile community are astounded. It is not now safe to go to Philadelphia for a load of coal by navigation.

Tuesday 16. Excitement on the increase. Speculators flaring hard; the dear souls think that prices must go up as gold ascends five cents on the dollar since Saturday. General Lee, the rebel, is marching six heavy columns in Pennsylvania, destroying everything in his way—several towns have been sacked and burned. Governor Curtin telegraphs that the rebels are approaching Carlisle. All the Militia Regiments in New York city are mustering at their armories, and many of them on their way to Philadelphia. Bayonets begin to speak. Evening. We have had news of the enemy's movements in the valley of the Shenandoah, near Harper's Ferry. Lee's whole army is in the valley, stretching the whole length, and strongly reinforced. Hooker's head quarters not certainly known, but supposed to be at Fairfax Station. The meeting of the two armies seem probable on the old Bull Run fields. The rebels appear to have the inside track. The day has been one of anxiety. But we have a bit of comfort in the latest European news to the 6th instant—that the foreign journals are very quiet on American affairs.

Wednesday. The morning papers open with startling and disagreeable news, and the excitement seems to have reached its climax. General Hooker is said to have been unfortunate in battle and retreating to Alexandria. Western Pennsylvania in great danger from the rebel raid. This ends the day.

Thursday. More calm—rumors of yesterday much exaggerated. Great cry and little war.

Thursday Evening. Invasion excitement all over. Pennsylvania is safe. The rebels having evacuated Chambersburg, and will soon make themselves scarce on free territory. To the moment of my writing the position of Lee or Hooker is not known with any degree of certainty.

SALE OF THE HANCOCK MANSION. A very large gathering of ladies and gentlemen assembled in the "John Hancock Mansion House," 30 Beacon street, Boston, at noon Tuesday, for the purpose of attending the sale of all the stone, brick and other materials composing the long venerated mansion. Many persons present availed themselves of the opportunity of securing banisters and other small portions of wood-work as relics of the old mansion.

PLEASANT PLACE TO LIVE IN. Down on the Amazon are spiders with bodies two inches and legs seven inches long, that catch and suck birds; butterflies that are mistaken for humming birds; green snakes just like a creeping plant, and a beautiful coral snake with bands of black and vermilion separated by clear white rings; monkeys with white hair all over them; monkeys only seven inches long, and owl faced apes, sleeping all day and lively at night.

INCOME OF PHYSICIANS. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has decided that no deductions from income can be allowed a physician on account of the expenses of keeping a horse and carriage, even if used exclusively for his professional practice.

INSANITY CHECKED BY THE WAR. Dr. Bellows stated in his speech before the American Unitarian Association, that in the midst of the unprecedented excitement of the last two years, the amount of insanity in the country has materially decreased from what it was in time of peace. The substitution of a noble and healthy excitement for ignoble and degrading agitations of mind thus shows itself by the most delicate of tests.

THE CONSCRIPTION LAW is receiving a clearer interpretation than at first. The $300 can be paid or a substitute procured, and if accepted, (the acceptance depending altogether upon physical ability,) it exempts the person drafted from again being called upon during the period for which he is drafted; but if the $300 is paid instead, then the person is liable to be again taken upon any subsequent draft, and the President can order a draft as frequently as he may deem necessary.

The rebel debt amounts to $163 for each man, woman, and child in the confederacy.

Norfolk County Teachers' Association.

This Association met in Convention at Meeting House Hill, in Dorchester, on the morning of June 12th, and was called to order by the President, E. F. Wood, of Dorchester. Prayer was offered by Rev. N. Hall, of Dorchester. Hon. William D. Swan, in behalf of the citizens extended a cordial and warm welcome to the Convention, and took occasion to say that they were assembled near the spot where the first Free School in America was organized, and gave some interesting statistics concerning it, and some of the results of his experience in attending meetings of teachers.

The Convention then proceeded to discuss the subject—"The best means of inducing pupils to work in earnest." This subject was quite ably discussed by Messrs. Jones of Roxbury, Patten of Dedham, Putnam of Quincy, and Smith of Dorchester; and the conclusion generally deduced was, that the "Marking System" now so generally prevalent is not the best means of inducing pupils to work, but that it is a convenient, (inconvenient we say) side to that object—and that some higher and nobler motive should be set before the scholar than to be even the first in his class.

In the afternoon the Convention listened to an instructive and eloquent address by John Kneeland Esq., of Roxbury. He pointed out how the youngest children might be interested in school duties, and addressed himself more particularly to those having them in charge.

After this lecture, the question "To what extent should parents be consulted in regard to the discipline of their children in school," was discussed by Messrs. Nutter of West Roxbury, and Slafter of Dedham and others; and it was advocated that while teachers should be ever ready to courteously receive suggestions from parents, that they must be very cautious how they apply for advice; while others seemed to think that the matter of discipline should be left entirely in the hands of the teacher.

On Friday evening the Rev. John H. Morrison of Milton gave an interesting lecture. On Saturday morning the question "Ought pupils to be required to study out of school hours?" came up for discussion. We noticed that most of those who favored a good deal of study out of school, were teachers of High Schools—and one of them stated that he had had pupils that would study seven hours a day besides the regular school hours. We submit that twelve hours a day spent in close application to books is certainly too many for the physical or mental welfare of any ordinary youth.

At eleven o'clock there was a lecture by George B. Hyde Esq.—Master of the Everett School, Boston. He gave a solid address drawn from the rich storehouse of his experience. Soon after the close of this address the Association adjourned—fully satisfied that they had had a pleasant and profitable session.

SOLDIER EXECUTED AT FORT INDEPENDENCE. William Lynch, the recruit in the Second Massachusetts Cavalry, who was the ringleader in the mutiny which occurred several weeks since in Camp Quincy, Niles' Block, Boston, and who was tried, convicted and sentenced to be shot by the Court Martial lately in session at Fort Independence, suffered the extreme penalty of military law Tuesday afternoon, within the fort. The condemned man conducted himself with remarkable firmness, and as he was conducted to the fatal spot he smiled upon his comrades and paid the customary salute to Captain Quincy, the recruiting agent under whom he enlisted. Seven balls entered the body of the unfortunate young man, two of which passed through his heart, causing his death almost instantaneously. The last words he uttered were: "Shoot me in the breast; don't mark my face."

THE LADIES' BOOK for July has already been published. The publisher's field, although extensive, has been admirably improved—There is no department in a ladies' vocabulary but what has received due attention. The "Fashion Plate" for this month is a rich affair. "Grandfather's Portrait," a fine steel engraving, is a portrait of the affections, which should be hung up and cherished in every family. The other embellishments are excellent, and the reading matter unexceptionable. To be had at Mr. Gill's.

IMMENSE BUSINESS OF THE ERIE CANAL. During the first sixteen days of May nine hundred and eighty-two canal boats were cleared at the Buffalo Collector's office, making a daily average of upwards of sixty boats. If it had been necessary to move the aggregate of property taken by this fleet of boats by rail, it would have taken sixty trains of twenty-two cars each daily, or an aggregate of twenty-one thousand six hundred and four cars. This alone shows the importance of the Erie Canal as a great highway for commerce.

A VOLUNTEER'S WIFE. A young woman residing in Tuftonborough, N. H., whose husband is in the army, being informed by the surveyor that her husband's tax on the highway must be worked out, shouldered the hoe, and marched to the scene of labor.

Nothing Lost.

Where is the snow?
'Tis not long ago
It covered the earth with a veil of white,
We heard not its footsteps soft and light,
Yet there it was in the morning bright,
Now it hath vanished away from sight.
Not a trace remains,
In fields or lanes.
Where is the frost?
It is gone and lost—
The forms of beauty last night it made,
With pictures rare were windows arrayed;
"Be silent, said; the brook obeyed;
Yet silence and pictures all did fade.
At the smile of the sun
All was undone.
Where is the rain?
Pattering it came,
Dancing along with a merry sound,
A grassy bed in the fields it found;
Each drop came on the roof with a bound.
Where is the rain? It hath left the ground.
What good hath it done,
Gone away so soon?

Ever, ever,
Our best endeavor
Seemeth to fall like the melted snow.
We work out our thoughts wisely and slow;
The seed we sow, but it will not grow.
Our hopes, our resolves—where do they go?
What doth remain?
Memory and pain.
Nothing is lost—
No snow nor frost
That come to enrich the earth again.
We thank them when the ripening grain
Is waving over the hill and plain,
And the pleasant rain springs from earth again.
All endeth in good—
Water and food.
Never despair;
Disappointment bear,
Though hope seemeth vain, be patient still;
Thy good intent God doth fulfill.
Thy hand is weak; His powerful will
Is finishing thy life-work still.
The good endeavor
Is lost—ah! never.

Literary Curiosity with but One Vowel.

No monk too good to rob, or cog, or plot.
No fool so gross to bolt Scotch hollips hot.
From Dorjan tops no Oronoko rolls.
Legwood, not lotos, floods Oporto's bowls.
Troops of old tussups oft to sport consort.
Box tops not ones school boys flag for sport.
No pond swimmers know soft—Orestes'—
Orichalc, jag-trot, look-worn Solomons?
Bold Orestes of ghosts no horror show.
On London shop-fronts no hop-blossoms grow.
To creaks of gold no dodo looks for food.
On soft cloth-foot stools no old fox doth brood.
Long slamm-test stools foreman work on port.
Rooks do not roost on spoons, nor woodcocks snort.
No dog on snowdrop or on coltsfoot rolls.
No common frog conceals long protocols.

Politeness.

Said Mrs. Smith, "My dearest Sydney, Let me help you to this kidney."
Then answered Smith—"You're so polite,
I think, my dear, I'll take a bite
If you will eat the other part;
I wish you would with all my heart."
"No, no; arrange it on my plan,
And take the whole, my dearest man.
You like kidney—I like fat;
And so, my dear, we've settled that."

Anecdotes.

A Irishman who had joined the British army, and was on his way to India, heard a good deal about the huge mosquitoes of that region. He was told that they had long suckers hanging from their heads with which they would suck out a man's life-blood. On reaching Madras roads, he looked on shore, and saw an elephant for the first time in his life.
How! Mother! exclaimed he, do the mosquitoes of this county grow to that immense size.
Mr. Snooks was asked the other day how he could account for Nature's forming him so ugly.
Nature was not to blame, said he, for when I was two months old I was considered the handsomest child in the neighborhood, but my nurse, the slot, one day swapped me away for another boy, just to please a friend of her's whose child was rather plain looking.
A little girl went to camp-meeting, and when she got home she said the sisters in the various tents told her a good many things, and asked her questions about the Bible. On being pressed to state what they told her, she said one thing they told her was about Peter, who swore three times before he crowed.

A young clergyman having buried three wives, a lady asked him how he happened to be so lucky. Madam, replied he, I knew they could not live without contradiction, so I let all of them have their own way.

Lucretia Mott says that a young man who cannot persuade a lot of foolish women to buy what they never want, or their husbands be able to pay for, should never expect to become at all celebrated as a dry goods clerk. Lucretia is an observing young woman.

PRIVATE MEDICAL TREATIES

ON THE

Physiological View of Marriage.

250 PAGES AND 130 ENGRAVINGS. Price only TWENTY-FIVE CENTS. Sent free of postage to all parts of the Union.

On the infirmities of youth and maturity, disclosing the secret follies of both sexes of all ages, causing debility, nervousness, depression of spirits, palpitation of the heart, suicidal imaginings, involuntary emissions, bluishness, defective memory, indigestion and lassitude, with confessions of thrilling interest of a Boarding School Miss, a College Student, and a Young Married Lady, &c., &c.

It is a truthful adviser to the married and those contemplating marriage, who entertain secret doubts of their physical condition, and who are conscious of having hazarded the health, happiness and privileges to which every human being is entitled.

YOUNG MEN who are troubled with weakness, generally caused by a bad habit in youth, the effects of which are dizziness, pains, forgetfulness, sometimes a ringing in the ears, weak eyes, weakness of the back and lower extremities, confusion of ideas, loss of memory, with melancholy, may be cured by the author's NEW PARIS AND LONDON TREATMENT.

We have recently devoted much of our time in VISITING THE EUROPEAN HOSPITALS, availing ourselves of the knowledge and researches of the most skilled physicians and Surgeons in Europe and the Continent. Those who place themselves under our care will now have the full benefit of the many NEW AND EFFICACIOUS REMEDIES which we are enabled to introduce into our practice, and the public may rest assured of the same zeal, assiduity, SECRECY and attention being paid to their cases, which has so successfully distinguished us heretofore as a Physician in our PECULIAR department of professional Practice, for the past twenty-five years.

FRENCH FEMALE PILLS. Ladies who wish for medicines, the efficacy of which has been tested in thousands of cases, and never failed to effect speedy cures without any bad results will use none but Dr. De Laney's Female Periodical Pills. The only precaution necessary to be observed is, ladies should not take them if they have reason to believe they are in certain situations (the particulars of which will be found on the wrapper accompanying each box,) though always safe and healthy, so gentle, yet so active are they.

Price $1 per box. They can be mailed to any part of the United States or Canada.

TO THE LADIES—Who need a confidential medical adviser with regard to any of those interesting complaints to which their delicate organization renders them liable, are particularly invited to consult us.

THE "ELECTRO-GALVANIC PROTECTIVE." For married ladies whose health will not admit, or who have no desire to increase their families, may be obtained as above. It is a perfectly safe, pleasant, and reliable method, and has been extensively used during the last 20 years. Price reduced to $10.

WM. GRAY, Esq.: DEAR SIR—Two months ago, my head was almost bald, and the little hair I had was all grey, and falling out very fast, until I feel I should lose all. I commenced using your Hair Restorative, and it immediately stopped the hair falling off, and soon restored the color, and after using two bottles my hair is completely covered with a healthy growth of hair, and of the same color it was in early manhood. HELMHOLD'S

GENUINE PREPARATION,

COMPOUND

Fluid Extract Buchu,

A Positive and Specific Remedy

For Diseases of the

Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel and

Dropsical Swellings.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excites the ABSORBENTS into healthy action, by which the WATERY OR CALCULOUS deposits, and all UNNATURAL ENLARGEMENTS are reduced, as well as pain and inflammation, and is good for MEN, WOMEN, OR CHILDREN.

HELMHOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU

FOR WEAKNESSES

Arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, or Excess.

ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS: Indisposition to Exercise, Loss of Power, Difficulty of Breathing, Dryness of the Skin, Trembling, Horrors of Dreams, Dimness of Vision, Pain in the Back, Universal Lassitude of the Muscles of the Body, Hot Hands, Frequent Eruption of the Face, Faded Countenance.

These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes soon follow: IMPOTENCY, FATUITY, EPILEPTIC FITS,

In one of which the patient may expire. Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "direful diseases."

Insanity and Consumption. Many are aware of the cause of their suffering, but none will confess. The records of the insane Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion. The constitution, once affected with Organic Weakness, requires the aid of medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system, which HELMHOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females, Females, Females.

Old or young, single, married, or contemplating Marriage—in many affections peculiar to Females the Extract Buchu is unequalled by any remedy. It cures frequent desire, and gives regularity, Pains, or Suppression of the customary Evacuations, Ulcerated or Scirrhous state of the Uterus, Leucorrhoea, or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the female arising from Indiscretion, Habits of Dissipation, or in the Decline or Change of Life.

No family should be without it.

Take no Balsam, Mercury, or Unpleasant Medicine for Unpleasant and Dangerous Diseases.

CURES SECRET DISEASES

In all their stages; at little expense; little or no change of diet; no inconvenience; and no Exposure. It causes frequent desire, and gives strength to Urinate, thereby removing obstructions, preventing and curing Strictures of the Urethra, playing pain and inflammation, so frequent in this class of diseases, and expelling POISONOUS, DISEASED, AND WORN-OUT MATTER.

Thousands upon thousands who have been the victims of Quacks, and who have paid Heavy Fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the Poison was, by the use of Powerful Astringents, been dried up in the system, to break out in aggravated form, and perhaps after marriage.

Use Helmhold's Extract Buchu

For all Affections and Diseases of

THE URINARY ORGANS,

Whether existing in Male or Female, from whatever cause originating, and no matter of how long standing.

This peculiar taint or infection which we call SCROFULA lurks in
the constitutions of
multitudes of men. It
either produces or is produced by an en-
feebled, vitiated state
of the blood, wherein
that fluid becomes incompetent to sustain
the vital forces in their
vigorous action, and
leaves the system to
fall into disorder and
decay. The scrofulous
contamination is variously caused by mercurial
disease, low living, disordered digestion, immoderate food, impure air, filth and filthy habits, the depressing vices, and, above all,
by the venereal infection. Whatever be its origin,
it is hereditary in the constitution, descending
from parents to children into the third and fourth generation; indeed, it seems to be the root of him who says, "I will visit the iniquities of the fathers upon their children." The disease which it originates takes various names,
according to the organs it attacks. In the lungs, Scrofula produces tuberculosis, and finally Consumption; in the glands, swellings which
suppurate and become ulcerous sores; in the stomach and bowels, dyspepsia, which produces indigestion, dyspepsia, and liver complaints, on the skin, eruptive and cutaneous
affections. These all having the same origin,
require the same remedy, viz, purification and
invigoration of the blood. Purify the blood,
and these dangerous distempers leave you.
With feeble, foul, or corrupted blood, you can-
not have health; with that "life of the flesh"
healthy, you cannot have scrofulous disease.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

is compounded from the most effectual antidotes that medicine science has discovered for
this afflicting distemper, and for the cure of the
disorders it entails. That it is far superior to any other remedy yet devised, is known by all
who have given it a trial. That it does combine virtues truly extraordinary in their effect
upon this class of complaints, is indisputably
proven by the great number of patients known and remarkable cures it has made of the following diseases: King's Evil or Glandular Swellings, Tumors, Erup-
tions, Pimples, Blotches and Sores, Ery-
sipelas, Rose or St. Anthony's Fire, Salt
Rheum, Scald Head, Coughs from tu-
berculous deposits in the lungs, White
Swellings, Debility, Dropsy, Neuralgia,
Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Syphilis and Syphilitic Infections, Mercurial Diseases,
Female Weaknesses, and, indeed, the whole
series of complaints that arise from impurity
of the blood. Minute reports of individual cures may be found in Ayer's Sarsaparilla
ALMANAC, which is furnished to the druggists
for gratuitous distribution, wherein may be
learned the directions for its use, and some of
the remarkable cures which it has made when
all other remedies have failed to afford relief.
Those cases are purposely taken from all sections of the country, in order that every reader
may have access to some one who can speak to
him of its benefits from personal experience.
Scrofula depresses the vital energies, and thus
leaves its victims far more subject to disease
and its fatal results than are healthy constitutions. Hence it tends to shorten, and does
greatly shorten, the average duration of human
life. The vast importance of these considerations has led us to spend years in perfecting a remedy which is adequate to its cure. This we now offer to the public under the name of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, although it is composed of ingredients, some of which exceed the best of Sarsaparilla in alterative power. By
its aid you may protect yourself from the suffering and danger of these disorders. Purge out the foul corruptions from the blood, and the blood; purge out the cause of disease, and
vigorous health will follow. By its peculiar
virtues this remedy stimulates the vital functions, and thus expels the distempers which
lurk within the system or burst out on any
part of it.

We know the public have been deceived by
many compounds of Sarsaparilla, that promised
much and did nothing; but they will neither be
deceived nor disappointed in this. Its virtues
have been proven by abundant trial, and there
remains no question of its surpassing excellence
for the cure of the afflicting diseases it is intended to reach. Although under the same
name, it is a very different medicine from any
other which has been before the people, and is
far more effectual than any other which has
ever been available to them.

For the Patriot

Our Country Calls.

BY F. M. ADLINGTON—WEYMOUTH.

Our Country calls: To Arms! to arms!

Unsheath her battle blade;

The vaulting foe around us swarms,

Let not our laurels fade.

Our gallant youth their country's shield,

Array'd in martial guise,

Are must'ring on the battle field,

To win the victor's prize.

Now sound the charge, the bugles blow—

Awake our battle cry,

And like a tempest on the foe,

On—on, to do or die.

No coward hearts are wanted here,

No half unwilling aid,

No blunted sword or pointless spear

Beneath our flag array'd.

But stern eye'd justice to consume

The basely purg'd foe;

To write in blood the Traitor's doom,

Woe to the traitors—woe.

Our brothers' blood for vengeance calls,

Their wrongs our bosoms fill,

And till the last arm'd traitor falls

Drive deep the crimson'd steel.

Let no insulting banner wave,

Upheld by rebel hand;

Nor let the footsteps of a slave

Make discord in our land.

Scraps.

STEWED LOBSTER. Cut the meat into nice bite, and warm it in a little good gravy; season with salt, mace, and a little cayenne;

thicken with flour and butter, and a little

anchovy sauce; dish neatly up with sippets

of toast round it.

GINGER NUTS. Three pounds of flour,

one of sugar, one of butter, one pint of molasses,

and one-fourth of a pound of ginger.

his intention, ere he will find it to be corroded by unjust gains. If our heart does not the wealth we obtain will soon corrupt our

affections.

Miscellaneous.

An Unprotected Female.

You are not afraid to go alone?

The young speaker was a young man, who stood on the platform of a railway station, and he addressed a young girl beside him, whose

neat gray dress and little satchel proclaimed

the traveller.

It is too bad, he added, for the Walters to disappoint you at the last moment. Perhaps to-morrow—

Oh, no! to-morrow won't do, Nat! Leonie is to be married on Wednesday, and I must start to-day. Mrs. Walters could not help

the baby's sickness, and I am not afraid.

You will have to ride all night.

Never mind! No American ever annoys an unprotected female. I must get into the cars.

Mr. Ralph Howell very unwillingly gave him arm to his sister, led her to a seat, bade

her good-by, and sprang off, just as the train started.

After all, thought Miss Nettie, as she arranged her shawl on the back of the seat,

it is not so bad! The train reaches Rosehill at day-break, and there is sure to be some one to meet me. It is now four o'clock, and as soon as it is dark, I can put on my nuba and go to sleep. And, having reached this conclusion, Miss Nettie looked up to see what part of the country they were riding through.

The cars were very much crowded, for it was October. All the seats were filled, except the one beside Nettie; yet there was only one person standing in the car. It was a gentleman, who leaned against the door, and looked out, over Nettie's head, and out of Nettie's window. She hesitated for a moment—for the gentleman was young and

handsome—but another glance at his frank,

honest face decided her; and, with a dignified bow, she offered him the place. He thanked her, and accepted her offer.

Having done her duty, Nettie took from her satchel a book and began to read, while her companion, from behind his newspaper, studied her face. He saw the rare but beautiful combination of very fair curls and large

black eyes with black eyebrows and lashes, a pure blonde complexion, and a small, slight figure. She read for a few moments; and then, seeing that her companion had put away his paper, she said, in a quiet, lady-

like tone that would have completely disar-

mored either impertinence or misconstruction:

I have the magazines of the month, which my brother handed me as we started. They are at your service, if you have no book.

I can cut the leaves for you, he said.

Thank you!

The darkness gathered, and the conductor

lighted lamps enough to make it "visible;"

but not, by any means, enough to allow anything else to share the privilege. Reading, of course was at an end, and the cold was making itself felt as the cars sped forward.

Nettie put up her hand for her shawl. In an instant it was taken from her.

Stand up, and let me put it on for you,

said the gentleman beside her. Are you going to ride all night? Because, if you wish to wake at any particular time, I will call you.

I ride to Rosehill.

We reach there at six in the morning. I am going there too.

Yes! There was an accent of interest in Nettie's voice.

Yes! I am on my way to act as groom-man at a wedding.

Miss Simmons! It slipped out before

Nettie was aware of it.

Yes. I am first groomsmen to my friend,

Dick Ross.

And I am going there to be first bridesmaid. You are Dr. Holman?

And you Miss Howell, of course! How glad I am to be able to do what I have been longing for this last three hours!

And that?

Offer you my assistance; for I see you are alone.

Yes. Ralph was horrified at my starting unprotected. But my escorts, Mr. and Mrs.

Walters, were unexpectedly detained by the illness of their child, and sent word to the depot. I was not afraid; so I made fun of Ralph's scruples and started alone. It was too late to turn back and ask mother or father.

The approaching wedding was a good subject for opening the conversation, and the travellers chatted pleasantly for two or three hours. Then, in a pause of the talk, the car

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, June 27th, 1863.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

A MUSICAL TREAT. Some of our enterprising citizens have interested themselves in making arrangements, whereby our people are to enjoy the benefits of good music—free as air—during the summer season. The services of the Quincy Brass Band—Francis P. Lott, Leader—have been engaged, a stand for their accommodation erected round the flag staff, in the Square, where two evenings in each week they will discourse some of their best music. The idea is in harmony with the feelings of the community, and the attraction no doubt will draw crowds of visitors.

A BARGAIN. The beautiful piece of land with the buildings thereon, known as the Glover Estate on Sea Street, adjoining the premises of Joseph Brigham, Esq., in this town, was sold at auction, on Tuesday last. Mr. John W. Hall bid it off at $2,100.

ACCIDENT. We are sorry to learn that Mr. N. H. Eaton met with a serious accident on Thursday morning last. It seems he went to a field some distance from his residence, with his mowing machine to cut the grass. Finding some of the harness not as it should be, he got from his machine to fix it, and stepped on a round stone, which threw him to the ground, spraining his ankle badly. He was unable to move, and being alone was obliged to lay some time in a painful condition, before he was found. He was carried to his residence, and Dr. Jas. A. Steison dressed it. He is comfortable as can be expected.

HYMENEAL VISIT. Mr. Lewis Bass and lady received a friendly visit from the Quincy Brass Band, on Thursday evening last. They soon made their business known by rich strains of music. During the performance of the first piece, the venerable gentleman made his appearance—not on the balcony—but at the door, and gave them a hearty welcome and invited them in—where a table loaded with all that heart could desire, or the willing hands of the good wife and her beautiful daughters could prepare was set before them, of which they were invited to partake. Mr. Bass was in excellent spirits, and wore his honors most gracefully. After the entertainment, the Band discoursed some excellent music, and then retired, well-pleased with their visit, wishing the happy couple a long life of unclouded felicity, and the family all earthly prosperity.

AN EXCITEMENT. The quiet of our community was disturbed one day last week by the report of the arrest of a man for political transgressions—the unceremonious freedom of speech, and irreverently spelling "Father Abraham's" name with a little (a). On trial, however, it came out, that the charge which led to the arrest, was desertion, and not treasonable language. It appeared that a person in the employ of Mr. Whitcher, boot maker, on School street, who hails from Salem, enlisted some twelve months since, in the Union army, and subsequently received an honorable discharge. That a certain busy-body, intent on mischief or the hope of reward, had entered the above complaint, which was a cause of much inconvenience to the unoffending man—subjecting him to the expense of a journey to Salem, the loss of two or three days' time, and the depletion of quite a pile of legal tender notes.

THE PANIC IN PITTSBURG. Where the Gold Is! The advance of the rebels has developed one fact which has been a mystery to the people for some time, viz: what has become of the gold coin? Fearing an attack, the bankers and others of Pittsburg thought it prudent to remove their coin, and the American Express Company delivered in Clearland on the 15th, $15,000,000 in gold, and on the succeeding day $7,000,000 more, of which $650,000 was also in gold.

AERATED BREAD. We take pleasure in laying before our readers the letter of the Manager of the Boston Aerated Bread Company. We only wish we could lay before them also some of the Aerated Bread, now on our table—unparalleled as it is in quality. Having perused the Company's printed circular, we find it receives the very highest commendations from men of science and art, in many cities of this country and Europe. The Company's advertisement, also in another column, will repay a perusal. There is a fine opening for some enterprising person in this town to engage daily supplies of this bread to be sold here at families.

STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING. A special meeting of the stockholders of the Hingham and Quincy Turnpike Corporation takes place on the 15th of next month. Those interested will find an advertisement in another column.

IN LOCK. Our esteemed friend, J. Alba Davis, has been presented with a fine tortoise by some of the wealthy citizens of Jamaica Plain. He seems to be one of the people's favorites wherever he goes.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, JUNE 25, 1863.

BUSINESS MATTERS.

June has been a quiet month for business. Money plenty, and the market scarce of good commercial paper. The banks fail to get their supply of good paper, but find employment for their surplus funds in collateral loans and the buying up of public securities; the interest being payable in gold; stocks are bought and sold freely; the sellers often realizing handsome profits. Gold, is like the weather-vane, constantly fluctuating with every wind. The decline in the prices of dry goods continue—so with many articles of food, particularly breadstuffs—good quality of flour quoted at seven dollars—glad of it. Many people are leaving the city to pass the summer months in the rural districts, and trade will be very limited until the approach of autumn. The industrial classes continue to realize great wages; a good sign that the country is not ruined yet.

THE SITUATION.

Hard to define; a crisis for weal or for woe evidently drawing near. The week has not been without deep anxiety for the fate of the Nation. While we have cheering news from General Banks of his progress at Port Hudson and from General Grant to the 18th instant, that the siege of Vicksburg will soon end in the fall of that ill-fated city, matters do not look so well around Washington as we could have wished and should have expected. The army of Lee is pressing hard on that of Hooker, and should a general battle ensue, the result is doubtful. With the defeat of General Hooker's grand army, which God forbid—Washington falls a prey to the rebel forces—and then where are we? The rebel invasion in Pennsylvania, has broken out anew, since my last; the enemy is in the western part of that State—large in numbers—doing immense mischief with indiscriminate plunder. While things look equally with the army of the Potomac, and the rebel raid is rampant in the Key Stone State, we have news to-day from that far-off region, Cape Cod, about two and a half hours ride from Boston, that seventeen vessels have been destroyed near the tip end of Cape Cod, since the 12th instant, by a dare-devil pirate craft, called the Taconey, a small vessel with one gun. The depredations of this buccaneer upon the eastern shores of Massachusetts, should lead to the most prompt and speedy measures for her capture. If taken, hang her commander by the yard arm, and try him by court martial afterwards. Despatches have been received in Boston from the Government at Washington, authorizing the fitting out of vessels on private account for the purpose of capturing our illustrious visitor, the bark Taconey. The same to be under the superintendence of the Commandant of the Charlestown Navy Yard. The plan is to equip our fastest sailing vessels, the officer in command to be temporarily commissioned by the Government, that these vessels cruise along the coast at the cost of the owners, relying on the underwriters to pay them if lucky enough to catch the piratical craft. The underwriters here, who are generally solid men, have the matter under advisement this afternoon. I close this hastily written letter, with the settled conviction that we are on the tapis of events that will materially affect the destinies of our beloved country. And now let us in good truth stand by the flag—danger is near.

For the Patriot.
Temperance.

To the Publisher of the Patriot:

In glancing over the columns of your valuable and useful paper, I was pleased with your brief but pertinent remarks last week on "Quincy Morale." The philanthropist and Christian, looking at the subject of temperance, cannot fail to recognize the imperative necessity of creating and perpetuating a public sentiment, which shall not only give us a strong prohibitory law, but also impart force and significance to its penal sanctions. You say very properly that temperance is "the stepping-stone to all kinds of vice." What, then, is our duty? The pulpit, the press, and private example, are to form a public sentiment, which at the polls and in our legislative halls, is to combat this evil. We are to diffuse, especially among the young, correct principles on this subject. My own observations, both in this, and in foreign countries, have taught me to loathe as the most degrading slavery, that of Rum and Tobacco—the Bottle and the Pipe. The poverty, idleness, degradation and woe, which result from this twin progeny, are utterly measureless.

We are glad to believe that the Patriot is true on the temperance question. You have certainly expressed the sentiments which I hear from a large number of our prominent citizens—and I am permitted to say, you have their hearty co-operation. For we are fully persuaded, that no friend of humanity and good order, can stand an uninterested spectator, in the progress of this most noble and patriotic of reforms. A SUBSCRIBER.

Quincy, June 23d, 1863.

LUNCH. There will be a free lunch at the Mariposa Saloon this evening.

New Postage Law.

The following are some of the provisions of the "new Postage Law" which goes into effect July 1, 1863.

Letter Postage throughout the United States on letters not exceeding one half ounce in weight, three cents; the Pacific rate of ten cents is abolished.

If Postage is only partly prepaid, the unpaid postage will be charged at double rates. Soldiers' and Naval Letters written by persons in service, by being plainly marked as such by the proper officer, will be forwarded and charged at single postage—if under half ounce—to be paid when delivered.

Letters deposited without pre-payment by stamp, if there is reason to believe the same to be by ignorance or accident, will be forwarded with double rate charged, to be collected on delivery. When the failure to prepay is evidently intentional, letters will be sent to the Dead Letter Office.

Drop Letters. Two cents for letters not exceeding one half ounce; additional postage for additional weight, to be, in all cases, prepaid by stamp.

Newspapers or Periodicals marked, or written upon, so as to give any other information than that contained in the print, or so enclosed, that they cannot be examined without destroying the wrapper, will be charged at the rate of three cents for each half ounce. Letters containing value, can be registered by pre-payment of postage, and a registration fee of twenty cents.

The Postage on transient and miscellaneous mailable matter, shall be two cents for each four ounces or fraction thereof. Double this rate shall be charged for books. The former rate of one cent for each separate newspaper or pamphlet is abolished.

The following Mail matter will be forwarded without pre-payment of postage, viz:

1. Matter lawfully franked.
2. Foreign letters which are regulated by special conventions.
3. Certain printed matter regularly issued, and sent to regular subscribers.

4. Letters from soldiers, sailors and mariners in the naval service, which are plainly and correctly marked as such.

All other Mail matter, as letters, newspapers, pamphlets, books, maps, prints, patterns, cards, seeds, &c., must invariably be pre-paid.

Also, all newspapers distributed in boxes, and box rents, must be paid one quarter in advance.

SECTION THIRD is as follows:

"No Mail matter shall be delivered by the Postmaster, until the postage due thereon shall have been paid, and no box at any Post Office shall be assigned to the use of any person, until the rent therefor has been paid for, at least one quarter."

The accompanying instruction says: "It will be observed that this Section absolutely prohibits the delivery of any letter, newspaper, pamphlet, or package whatever, until the postage charged thereon shall be paid. Postmasters must strictly conform to this."

Postage on newspapers and periodicals, not exceeding four ounces in weight, delivered to regular subscribers, will be as follows, in advance:

Daily, per quarter,	35 cents.
Six times a week,	30 cents.
Tri weekly,	15 cents.
Semi-weekly,	10 cents.
Weekly,	5 cents.
Monthly,	3 cents.
Quarterly,	1 cent.

Office Boston Aerated Bread Co., 1010 Washington St. Boston, June 18th.
To the Publisher of the Patriot—

I desire to make a brief statement through your columns to the people of Quincy. On the 13th of May, Mr. Abbott purchased between two and three hundred loaves of damaged bread of us, with the avowed purpose and promise, to sell it to a class of trade who bought stale and damaged bread at a discount. It had not been our intention to sell it, and we had declined all offers for it before, but the above person persuaded us to dispose of it. He paid two and a half cents per loaf, agreed to sell it at three, and as above stated. The bread was five days old when he bought it, and would have been sold by us to our customers while fresh, but for his lack of uniformity of shape. It was good and wholesome when it left our place.

By the report of our distributor who visited Quincy, I learn that the above person sold the bread as standard Aerated Bread, from Boston and charged five cents per loaf. This was entirely wrong and unauthorized. Desiring an explanation, I wrote requesting him to call. Not hearing from him, I deem it an act of justice to the people of Quincy as well as ourselves, to make this statement. We issue no bread but that of the very first quality, and shall, as soon as our crowded facilities will permit, afford our many friends and the public of your place, ample opportunity to judge of our manufacture.

Our advertisement in another column will show the true qualities of the bread in regularly issue.

Your obedient servant.

S. T. BACON, Manager.

Mr. HEATH will preach by request next Sunday afternoon, upon "The Safe Side in Religion."

SENTENCED. It will be remembered that in March last, a tragedy occurred in Hingham. Mr. Asa F. Souther under the influence of jealous passion, on account of the alleged infidelity of his wife, shot a young man named Gay Richardson. At the term of the Superior Court held in Plymouth, Mr. Souther, who had been indicted for manslaughter, plead guilty, and the Court, on account of the peculiar circumstances under which the offence was committed, and the mental distress and excitement of the defendant and the great provocation, imposed a sentence of one year's imprisonment in the House of Correction and a fine of $100.

THE FOURTH REGIMENT. The 6th of June was the time fixed for the departure of the regiment for home, but they to a man gallantly volunteered to leave Brashear city and go to the aid of General Banks at Port Hudson. Thus the fortunes of war may detain them some time. This regiment had already served in the three months campaign, and again returned under its former Adjutant, now Col. Walker.

CARVER'S ICE CREAM SALOON. Don't forget to call. He is always at home and happy to receive visitors. Mr. Carver is a connoisseur in such matters; a regular M. D., whose prescriptions once taken are sure to be repeated. With the thermometer at eighty, ninety, or even an hundred, we require the counteracting influence of such an agent, or we might dissolve and be lost to society forever. Keep cool, and be temperate, are wholesome maxims, in every one's mouth; their influence is of easy application, by calling at Carver's and imbibing one of his cooling and refreshing creams.

SONS OF TEMPERANCE. The Norfolk County Union held their quarterly session at the first Orthodox Church at East Randolph, on the 25th inst. The various divisions of the County were very fully represented, and the reports of the same generally encouraging. Too much credit can not be given to the ladies of East Randolph for the admirable manner in which their part was performed, and at twelve o'clock we sat down to overflowing tables, generously spread by the friends of the cause in the place. Every thing passed off pleasantly. Music, speaking, &c., combined, made the convention a complete success. At a quarter of five o'clock P. M. the Union adjourned.

EARLY FRUIT. We were made the recipient a few days since of a fine box of strawberries from the garden of our neighbor, Mr. H. G. Whiting, on Cross street. They were an excellent kind—large and of delicious flavor, and came to us in the peculiar manner of Mr. W.—fresh and as far as when first taken from the vines. There was one among them which was a monster in size; but we forbore entering into particulars at this time, as it might provoke a controversy with our old friend at Bridgewater; it is sufficient to say, that we doubt whether it can be beat here, or elsewhere; or that a finer specimen of the fruit has been raised this season; if there has, we should like to see them. Mr. Whiting has gone largely into its culture, and we should suppose from the productiveness of his vines, he might supply all the wants of the community.

HARD TIMES COFFEE. We have received from the manufactory of "Coffee, Spice," etc., etc., of H. B. Newhall, Saugus, (Mass.), a choice invoice of the above-named articles. We have tested the qualities of the coffee to our satisfaction, and can cheerfully recommend it as an excellent substitute for the dearer kinds, or those which come from abroad. Dr. Hayes, State Assayer, has analyzed it, and pronounced it pure and free from any deleterious substances. Besides, it has numerous testimonials that speak in its favor, while those who wish to practise economy in these uncertain times, should take heed, and not fail to give it a trial.

Depot for the sale of the articles, 36 South Market street, Boston.

A NEW STATE IN THE UNION. On the 19th of June the new State of Western Virginia took her place beside the other States of the Union, the sixty days having expired since the President issued a proclamation announcing that the act of Congress admitting the new State should have full force and effect at the expiration of that time. On the Fourth of July next, in accordance with the requirements of a law of Congress, the National Flag will not be perfect unless thirty-five stars are emblazoned upon it.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLE DEPOT. The citizens of the Centre District will no longer be without such a resort. Mr. Arey, on Temple street, has made arrangements to have daily, all kinds of fresh vegetables, and every description of fruit as they come in. He will be furnished from one of the best gardens in the place. We have been luxuriating on some specimens, and cheerfully add our testimony. At this season of the year, the garden is an unfailing source from which the table may be furnished with the most healthy and palatable delicacies.

It is stated that no less than twenty-five new regiments are in process of organization in New York and rapidly filling up. The nine months' and two years' men are enlisting in large numbers.

INTERNATIONAL POSTAGE. A congress of delegates from nearly all the civilized governments is now sitting in Paris, for the purpose of establishing a general system of international postage. Mr. Kasson, Deputy Postmaster General, represents the United States. The object of the congress is to introduce, not only a uniform system of payment, but of weight and general postal legislation, and to turn to account, in the general correspondence between civilized nations, such improvements as have been found practicable and useful.

THE MONITORS. The editor of the Scientific American, who has examined the monitor Passaic, now undergoing repairs at New York, says the trial to which she was subjected during the attack on Charleston proves that our iron-clads are impregnable, and that we may safely defy all the English iron-clads and their armaments. The Whitworth shot, or fac similes of them, in a majority of cases struck sideways; they reached the turret in all possible positions and show very poor shooting on the part of the rebels. There is no indentation on the Passaic deeper than a tea saucer, and she was the most injured of the attacking fleet except the Keokuk, which was not a monitor.

DON'T BE IN A HURRY TO BUY YOUR COAL. We see by the papers that the coal dealers have advanced the price of this article to $9.50 per ton, and are doing their best to make the public believe the price will still further advance. We notice by the Philadelphia Public Ledger that there was received by the Reading Railroad up to the 4th of June, 1863, 1,420,000 tons. Same time last year, 897,000 tons. Showing an increase this year of 523,000 tons by this Road alone. The other Roads and Canals are showing a like increase, say 50 to 60 per cent. more than ever before. Coal without doubt will be $7.00 per ton or less, before the first of September next.

HARBOR DEFENCE. Government is progressing in its work of protecting the large and most important places on the coast. The forts in Boston harbor have about one hundred guns mounted inside their walls. The navy yard at Charlestown is also being looked after, and a battery of eight guns is being constructed in the rear of the signal battery. It is intended to mount six guns of ten-inch and perhaps larger calibre, the other two being of less size. This battery forms a part of the plan of harbor defence recently determined upon.

COLORS FOR THE MASS. 55TH. The colored women of Ohio have had a magnificent stand of colors made for the 55th Mass. (colored) regiment. The flags are four in number—two guidons, a large regulation flag and a regimental banner. These are all of the very best material, and the work is splendidly executed. Upon a silver shield, which is attached to the staff of the banner, is the motto, "God and Liberty." Upon the banner itself, which is of heavy blue silk, are the words, "Liberty or Death." They will be presented by Mr. J. M. Langston, who has been recruiting for the regiment.

"Light, Sweet, and Nutritious." THE BOSTON AERATED BREAD CO.

CALL the attention of an intelligent public to the NEW PROCESS OF BREAD MAKING, now in full and successful operation at 1010 Washington Street, cor. Concord, by which they have supplied to them an ABSOLUTELY PURE BREAD, made entirely by machinery, without the use of yeast, or any chemical or deleterious agent.

FERMENTATION destroys from TEN to FIFTEEN per cent. of the constituent or nutritious elements of the flour, and deteriorates the whole, by the chemical change necessary for the production of the "Carbonic Acid Gas," which is the agent that makes ALL bread light. Fermented Bread is often more or less sour, and always injurious to the digestive organs, while the process is so uncleanly as to disgust the taste.

UNFERMENTED BREAD.

"The finest and most nutritious preparation of the great staff of life which has ever been presented for human use."—(Dr. Samuel S. Grey, Brooklyn, N. Y.)

"Easy of Digestion, retaining its freshness and moisture longer than any other bread. To dyspeptics it is invaluable."—(Dr. T. W. Oslander.)

An Editor Wanted.

We have been without a paper
In our town a year or more;
Though we've had of printers plenty,
And of editors a score.
Some of them were "jam up" fellows,
Good at writing, good to plan;
But they all, without exception,
Failed in pleasing every man!

For this mighty sin we "shipped" them;
Now, we're sending forth a call
For an editor to join us
Who will write to please all;
Others need not ask for favor,
For of such we've had our fill:
We will need no applications
Save from those who fill the bill.

Well I mind the first among us—
He was by no means the worst—
But we didn't seem to like him.
Simply "cause—he was the first;
For, you know, it is the custom,
Just to sacrifice a few;

So we placed our heads upon him,
Ere we knew he could do.
Next there came a gifted fellow,
With a prepossessing way,
Who, but for a fatal blunder,
Would have doubtless, won the day:

Blank, a crafty village merchant,
Bought a "puff" to gain a "lift,"
'Twas offensive—other merchants
Sent the editor a-drift.

Next we sent a learned committee
To a man in Baltimore,
Whom we knew to be a writer,
Full of cunning, full of lore:
They solicited, he yielded,
Came, delighted young and old;

But he got in debt, and tumbled,
Leaving us "the bag to hold."
Then a host of others followed,
Lived a while, and passed away;
Leaving this, our thriving village,
Minus a press to-day;

Hence, we send this little notice,
Knowing that some fellow can Make a fortune here among us,
Just by—PLEASING EVERY MAN.

Under the Violets.

BY O. W. HOLMES.

Her hands are cold; her face is white;
No more her pulses come and go;
Her eyes are shut to light and light—
Fold the white vestures, snow on snow,
And lay her where the violets blow.

But not beneath a graven stone,
To plead for tears with alien eyes;
A slender cross of wood alone
Shall say that here a maiden lies
In peace beneath the peaceful skies.

And gray old trees of hugest limb
Shall wheel their circling shadows round
To make the scorching sunlight dim
That drops the greenness from the ground,
And drop their dead leaves on her mound.

When o'er their boughs the squirrels run,
And through their leaves the robins call,
And ripening in the autumn sun,
The acorns and the chestnuts fall,
Doubt not that she will heed them all.

For her the morning choir shall sing
In strains from the branches high,
And every minstrel voice of spring,
That trills beneath the April sky,
Shall greet her with its earliest cry.

When, turning round their dial track,
Eastward the lengthening shadows pass,
Her little crockets, clad in black,
The crickets, sliding through the grass,
Shall pipe for her an evening mass.

At last the rosettes of the trees
Shall find the prison where she lies,
And bear the buried dust they seize
In leaves and blossoms to the skies—
So may the soul that warmed it rise!

If any, born of kinder blood,
Should ask, What maiden lies below?
Say only this: A tender bud,
That tried to blossom in the snow,
Lies withered where the violets blow.

Anecdotes.

On a recent occasion an Irishman stood listening to Frederick Douglass, who was expatiating upon Government and Freedom, and as the orator came to a period of highest poetical heights, the Irishman said:—
Bedad, he speaks well for a nigger.

Only a half nigger, is he? Well, if a half nigger can talk in that style, I'm thinking a whole nigger might beat the prophet Jeremiah!

A rich merchant named Hogg once requested a person to bring him a load of corn in a stated time, which he failed to do, and did not take it until the next day after that which he had promised. The merchant, as might be expected, refused the corn.
Well, replied the wagoner, you are the first hog I ever knew to refuse corn.

Are you not afraid your wife will get married again when you die?
I hope she may, as there will be only me in the world who will know how to pity me.

What are you doing? said a father to his son, who was tinkering on an old watch.
Improving my time, was the witty rejoinder.

DR. LA CROIX'S
PRIVATE MEDICAL TREATISE
ON THE
Physiological View of Marriage.

250 PAGES AND 130 ENGRAVINGS. Price only TWENTY-FIVE CENTS. Sent free of postage to all parts of the Union.

On the infirmities of youth and maturity, disclosing the discursive follies of both sexes of all ages, causing debility, nervousness, depression of spirits, palpitation of the heart, suicidal imaginings, involuntary emissions, bluishings, defective memory, indigestion and lassitude, with confessions of thrilling interest of a Boarding School Miss, a College Student, and a Young Married Lady, &c.

It is a truthful adviser to the married and those contemplating marriage, who entertain secret doubts of their physical condition, and who are conscious of having hazarded the health, happiness and privileges to which every human being is entitled.

YOUNG MEN who are troubled with weakness, generally caused by a bad habit in youth, the effects of which are dizziness, pains, forgetfulness, sometimes a ringing in the ears, weak eyes, weakness of the back and lower extremities, confusion of ideas, loss of memory, with melancholy, may be cured by the author's NEW PARIS AND LONDON TREATISE.

We have recently devoted much of our time in VISITING THE EUROPEAN HOSPITALS, availing ourselves of the knowledge and researches of the most skilled physicians and Surgeons in Europe and the Continent. Those who place themselves under our care will now have the full benefit of the most NEW AND EFFICACIOUS REMEDIES which we are enabled to introduce into our practice, and the public may rest assured of the same zeal, assiduity, SECRECY and attention being paid to their cases, which has so successfully distinguished us heretofore as a Physician in our PECULIAR department of the Female Practice, for the past twenty-five years.

FRENCH FEMALE PILLS. Ladies who wish for medicines, the efficacy of which has been tested in thousands of cases, and never failed to effect speedy cures without any bad results will use none but Dr. De La Croix's Female Periodical Pills. The only precaution necessary to be observed is, ladies should not take them if they have reason to believe they are in certain situations (the particulars of which will be found in the wrapper accompanying each box,) though always safe and healthy, so gentle, yet so active are they.

Price $1 per box. They can be mailed to any part of the United States or Canada.

TO THE LADIES—Who need a confidential adviser, and who have paid heavy penalties for unskillful treatment, to which their delicate organization renders them liable, are particularly invited to consult us.

THE "ELECTRO-GALVANIC PROTECTIVE." For married ladies whose health will not admit of their having recourse to increase their families, may be obtained as above. It is a perfectly safe preventive to conception, and has been extensively used during the last 20 years. Price reduced to $10.

THE SECRETS OF YOUTH UNVEILED. A Treatise on the Cause of Premature Decay, a solemn warning. Just published, a book showing the insidious progress and prevalence among schools, (both male and female,) of this fatal habit, pointing out the fatality that invariably attends its victims, and detailing the whole progress of the disease, from the beginning to the end.

It will be sent by Mail on receipt of two [3] cent Stamps.

WM. GRAY, Esq.; I DEAR SIR—Two months ago, my head was almost bald, and the little hair I had was all grey, and falling out very fast, until I feared I should lose all. I commenced using your Hair Restorative, and it immediately stopped the hair falling off, and soon restored the color, and after using two bottles my hair is completely covered with a healthy growth of hair, and of the same color it was in early manhood. I take great pleasure in recommending your excellent Hair Restorative, and you also may refer any doubting persons to me.

These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which I add my testimony to that you publish of the medicinal virtues of your SASSAPARILLA. My daughter, aged ten, had a collecting humor in her ears, eyes, and hair for years, which we were unable to cure until we tried your SASSAPARILLA. She has been well since.

From Mrs. Jane E. Rice, a well known and much esteemed lady of Danvers, Mass., N. H. "I have suffered for a year past with a scrofulous eruption, which was very troublesome. Nothing afforded any relief until we tried your SASSAPARILLA, which soon completely cured her."

From Charles P. Gage, Esq., of the widely-known firm of Gage, Murray & Co., manufacturers of condensed milk, &c., &c., Boston.

"I had for several years a very troublesome humor in my face, which grew constantly worse until it disfigured my features and became an intolerable affliction. I tried almost everything a man could do to get rid of it, but without success. I then began to use your SASSAPARILLA. It immediately made my face worse, as you told me it might, but I persevered, and in a few days the eruption began to subside, and in a few more days it was entirely gone. I am now as well as ever, and I am without any symptoms of the disease that I suffered from. I enjoy perfect health, and without a doubt owe it to your SASSAPARILLA."

From Mrs. J. Gage, Esq., of the widely-known firm of Gage, Murray & Co., manufacturers of condensed milk, &c., &c., Boston.
